GOP Labor Plank Sop To Meany

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — White House agents succeeded Saturday in killing a conservative-backed, Republican platform endorsement of "right-to-work" laws, which AFL-CIO President George Meany has cited in withholding support from George S. McGovern.

Instead, during a heavily guarded 17-hour session that ended at nearly 2 a.m., the GOP Platform Committee approved a draft plank simply praising organized labor as the "cornerstone" of America's free enterprise system.

Omitted by the 108-member committee, reportedly at the insistence of high administration officials who flew down from Washington, was any mention of "right-to-work" legislation.

These laws, vigorously opposed by Meany as anti-union, were clearly endorsed in the party's 1968 platform on which President Nixon won a narrow election victory over Hubert H. Humphrey four years ago, against labor's determined opposition.

The White House obviously sought to avoid waving a red flag this year at Meany and the AFL-CIO Executive Council, which are sitting out the 1972 presidential campaign. Meany has criticized McGovern, the Democratic nominee, for a Senate vote during the Johnson administration interpreted as opposing repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act which authorizes states to outlaw labor contract requirements that employes belong to a union.

One of the conservative committee members, Ernest L. Wilkinson of Provo, Utah, said the platform's omission of a right-to-work endorsement was "a political decision" contrary to sentiments of most delegates.

Another conservative, who requested anonymity, said that "despite all the insults that George Meany gave Nixon when he came to Florida," for the AFL-CIO convention last winter, "they (the White House) wanted us to turn the other cheek. I'd turn the other cheek all right, but it wouldn't be on my face."

Among the White House operatives on hand for the final platform writing were Bryce Harlow, a Washington lobbyist and former Nixon liaison man with Congress, and John D. Ehrlichman, the President's counselor for domestic affairs who conceded Friday he was "a little ... right" about a right-to-work plank.

Sources close to the Platform Committee's deliberations on the fourth floor of the Fontainebleau Hotel reported that the White House gave in to a drive by committee women led by Rep. Margaret Hechler, R-Mass., to have the platform endorse day care centers for children of working mothers.

The original White House approved platform language said "we emphatically oppose massive federal spending" for day care, a Democratic feature of an appropriations bill which Nixon, complaining of a threat to family life, vetoed last year.

But the committee, sources said, overcame White House

Longshoremen, Teamo Merger?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The West Coast longshoremen's union announced yesterday agreement on "a proposal of merger" with the Teamsters Union, the largest independent labor union in the United States.

Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (ILWU), said a final decision to merge with the Teamsters would rest with the 15,000 members who man the docks on the West Coast and in Hawaii.

Bridges said merger proposal was begun because the ILWU was not "getting any stronger" due to technology and other changes in waterfront operations.

ART INSIDE THE WALLS

The Peter Bekey family of Terra Linda examine their purchases at the 18th Annual San Quentin Art Show and Sale, held today. The Bekeys were among approximately 5,000 persons who had thronged to the prison by 11 a.m. to view and purchase inmate paintings, crafts, leather work and jewelry. Prison officials said approximately $10,000 in items had been sold by noon. The Bekeys, shown here with children Richie, in his mother's arms, Lint, standing, and Kim, seated, say they attend every San Quentin show and always buy four or five paintings. COUNCILMAN'S STAND

Laughlin Won't Join The Army

Stephen Laughlin, 24-year-old Cotati city councilman, has refused induction into the Army on moral grounds and vows to go to jail rather than enter the service.

Laughlin said yesterday he submitted to two days of preinduction physicals and testing at the Oakland Induction Center last month but refused to step forward to take the oath and be inducted.

"My reasons are on moral grounds," Laughlin said. The councilman, elected in April, said he has long opposed the Vietnam war, pushing antiwar resolutions through the city council and writing letters to President Nixon objecting to the war.

"I probably could have worked at it and done something to my body (deliberately injure himself), but I didn't feel I should ruin myself for the Army," he said. He did not seek conscientious objector status.

Joseph Reeves of the U.S. attorney's office in San Francisco said yesterday that Laughlin has not yet been reported by the Army as a draft violator. He said when a report is received, his office will conduct an investigation to determine if the matter should be submitted to a federal grand jury for possible indictment.

Reeves said the process may take a long time since a staff of three attorneys normally handles between 400 and 600 draft cases a year.

Laughlin said he lost his student deferment when he entered graduate school at Sonoma State College. At that time deferments were extended only to undergraduate students. An appeal by Laughlin to have the status restored was denied by his selective service board in Sonoma County.

Laughlin said he originally was notified to appear for induction more than a year ago, but merely ignored that and subsequent notices.

"Last month I noticed two men following me around town in a car and a few days later they turned up at my house and I knew for sure they were FBI agents," he said. "The agents told me I'd better show up or they would escort me there."

Laughlin said that after the physical testing program was completed he was separated

The Metric System Has Senate Nod

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate has pushed the United States along the historic first step to adoption of the metric system of weights and measures.

The United States is the only major nation that uses pounds, quarts and inches as official measures. Under the Senate bill, weights would be determined in kilograms, liquids in liters and distances in meters.

The bill passed by the Senate Friday and headed for the House would spread the conversion over a 10-year period.

Recommended in 1971 after a three-year Commerce Department study, the legislation declares that the metric system should be the predominant, but not the exclusive system of measurement in the United States.

It would establish an 11-member National Metric Conversion Board to prepare within 18 months a plan for conversion, and declare as federal policy that government procurement practices will be used to encourage use of the metric system.

The Senate Commerce Committee, which managed the bill, said that 11 per cent of the country's economy is already on the metric system, primarily in medical, engineering, drug, military and scientific fields.

The only other countries in the world not on the metric system or committed to making the change are Barbados, Gambia, Ghana, Liberia, Muscat and Oman, Sierra Leone, Southern Yemen, Tonga and Trinidad.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said the conversion would "enable United States industry to compete more effectively overseas, since every other industrialized country in the world uses metric measurements."

Allies Rip Massed Quang Tri Tanks

29 Enemy Vehicles Lost In Attacks

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnamese troops marked the 27th anniversary of Ho Chi Minh's takeover of Hanoi by attempting Saturday to move up masses of tanks to the Quang Tri city front but allied troops and planes knocked out at least 29 of them, military spokesmen said.

Heavy fighting also erupted in the Que Son valley, 25 miles southwest of Da Nang, and in the Mekong Delta below Saigon, where a high-ranking U. S. millitary adviser was wounded when his helicopter was hit by gunfire.

In the Quang Tri city fighting, South Vietnamese Marines killed 17 members of a North Vietnamese platoon (32 men at full strength) during a probing attack. The marines found several of the bodies had been tattooed with the words, "Born in the north to die in the south," UPI reporter Ted Kurrus said.

Kurrus said South Vietnamese Dragonfly jet bombers knocked out eight of 12 North Vietnamese tanks spotted Saturday two miles west of Quang Tri city. On Friday, South Vietnamese planes knocked out 11 tanks south of Quang Tri city, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman said seven other North Vietnamese tanks were knocked out by U.S. planes Friday and Saturday within 10 miles of Quang Tri, while South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers destroyed three others in the same area.

It was the biggest tank kill since the start of the South Vietnamese counter-offensive in Quang Tri province June 28. It coincided with the anniversary of the August day in 1945 when the late President Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh forces entered Hanoi following the defeat of the Japanese in World War II.

The U. S. command reported Saturday a second American plane—a U.S. Navy A7 Corsair II attack bomber—was shot down during the massive 370 tactical air strikes against North Vietnam Wednesday. The North Vietnamese had claimed that five American planes were destroyed. Earlier, the U.S. command had reported a Navy F4 Phantom destroyed during the raids.

Both planes were shot down by SAM2 antiaircraft missiles. All three crewmen were listed as missing. It brought to 24 the number of American planes downed by SAM2 missiles during the current North Vietnamese offensive.

The U.S. command also reported that a U.S. Army AH1 helicopter made a forced landing Friday after being hit by ground fire 47 miles northwest of Qui Nhon in the coastal highlands. One crewman was wounded, military spokesmen said.

UPI reporter Matt Franjola said that a South Vietnamese Air Force CH47 Chinook helicopter went out of control and crashed while taking off from the Kontum city airport in the Central Highlands late Saturday. The crew and an unknown number of refugees were killed, Franjola said, when the helicopter burned on impact.

The helicopter was one of a dozen Vietnamese and American choppers ferrying refugees from the border ranger camp at Ben Het, about 25 miles northwest of Kontum. Most of the approximately 50 refugees aboard left the helicopter when it landed to refuel but a number were still aboard, Franjola said.

UPI photographer Willie Vicoy reported that Highway 4 remained blocked for the sec-

Hijack Ends With Shooting

SEATTLE (UPI)—An FBI agent Friday night shot and wounded a hijacker who 13 hours earlier rode a bicycle with a rifle strapped to the handlebars across the Reno, Nev. airport, commandeered a Boeing 727 jetliner and demanded a $2 million ransom.

The FBI identified the captured suspect as Frank Markoe Sibley Jr., 43, of Stateline Village, Nev., a Lake Tahoe community near Reno.

Sibley was rushed to a private room at King County hospital where he was questioned by FBI agents.

FBI agents, posing as a relief crew, sneaked a pistol aboard the United Air Lines jet on a runway at Seattle-Tacoma Airport to thwart the biggest eftortion attempt in U.S. airline history.

Less than $1 million of the ransom was collected because the airline could not come up with the full amount. He also received 15 gold bricks.

The salt and pepper haired, middle-age hijacker was shot in the back, neck and leg. The wounds did not appear serious. The man was conscious and talking as he was carried away on a stretcher.

The gunman claimed he was part of a paramilitary organization opposed to the Vietnam war which was involved in a conspiracy to blow up United planes unless the war is ended.

The hijacker took off with three crewmen from Reno after releasing 25 passengers and stewardesses and flew to Vancouver, B.C. He had gotten to the plane at Reno by riding a bicycle across the air field to the parked jet and ran aboard with his rifle.

While at the Vancouver airport the hijacker demanded three tommy guns, three pistols and three holsters. None of the items was delivered but he got some of the money at Vancouver and 15 pounds of gold. More money was taken aboard at Seattle.

The plane was on the runway in Seattle for six hgurs and FBI agents hid under the aircraft waiting for an opportunity to move in.

The hijacker made a statement over Seattle radio station KVI in which he said he was part of a paramilitary group.

"If the so-called hijacked aircraft is destroyed by our members due to an attack, we will avenge the sacrifice by destroying your fleet one by one until passengers will no longer ride with you," he said in the broadcast.

Two FBI agents from Portland, Ore., were driven to the plane on a forklift truck. Both men are licensed pilots and were posing as the relief crew.

While the two men stripped off their airline uniforms at the hijacker's demand, a third agent worked his way to the front of the plane's belly where he lifted a pistol on a pole to one of the regular crew in the cockpit.

The agents, after putting their clothes back on, entered the cockpit. A crewman then passed the weapon to one of them who shot the suspect.

The man was caught "totally by surprise," said FBI agent Joe O'Connell, and did not have a chance to fire the rifle.

"We had a general plan to move in when we were assured the crew was safe as possible," O'Connell said.

Busy Congress Recesses; 'Tidy-Up' Session Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congress has recessed for two weeks leaving behind so much unfinished business that some members were gloomily predicting a post election session to tidy up the loose ends.

Both houses adjourned yesterday so Republican leaders could attend their national convention and other members could campaign for the fall elections. Congress reconvenes Sept. 5.

The target date for final adjournment was Oct. 7 or at the latest Oct. 14. But many members concede that so much remains to be done that a lame duck session may be needed.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., jammed the Senate calendar yesterday by introducing a little-used parliamentary tactic in hopes of forcing swift floor consideration of the House-passed antibusing bill.

The strong antibusing measure, approved by the House on a 282-102 roll call vote early Friday, was sent to the Senate several hours later. Allen threatened to block the recess until he was assured the bill would not be sent to the Labor and Public Welfare Committee where antibusing forces said it would be killed.

The measure would ban court ordered cross-town busing of any student and allow for the reopening of old desegregation orders that do not comply with the bill's guidelines.

The Senate began debate on a $34.8 billion revenue-sharing bill which would allow states, and localities to share a portion of federal income tax revenues on a no-strings attached basis. The House has overwhelmingly passed a similar measure.

In other Congressional action:

—The House approved a bill to liberalize government export controls on U.S. products which are available to Communist countries from other Western sources.

—The Senate gave final congressional approval to legislation that would set aside the new eligibility regulations for the guaranteed student-loan program.

—The Senate approved by voice vote a bill to extend a government loan guarantee program for small airlines and triple the amount any one carrier may borrow under it.

Lopsided House Support To U.S., Russia N-Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) —With only seven members voting "No," the House yesterday approved an interim agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to limit offensive nuclear weapons.

Among those voting against the Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) agreement were the American Independent Party's presidential candidate, John G. Schmitz, R-Calif., and John M. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who unsuccessfully tried to wrest the GOP nomination from President Nixon.

The lopsided 329-7 roll call vote Friday came in spite of widespread criticism from House members about "loopholes" and "dangers."

The agreement, signed in Moscow May 26 by President Nixon and Chairman Leonid Brezhnev, is bogged down in the Senate which has been tied down by debate over whether the United States came out on the short end of the pact.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., charging that the Russians lied about the number of their ballistic missile-carrying submarines, has introduced an amendment urging the President to seek "equality" with the Russians in the second round of SALT talks this fall.

The agreement must be passed by a majority of both Houses before it takes effect.

The Jackson amendment figured in the House debate Friday.

Chairman Thomas E. Morgan of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said under prodding that he would be "sympathetic" to the Jackson amendment if it is included in the Senate bill and the two Houses go to conference to reach a compromise

All-Out Police Crackdown On N.Y. Mafia Ordered

NEW YORK (UPI)—All policemen in the nation's largest city have been ordered to survey the home, work and social lives of all underworld figures in an effort to put an end a year-long Mafia war.

The order by Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy Friday came one day after Mayor John V. Lindsay, angered at the fatal shootings of two businessmen mistaken for gangsters, ordered the Police Department to "make it impossible for the mob to do business in this city."

"The city and the Police Department are declaring allout war against organized crime," Murphy told a news conference. "We want to alert the whole community — the churches, the schools, the citizens groups—about this terrible menace within our midst."

Each of the 31,000 policemen on the force was ordered to follow and report daily on the movements of "those mobsters who wear $500 suits and drive $15,000 cars—and who are savages," Murphy said.

He said he hoped soon to see some results of the constant surveillance.

Lindsay said Thursday that, as part of his attempt to drive the mob from the city, he was accepting a police recommendation to make public a list of businesses in which the Mafia has a financial interest.

Ira Glasser, head of the New York Civil Liberties Union, said this was a scatter-gun approach that could incriminate innocent people.

Since Joseph A. Colombo Sr. was shot in the head last summer, there have been about 25 underworld slayings in New York. The killing grew more frequent five months ago after the fatal shooting of Joseph "Crazy Joe" Gallo. He was a leader of a crime family which was a rival of Colombo.

Two meat company executives were fatally shot Aug. 11 and two others wounded in a restaurant. Police said they had been mistaken by a hired, out-of-town gunman for organized crime figures who had just left the seats the businessmen were in.

McGovern: It Was An Up, Down Week

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. George S. McGovern has completed a four-day campaign swing through the Midwest, which he admits was less successful than expected.

It was "a week of ups and downs but on balance a plus," said McGovern before boarding a plane in Milwaukee for the return trip to Washington.

His advisers were more blunt saying that the only achievement was filming for commercials that will be shown on television this fall.

McGovern acknowledged that a midweek mixup—in which he first denied and then confirmed that Pierre Salinger had been acting as his emissary to North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris —had not helped him. He said he would be "more cautious" in his future communications.

McGovern spent much of the week defending himself against White House and Republican National Committee charges.

"They're shooting at me from all sides," he said. "...The strategy is to keep 15 people taking potshots at me while the President pretends he doesn't even know an election is going on."

McGovern said he had been rough on Nixon, too. "But I'm doing it. I'm not asking other people to do it for me."

McGovern said he planned to spend the weekend at home before setting out on a cross country foray that will take him to Texas Tuesday and Chicago Wednesday.

Violence And A Parade In Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — Milk churns packed with explosives exploded in the path of a British patrol on the Irish Republic border today, wounding three soldiers.

Pre-dawn fires police said might be the work of arsonists destroyed the town hall of Carnlough in County Antrim and part of the grandstand of Belfast's Celtic Park soccer field. A bomb thrown from a car blasted a Belfast confectionery shop. No injuries were reported.

Also in Belfast, thousands of miltant Protestants defied a British ban to parade through downtown Belfast in paramilitary uniforms. Police called the turnout of at least 20,000 members of the Ulster Defense Association (UDA) the biggest show of militant strength since the Ulster strife began three years ago.

It coincided with the appearance of UDA patrols and roadblocks in Protestant districts in what spokesman said was a reaction to the latest burst of bomb blasts and random assassinations. Police said some of the murders were believed to be the work of psychopathic gangs killing people for fun.

The thousands of men wearing the field jackets, fatigue caps and sunglasses of the UDA massed in neighborhoods throughout Belfast to march through the central business district to a rendezvous near the docks. Protestant residents flocked into the streets to cheer.

Soldiers with cameras mingled with the crowds to take photographs of the participants and police noted the names of men they recognized for possible prosecution, an Army spokesman said. It was the first time the UDA has marched without face masks as part of their uniforms, which the government banned.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

229 Are Killed

SEOUL (UPI)—Rescue workers intensified efforts today to reach possible survivors trapped in landslides triggered by an unprecedented heavy downpour, which dumped nearly 1.5 feet of rain in central South Korea in less than 30 hours and caused widespread death and destruction.

As of 7 p.m. today, 229 persons were confirmed killed and 42 others missing. Another 171 persons were injured, many of them seriously, police said. More than 100,000 persons were left homeless.

Weathermen said the rain front was gradually moving south, relieving the flooded region.

Police said U.S. and Korean military helicopters rescued about 2,000 persons marooned in the outlying areas of Seoul and the eastern part of the country.

Young Stowaway

LONDON (UPI)—A three-year-old boy today became perhaps the world's youngest airline stowaway, shocking his father with his bawling presence on a flight from Los Angeles to London.

Trans World Airlines flight 760 landed at London's Heathrow airport today with James Woo-san, 40, still puzzling over how his son Mark wound up in the lavatory of the jetliner.

Woo-san, a psychologist from Inglewood, Calif., told newsmen he thought he had left Mark safely with his mother and two sisters at Los Angeles airport when his son suddenly appeared in the arms of a stewardess coming down the aisle.

McIntire Jeered

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Fundamentalist preacher Carl McIntire, here to hold an "Honor America" rally, visited the enemy camp yesterday and turned the other cheek to jeers and taunts.

McIntire, a conservative radio evangelist from Collingswood, N.J., ventured into Flamingo Park, the campsite of youthful antiwar protesters gathered for the Republican National Convention.

He came away with red paint on one hand, protest slogans daubed on his white shoes, and memories of demonstrators blowing marijuana smoke in his face and showering him with torn scraps of vest-pocket Bibles he had given them.

McIntire, who has encountered similar heckling on the several "Vietnam victory marches" he has led in Washington, never lost his temper during the 45-minute confrontation.

Jews Hear Shriver

HOUSTON (UPI)—Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver said yesterday Jews will support Sen. George S. McGovern for president in the fall elections.

"George McGovern is the heir to this Democratic legacy," Shriver told the Jewish War Veterans Association. "I have no doubt that in November American Jews will once again support the Democratic party, the party of humane change."

Shriver's charged the Nixon administration with "playing politics with the relationship between the United States and the State of Israel.

Last night in Philadelphia, Shriver told the National Association of Radio and Television Announcers that the dreams of the Kennedy era are "still very much alive."

Permission To U.S.

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's Construction Ministry today granted the U.S. Army conditional permission to use a national highway to transport Vietnam-bound tanks to the port at Yokosuka.

Leftist protestors earlier staged sit-down demonstrations on the route and in front of the U.S. Army Supply Depot at Sagamihara, 35 miles southwest of Tokyo, to stop the tank movement. The demonstrators stormed the main gate of the depot last night, damaging the guard shelter.

No one was reported injured and no arrests were made, a military spokesman said.

Some Stay On Isle

HONOLULU (UPI) —All but a handful of workers were evacuated from the United States mid-Pacific nerve gas arsenal on Johnston Island today in the face of a hurricane.

An Army spokesman in Hawaii said it was "almost inconceivable that any combination of circumstances could result in any hazard to human or other life on Johnston Island due to leakage" of the more than 13,000 tons of nerve and mustard gas transferred there from Okinawa last year.

Military and civilian jets evacuated all but 10 of the 580 military and civilian personnel from 3,000-foot-long Johnston atoll, 800 miles southwest of Hawaii. Hurricane Celeste was expected to clobber the lowlying island with 150 mile an hour winds early today.

Jet Blast Arrests

ROME (UPI)—Italian police today arrested two Arab men in connection with a plot to blow up an El Al airliner carrying 149 persons on a flight from Rome to Tel Aviv. They said the men admitted giving two English girl passengers a tape recorder as a gift but denied planting a bomb in it.

The arrests came about 60 hours after an explosion Wednesday tore through the baggage compartment of the jetliner.

The plane returned safely to Leonardo da Vinci airport, where police found the remains of a bomb hidden inside a tape recorder.

Police said the two men were arrested outside a bar in central Rome and carried passports identifying them as Adnan Mohamed Ali Hasham, 29, of Amman, Jordan, and Ahmed Zaid, 32, of Baghdad, Iraq.

Extensive Pullout

CAIRO (UPI)—Political sources said today the Russian pullout ordered last month by President Anwar Sadat was far more extensive than at first believed and there are only about 300 Soviet military personnel left in Egypt.

If the figure is correct, it might be the least number of Soviets in 17 years, the sources said.

The sources said an estimated 15,000 advisers have left the country, leaving about 60 "instructors" at military schools and some 200 other trainers with armed forces units.

The phone company wants more installers like Alana MacFarlane.

Alana MacFarlane is a 20-year-old from San Rafael, California. She's one of our first women telephone installers. She won't be the last.

We also have several hundred male telephone operators. And a policy that there are no all-male or all-female jobs at the phone company.

We want the men and women of the telephone company to do what they want to do, and do best.

For example, Alana likes working outdoors: "I don't go for office routine," she said. "But as an installer, I get plenty of variety and a chance to move around."

Some people like to work with their hands, or, like Alana, get a kick out of working 20 feet up in the air.

Others like to drive trucks. Some we're helping to develop into good managers.

Today, when openings exist, local Bell Companies are offering applicants and present employees some jobs they may never have thought about before. We want to help all advance to the best of their abilities.

AT&T and your local Bell Company are equal opportunity employers.

HAPPY TIMES? — American Telephone and Telegraph advertisements which have run in national magazines, such as this one in an issue of McCall's, show AlanaMacFarlane of San Rafael happily performing her pole-climbing chores. But there are signs all is not well, and she won't talk to the press.

Job Conflict Reported For Telephone-Pole Girl

Reports that a young San Rafael women — who became the first female to work as an installer-repairman for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Northern California, — has asked for a desk job were confirmed and then denied yesterday by a company spokesman.

The reports came on the heels of a nationwide advertising campaign in which 20-year-old Alana MacFarlane is described as one of the first women telephone installers in the nation.

Miss MacFarlane, who signed up for pole duty last fall, told the Independent-Journal at that time that she considered the work a challenge. She could not be reached for comment yesterday.

A telephone company public relations official yesterday confirmed a report that Miss MacFarlane had been on sick leave and had requested a transfer from the field. Later, he said she had been on vacation and was not seeking a job change.

He first said she had requested a "line assignment" or indoor desk job, calling the move a "logical progression."

He said the shift was an "advancement" although noting other employees had been assigned similar posts without first logging experience in the field.

Miss MacFarlane, who worked as a clerk in Pacific Telphone's San Francisco and San Rafael service centers before her pole-climbing assignment, wants to leave the field because she is ambitious, the official added.

"You just don't understand how the phone company works," he declared.

The official could neither confirm nor deny reports that Miss MacFarlane has been subjected to verbal abuse, harassed and ridiculed by male coworkers in the field.

He refused to allow the Independent-Journal to speak with her. "She won't even know you called," he said.

The official reversed his position an hour later.

"She has not asked or applied for a desk job," he said, adding she had returned to work last Monday after a two-week vacation. Miss MacFarlane put in a normal shift repairing and installing lines in San Rafael's Canal Area this week, he said.

He did not explain his changed report and again refused to allow an interview with the young woman because "she has declined to speak to any member of the press."

"She prefers to lead a private life," he said.

Pacific Telephone's parent company, American Telephone and Telegraph, has made Miss MacFarlane the subject of a nationwide advertising campaign which promotes the corporation as an equal opportunity employer.

A picture of Miss MacFarlane perched on a telephone pole has appeared in magazines throughout the country. The ad says Miss MacFarlane prefers outdoor work. "I don't go for office routine," the ad quotes her as saying.

Suit Over Homes For The Elderly

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A suit filed in U.S. District Court yesterday demanded that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare release federal inspection records on the state's 900 nursing homes.

The suit, filed by California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger and several senior citizens groups, maintains HEW is unlawfully supressing inspection records.

HEW has claimed it is bound by law to keep the records confidential but the suit claims this is an erroneous interpretation of the law.

The 900 nursing homes annually take care of 200,000 patients and last year received more than $60 million in federal Medicare funds, the suit said.

Withholding of such records by both state and federal agencies has brought criticism from the Marin County Human Rights Department, which has been rebuffed several times while attempting to review inspection records of local nursing homes.

Gunman Sent To Vacaville

Charles E. Bonner, 25, of San Francisco, was ordered yesterday to the California Medical Facility at Vacaville for 90 days' observation following conviction in a shooting and beating case.

Bonner was convicted April 12 by a superior court jury of shooting a Lagunitas man and beating his wife after Bonner and a companion entered the James E. Nielsen home in search of drugs on Jan. 20.

The companion, Henry Johnson, 32, of San Francisco, has failed to appear in court and a bench warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Deputy probation officers recommended that Bonner's sentence be limited to time already served in Marin County Jail awaiting trial and sentence. Judge Henry J. Broderick postponed sentencing until he receives psychiatric reports from Vacaville.

$450,000 Ex-Inmate Suit Against State

A former San Quentin convict involved in the bloody adjustment center uprising last Aug. 21 has filed a claim against the state for $450,000, charging that San Quentin guards beat and tortured him to make a statement implicating other convicts in the violent events.

Former inmate Allan Curt Mancino was paroled in May and is now living in Seattle, according to attorney Salle S. Soladay of San Rafael, who filed the claim in Mancino's behalf in Sacramento.

Prison authorities refused to comment on the charges made in the claim.

Named as defehdants in Mancino's claim were Warden Louis S. Nelson; James W.L. Park and A.R. Jacobs, associate wardens at San Quentin; Dr. Philip McNamara, chief medical officer at the prison, and 100 John Does.

The claim contends that on the afternoon in which Soledad Brother George Jackson, two guards and two other convicts were killed, prison guards shot Mancino in both legs while he was lying face down, shackled and nude, in the courtyard outside the adjustment center where the killings took place.

Mancino declared he was then put through surgery without anesthesia or medicine, still in chains, and then guards put a bag over his head, beat him again, and coached him into making statements against his fellow convicts in the adjustment center.

Mancino's also claims he was secretly transferred to prisons in Nevada and held incommunicado without proper medical attention. He charged he was repeatedly told if he "made any waves" the names and addresses of his relatives would be given to the convicts he incriminated in his "coached" statement, endangering his family's lives.

Mrs. Soladay said a suit would be filed in Superior Court if the claim is rejected.

objections by stressing that the day care program would be strictly voluntary (as the Democratic program also provided) and would be "locally controlled and federally assisted."

The women also were reported to have won changes in some other platform language they felt suggested that motherhood and housekeeping were more desirable goals for women than careers.

With the party's draft platform nearly completed for virtually certain approval by the GOP convention Tuesday afternoon, House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford looked ahead to the prospects of a Republican takeover of the House in November —and speculated tantalizingly on the possibility of a surprise Nixon announcement on Vietnam.

Meeting with reporters, Ford was asked whether he expected any dramatic Vietnam announcements during the three-day convention starting Monday, in view of Henry A. Kissinger's secret talks this week in Paris and Saigon.

"I am impressed by the amount of traveling Henry is doing," Ford said of the President's chief foreign policy adviser. "I don't think he is doing it for his health. There is a possibility that there will be something."

Added Ford: "I hope it comes tomorrow, regardless of whether it would have an effect on the convention. I want this war over."

Ford predicted that the coattail effect of a strong Nixon win in November might be enough —combined with legislative redistricting in some states —to give the GOP the 38 to 40 seats it would need to gain control of the House.

between the differing resolutions.

Morgan noted that as the probable chairman of House conferees he would be committed to "defend" the House bill, but he added, "I would be amenable to a compromise settlement on the Jackson amendment."

Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., who pushed for a commitment from Morgan to take the Jackson amendment, said, "If we're wrong on this agreement we may not be around to know about it. I pray that it will not be a nuclear Yalta."

Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., cited the July 1, 1972 freeze the agreement orders for the number of intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) launchers each country can have — 1,054 for the United States and 1,618 for Russia.

"This agreement has loopholes," said Stratton. "They have more missiles and over the five years they could MIR (multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicles) them and give Russia a substantial force that could knock out our missile force."

from the other inductees. "I guess they didn't want me to encourage the other ones," he said.

Laughlin said he believed court action could take years to complete. He has retained Cotati attorney Jay Cantor to represent him.

Laughlin's two young colleagues on the five-member council, Mayor Annette Lombardi and Geoffrey Dunham, have supported Luaghlin's anti-war resultions and are expected to support his present stand. The three unseated middle-aged incumbents in the April election.

Holdover councilmen Frank P. Dolinsek and Herbert I. Winter strongly disapproved of Laughlin's draft resistance. And both said their younger colleague should resign from the council.

"It's a dirty shame to sit with him (on the council)," Dolinsek said. "I don't like it at all. A man like that shouldn't be representing the government."

Dolinsek said he never served in the military, although "I was all ready to go (in World War II), but they never called."

"My kids put their time in the service and I did too, so I don't see why he doesn't too," Winter said. "When he was elected he took an oath to uphold the consitution of the United States. If he's not going to uphold it he should get off (the council)."

Laughlin said he does not plan to resign his council position. "I don't want the council to become a forum for this," he said. "Its a personal problem."

He said he didn't believe the publicity he's received as a councilman will have any influence on how his case is handled. "I'm not paranoid about it," Laughlin said. "I don't think they want to use me as an example.

"If it comes down to it I'll go to jail, but I don't intend to be a martyr."

Trespass Charge For Two Men

A misdemeanor complaint of trespassing was filed in Marin Municipal Court yesterday against two men arrested Wednesday by San Rafael police on suspicion of burglary.

Andre Wolfgang Taylor, 18, no known address, pleaded innocent and was ordered to appear Wednesday for pretrial hearing by Judge David R. Baty Jr. His bail, originally set at $10,000, was reduced to $500 but he remained in Marin County Jail and requested appointment of the public defender.

His companion, Ioannis Sakellarien, 23, of Corte Madera, was released Thursday on his own recognizance, also to appear Wednesday for plea entry.

The two were accused of breaking into the Kent Wolfgang Guter residence at 338 Bayview Street. The occupant called police when he heard the intruders.

Spaying, Neutering To Be Explained

Dr. Raymond R. Rediske, Novato veterinarian, will explain the newly established low-cost program for spaying and neutering dogs and cats at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Marin County Humane Society, 171 Bel Marin Keys, Ignacio.

Rediske's talk at a public meeting of the Blue Ribbon Dog Breeders will cover the program of the Marin County Animal Welfare Foundation, which will start Sept. 1, according to Helyne Michael, chairman of Blue Ribbon Dog Breeders.

Showers Dampen The County

Unseasonably wet weather again dampened portions of Marin County today, continuing a midsummer series of showers.

Bolinas reported that .31 of an inch of rain had fallen in the past 24 hours as of this morning.

In Southern Marin, meanwhile, the weather was described as heavy mist to light drizzle in Sausalito, Mill Valley and Tamalpais Valley.

Sausalito had .07 of an inch at 8 a.m., while Tamalpais Valley reported .11 and Mill Valley .05. Traces were reported elsewhere in the county.

Traffic across the Golden Gate bridge was held up by two auto accidents at 8 a.m. which the California Highway said occurred during heavy drizzle.

The weather forecast for the Bay Area called for mostly fair weather today and tomorrow with night and morning cloudiness. (See page 24).

ond day 60 miles southwest of Saigon, a mile beyond Cai Be district town in the Mekong Delta. Two companies of South Vietnames militiamen battled all day with artillery and air support to drive an estimated two battalions of North Vietnamese from a bunker complex within 100 yards of the road.

TOGETHER AGAIN

It was a tearful reunion yesterday at the Sarasota, Fla., airport when Clifford Irving and his wife, Edith, flew in to meet their children. Barney is held by Mrs. Irving, while Nedsky is in his father's arms. The couple had flown in from New York, where she was released from prison after serving a two-month term in the Howard Hughes autobiography hoax. (UPI Telephoto)

Peevey: EOC Move Power Play

An attempt by the executive director of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council to oust two board members was branded a "blatant power play" today by supervisorial candidate Michael R. Peevey.

Peevey, who faces a runoff election in November for the Second District seat on the board of supervisors, said the removal of EOC board members William J. Bielser and J. Kevin Donovan "must not be permitted to succeed."

EOC Executive Director Alfred R. Conklin III has called for their removal for what he considers improper action in urging state officials to block a $90,000 federal grant earmarked for the agency.

Peevey, in a letter to the county board of supervisors, said he supported Donovan and Bielser and urged supervisors to do the same.

"Their publicly stated concerns regarding the gross fiscal mismanagement within their agency have been all too often confirmed," Peevey siad, referring to the EOC's misuse of about $100,000 last year.

Peevey, who in the past has called for the board of supervisors to step in and eliminate the EOC, said the "minimum administrative duties" of the EOC in overseeing other independent agencies should be turned over to someone else.

Thieu Still In The Storm Center

By COURTNEY R. SHELDON
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — President Thieu stands today, as he has for the four years of the Nixon administration, at the storm center of the Vietnam peace debate.

In the fury of the presidential campaign, the dispute rages deceptively around whether President Nixon ignored "peace signals" from Hanoi in 1969.

But, in substance, the argument is over the wisdom of negotiating seriously with the North Vietnamese if it means the early demise of the Theiu government or one similarly oriented.

Nixon's sudden dispatching of presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger to South Vietnam confirms this. Kissinger flew to Tokyo yesterday after secret talks with Thieu then returned to the U.S. today.

Though the administration is tight-lipped, the No. 1 item discussed in South Vietnam may have been the future of Thieu.

Kissinger is fresh from secret conferences with Hanoi negotiators in Paris. He carried with him to Saigon either a softening of the Communist poisition or a recommendation that the U.S. and South Vietnam modify theirs, or (and this seems most liekly) both.

The fluidity of present negotiations with Hanoi still are so great, however, that administration spokesmen caution against speculation that there has been a significant breakthrough in the Paris bargaining.

Nixon upholds the Thieu government. Senator George McGovern and Sargent Shriver do not.

When Nixon took over the White House from Lyndon B. Johnson in 1969, Kissinger thoroughly interrogated the State Department, Pentagon and Central Intelligence Agency for their best judgment of Hanoi's intentions.

In a National Security memorandum in early 1969, which surfaced in April of this year, it was stated:

"There is general U.S. Government agreement that Hanoi is in Paris for a variety of motives but not primarily out of weakness; that Hanoi is charting a course independent of Moscow, which favors negotiations, and of Peking, which opposes them; and that our knowledge of possible political factions among North Vietnamese leaders is extremely imprecise."

It also said that among the "major points of consensus" was that:

"A combination of military pressures and political tactics explains recent enemy withdrawals and lower levels of activity."

It is this judgment which is at issue in the current crossfire between Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Sargent Shriver, backed up by W. Averell Harriman and Cyrus P. Vance, who represented the U.S. at the Paris talks during the Johnson administration.

Shriver, then the U.S. ambassador to France, says that the enemy's pullbacks in 1968 were Hanoi's way of signaling the U.S. that they would buy a compromise settlement.

Rogers denies anything at all was done or said by Hanoi which constituted a peace signal.

What he is really saying is that the proffered peace that the Democratic doves might be willing to have accepted, was, from his standpoint, a fraud.

If accepted, he and Nixon have many times contended, South Vietnam would have been taken over completely and U.S. pledges of commitments henceforth would be considered worthless by the world.

Against this, the Democrat doves argue that Nixon always responds to Hanoi's signals with military toughness and more bombing. Further, it is said that the U.S. has done more than its share to save South Vietnam, and Thieu is a dictator who does not represent the dominant thinking of a South Vietnam weary of having its own people killed.

As might be expected in a politicalcampaign, there are peripheral issues rippling out from the central debate over peace signals.

Rogers is saying that if there were peace feelers of the consequence Shriver now describes, why didn't the Johnson administration do something about them?

The record of that period shows that the Paris negotiations were bogged down on such elementary questions as the shape of the table. It was a period when a lame-duck administration had no power in Washington to commit the incoming Nixon administration.

The hassle over whether Shriver himself warned the State Department that it should pursue the "peace signals" is only a side issue.

Rogers says he has no such communications from Shriver who retorts that his views were incorporated in memorandums from the Paris negotiators.

The spotlight focuses more and more on Thieu and the appearance grows that the U.S. will find ways to ease him out of the picture quicker.

Theiu moves, meanwhile, to restrict the opposition press in Saigon under emergency powers.

The New York Times reports that there is torture and mutilation of suspected Communist sympathizers in the South. And Thieu calls for relentless bombing of the North, for years if necessary.

Speedy 101 Drive By Pair Ends In Arrest

Two men roared up Highway 101 at speeds over 100 miles per hour, crashed their car through a chain link fence in Corte Madera and eventually were arrested in a Greenbrae restaurant, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

The driver of the car, William John Delany, 23, of San Francisco, was arrested on suspicion of drunken and hit-and-run driving. His passenger, Eugene Joseph Rhodes, 28, of 376 Sunset Way, Mill Valley, was arrested on suspicion of being in and about a car while drunk.

Both men were released without bail on their promise to appear Wednesday in Marin Municipal Court.

According to the patrol, their car was first spotted at about 5:30 p.m. Thursday northbound on Highway 101 near Richardson Bay Bridge.

The car was reportedly reaching speeds over 100 miles per hour and dodging rush hour traffic when it ran off the road and crashed through a chain link fence near Denny's restaurant in the Corte Madera.

The car swerved onto Paradise Drive and back onto Highway 101, with several motorists in hot pursuit. The highway patrol reported that about 14 witnesses from seven cars stopped at the nearby highway patrol substation to report the wild driver.

Three highway patrol cars were dispatched to the chase and moments later, officers arrested the pair in the Refectory restaurant in the Bon Air Shopping Center at about 5:55 p.m.

Both men were released without bail because the crimes they are suspected of committing are misdemeanors.

Tax Loophole Charges Lodged

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A college student group sponsored by a Democratic state Senator has charged the legislature with creating an estimated $80 million in tax loopholes during this session.

In a report released Friday, Project Loophole said most of the estimated total went to trucking firms, bus lines and taxi companies through a bill eliminating the state gross receipts on truck cargoes and passengers.

Project Loophole is sponsored by Sen. Mervyn M. Dymally of Los Angeles.

Cost Council Bars Liquor Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The State of California has been refused an exempton of its controlled alcoholic beverage prices from federal controls, the Cost of Living Council said Thurday.

Under existing California law, the liquor manufacturer sets the retail price and this becomes the minimum legal price at which the brand can be sold, said Charles E. Kingman, district Internal Revenue Service director.

Kingman said the council determined that California liquor price laws to not require increases and an exemption might lead to larger increases than allowed under federal regulations.

Burglary Suspect In Innocent Plea

Dennis Leslie Yates, 25, of Novato, pleaded innocent yesterday to a charge of burglary before Marin Municipal Court Judge David R. Baty Jr., and was ordered to appear Sept. 7 for preliminary hearing.

Novato police arrested Yates Aug. 3 after he and a companion allegedly forced their way into the apartment of Deborah Ann Duncan, 19, of Novato, threatened her and then fled with $125 in cash.

'Little Noise Change' If Joint Use Allowed

A regional airport study of the Bay Area has concluded that there would be "no noticeable" increase in noise if civilian jetliners were permitted to use Hamilton Air Force Base.

The report, prepared by the Association of Bay Area Governments, said "evaluations indicate, at least theoretically, that a civilian jet traffic load would have no noticeable effect beyond that now existing.

"The reason for this," the report said, "is that the individual military jet operations are so much louder (many using afterburners) that despite an equal number of civilian operations the military events would dominate the NEF (noise level) contours."

The report is the final draft of a study which began last year.

Joint civilian-military use of Hamilton has been the subject of controversy in recent months between Novato residents and joint-use supporters.

County supervisors, on Tuesday, are expected to consider a request from the City of Novato to place the question of joint use before voters in November.

The San Rafael Chamber of Commerce yesterday said it supports efforts to secure federal approval for joint use of the air base.

The chamber also recommended that county supervisors become the controlling agency for joint use and not relinquish any decision-making to Novato. The city has requested a joint powers agreement for sharing in policy making.

S. Viet Newspapers Agree To Strike

SAIGON (UPI)—The Vietnamese Publishers' Association has voted to call a two-day strike of South Vietnam's more than 40 daily newspapers to protest President Nguyen Van Thieu's stiff new press regulations, a spokesman said today.

The spokesman said publishers decided against putting out papers Tuesday and Wednesday but it was not known how many papers would go along with the strike.

Reinecke: New Law 'Liberates' Wives

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill signed into law Friday by Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke could "liberate" some wives by allowing married women to maintain their own legal residence.

The measure by Assemblyman Henry A. Waxman, D-Los Angeles, removes a provision from current law requiring the wife "to conform to the husband's choice of reasonable place or mode of living" if the couple is not legally separated.

'No Phone Survey' By Brewers

Officials of the Theodore Hamm Co. brewers of Hamms beer, caution Marin residents that they are not conducting telephone surveys and that anyone purporting to do so is not acting in behalf of the company.

At least three Marin women have received such calls, according to Don Saccani, president of Anchor Distributing Co. in San Rafael, wholesale distributor of Hamms beer, one of whom reported her home was burglarized two days later.

They were questioned about their beverage preference, favorite brand of beer, their views on recyclable containers and, invariably, their names and addresses.

The caller — described variously as male and as an older woman — identified himself as an employee of Guidelines Inc., an alleged marketing research firm. Officials of Hamms brewery said no survey is being conducted, and no trace of such a research firm has been found.

The Campus Job-Bias Fight

She Nibbles Away At The Issues

By KATHLEEN O'GORMAN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Virginia Davis Nordin has been known to bury her head in her hands in frustration over the problems of the women employees she represents as head of the University of Michigan Commission for Women.

She has faced what she terms intransigence on the part of the university administration toward eliminating sex discrimination in employment.

Her public statements about the largely male hierarchy of this 38,000-plus campus have been combative. But so far, the men haven't risen to the bait.

Ignored, she says often deliberatey, by the administrators who hired her last fall to tackle the problems of female employees after the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) in 1970 ordered an end to discrimination at Michigan, the Women's Commission leader nevertheless nibbles away at the issues.

HER FEEL for women's rights developed, she believes, out of her education as a lawyer. But it's more basic than that, she said.

She is a woman who has said she could tave been a suffragist if born 50 years earlier. She is a wife whose fortune, in part, is tied to that of her husband. And she is a mother who works and endures the frowns of those who think her children suffer harm because of it.

Mrs. Nordin was the prime mover behind a conference, "Women's Work Has Just Begun: Legal Problems of Employing Women in Universities," sponsored by the Institute of Continuing Legal Education, a joint unit of the University of Michigan and Wayne State University law schools, and the State Bar of Michigan.

Mrs. Nordin is associate director of ICLE, and the conference, though aimed at educating participants about sexism in academe, contained the added barb of taking place on this beleaguered campus. Some of the same UM administrators, often seated on the opposite side of the table from Mrs. Nordin, were enlisted by her to speak.

And they were spoken to by representatives of HEW and the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission and by business leaders who have been through it all before.

Mrs. Nordin is a 1959 graduate of Harvard Law School. Her husband, Kenneth, is studying for a doctorate in American Culture and is teaching in the UM department of journalism.

This summer Mrs. Nordin is on a leave of absence from her ICLE and women's commission appointments to serve as adjunct professor in the UM law school's clinical law program. Her duties include working withlaw students who are allowed in Michigan, under a law professor's guidance, to represent clients in court.

BECAUSE THE Nordins are working parents, they make it a point to spend evenings at home with their children — Dayton, 2, and Kendra, 10 months — and, in Mrs. Nordin's words, "don't go out much."

The family rises at 6 a.m. and everyone has a "big, family breakfast," usually cooked by Mr. Nordin.

"It's very much a cooperative effort around here," Mrs. Nordin said. "We both do everything."

After dressing, the children are taken to a former neighbor of the Nordins who cares for them. They are picked up in the late afternoon, and the family returns to its New England saltbox-style home for dinner.

"I tend to be in very pressured situations in both my jobs, so having a different set of responsibilities at home is relaxing," Mrs. Nordin said.

"I think the best preparation for bringing up children is your natural instinct," she said. "You just have to play it by ear. . .People try to make sweeping generalizations, but it simply has to be worked out on a very individual basis."

MRS. NORDIN feels that feminism has helped her overcome "the guilt feelings that we all struggle with."

She added: "The main thing that the feminist movement has created is freedom to have individual life-styles." Continuing her career is her translation of that belief.

Although she is a scrapper for women's rights in her official capacity at the university, she has never belonged to a women's liberation group. She professes not to know if she always will remain "in the movement" physically, as she is philosophically. Her women's commission post, which she assumed last fall, came as a surprise after her name was submitted to a search committee without her knowledge.

But Mrs. Nordin recently has decided to apply for the newly created position of affirmative action officer at the university. It would be a step up from her current job, and one that would put her into the administrative mainstream. As it stands, the Women's Commission is essentially without funds, personnel or power.

"As chairwoman of the women's commission, I dont think I've ever been consulted by the executive officers of their own accord. It's the difference between being on the team and not being on the team" she said.

"It seems that I've got to be constantly pounding on the door and yelling, 'Let the women in.' "

RAP:

People get so uptight about girls hitchhiking. Maybe one out of five thousand gets killed or something, but after all, that is about the same chance you take just driving a car.

I am a teenage girl who has hitched many times with no mishaps. I meet many wonderful people. Although only men and boys have picked me up, they have never given me any trouble. One guy was even nice enough to give me his raincoat when it started to rain.

Next year I'm going to thumb my way across country. My folks are having fits about it, but I'll be almost 19 then and — DOING MY OWN HITCH

DMOH:

Lots of luck. You may need it badly.

Here's what a male hitchhiker has to say:

RAP:

I thumbmy way around and I know my way around. So let me tell you, hitchhiking is not for girls. Even boys get propositioned, but if the guy insists, we're usually strong enough to discourage him. Girls aren't.

So what if the girl goes along with the pitch? Some operate that way, but they get more than they bargained for, like gang rapes. They can even get killed. Those "unidentified bodies" that turn up in rivers and vacant lots — you hear about who they were, on the road, but you don't make waves, because you might get "detained for questioning."

Take it from an 18-year-old guy. I can take care of myself but there have been times I was so scared I jumped out of the car when it was still moving. A sadist with a gun is not my idea of fun and games. — CAUTIOUS THUMBER

DMOH AND THUMBER:

I think one of you is too trusting and the other too suspicious. Hitchhiking is a chancy thing, but every man who stops to give a girl a ride isn't a slobbering sex maniac.

My advice to thumbers is: If you must hitch, then be prepared for any situation: know how to get out of certain predicaments (judo helps); know exactly where you're going, and don't get talked into "side trips." — SUE

DEAR BOTH OF YOU:

. . . And my advice to thumbers (especially girls) is: Don't. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

My family has a cat and a dog. They are both about 6 months old. The puppy isn't housebroken yet and thinks our shag carpet is the next best thing to grass.

Our cat is well trained and very neat and clean. But my Mom complains because he spills a little bit of kitty litter on the floor. She is wild about the puppy so says nothing about the rug.

Now she says the cat is a big nuisance and she's going to take him out and leave him on a country road. Would anyone be that cruel? — ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR A.L.:

Mothers often say things they don't mean, and mean what they don't say. I don't think yours would be "that cruel." In fact she may even like the cat — when she isn't sweeping up litter. — SUE

DEAR A.L.:

You mother probably had a rough day, and because she couldn't scream at the people who caused it (Her boss? Your father? A neighbor?) she took it out on the cat. She probably gave him an extra dish of mackerel after you went to bed.

(Right, Mom?) — HELEN

SEW SIMPLE

She Wants Early Start On A New Winter Coat

By EUNICE FARMER
Register and Tribune Syndicate

Making a new winter coat is quite a project for me and I want to get started early. Will you please give us a few hints about choosing an appropriate pattern for this year's styles?
MARY T.

DEAR MARY,

Most women who sew will be wanting to make a new coat this fall. You are wise to begin planning early.

There is a decided difference in the coats this year, namely, they're roomier. Again, there is good reason for this styling. This is the year of the layered look, adding sweaters, vests, tunics and jumpers to our basic clothes.

Every layer creates more bulk. Be sure the coat you decide upon is not cut skimpy, with high armholes. These coats were designed to be worn with the skinny dresses.

Sleeves are different this year also. Many dresses will feature the dolman or raglan sleeve as well as the wide, drop shouldered line. These sleeves in our garments also have a great effect on the sleeves needed in our coats.

The length of coats will vary this year, however, the topper is perhaps the newest and most versatile. It can be worn over pants, skirts, and long evening skirts. Choose a length becoming to you, about 10 inches of the skirt showing seems to be an accepted length for most women.

Street length coats should just barely cover the length of your skirts. If you are choosing one of the new, exciting plaids, decide upon a pattern with few seams and details. Solid colored fabrics look new and beautiful with top stitching or hand-picked details outlining collars, cuffs and pockets.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Michael R. Russo, Waterbury, Conn., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"When purchasing a pattern you like and after using it a few times, you find it does not fit properly into the envelope. Purchase a manila envelope nine by 12 inches, paste the original picture on the front. Also, cut the back off and paste it to the back. Your pattern will fit nicely into this larger envelope and the result will be a nice flat package, easy for storing and using."

DEAR EUNICE,

Can you give us some guidelines on what patterns are suitable for diagonal weave fabrics and designs? They are so attractive but scare me to death.
MRS. A.K.R.

DEAR MRS. A.K.R.,

You're right, they are so attractive and most women avoid them for no reason. Here are a few tips to watch when selecting a pattern.

If the diagonal is a bold print instead of just a weave in solid colored fabric, remember to choose a pattern with as few seams as possible to avoid conflict of interest. The fabric can carry itself and doesn't need extras.

By all means, avoid patterns that are cut with any selection on the bias. You cannot use a pattern with raglan or dolman sleeves and a shawl collar will not work.

Instead, look for a basic pattern, with or without a collar, set-in sleeves, and a one-piece style without a waistline seam (although, this could work out). Have fun with them — they are beautiful. Once you have selected the right pattern, forget you are working with an unusualdesign and forge ahead.

Moth Protection

To protect clothes from moths, it's wise to line closets with aromatic red cedar. The aroma of this southern wood is pleasant to humans but repelling to ever-pesky moths. Clothes stored in cedar-lined closets remain fresh and free of mildew.

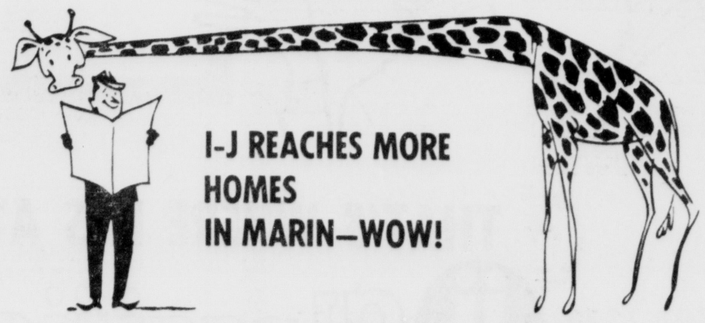
More Marin Want-Ads than in all other newspapers in the w-o-r-l-d!!!

No question that the I-J holds the 'world's record' for Marin County Want-Ads. Reason is, I-J Want-Ads hold the secret ingredient of success for buyer and seller — READERSHIP. Every evening, I-J reader families comb the classified columns looking for bargains. Phones start ringing from Novato to Sausalito . . . buyers and sellers meet.



I-J REACHES MORE HOMES IN MARIN—WOW!

MEET TERI-POKI

The woman with the bright smile is Teri Strait, also known as Poki Doti the clown, which accounts for the costume and the makeup on one side of her face. Actually, this is the way Mrs. Strait appears when she performs at Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey Circus shows. The circus will be in the Oakland Coliseum Arena Aug. 24 to 29 and the San Francisco Cow Palace, from Aug. 30 to Labor Day. Why the half-and-half look? People get a glimpse of what she really looks like, says Mrs. Strait, who visited Marin this week, "and the results have been amazing."

Summit Groundwork

TOKYO (UPI)—Hideji Kawasaki, Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's personal envoy to China, met with Premier Chou En-lai Friday to lay the groundwork for a summit meeting expected in late September, the Kyodo news agency reported today.

Rehearing Sought On Phone Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Most of the parties to the action that resulted in cancellation of a 1971 Pacific Telephone Co. rate increase have asked the California State Public Utilities Commission PUC for a rehearing on the latest rate boost.

The state supreme court, on June 9, invalidated the 1971 increase and ordered money collected since that time refunded to customers. Last week the PUC granted Pacific an interim increase of $55.4 million and continued in effect an increase of $68.9 million granted in April to offset wage increases.

The city of Los Angeles has asked for a rehearing on the $68.9 million increase on grounds the decision "orders and authorizes a telephone rate increase without findings required by law."

The city of San Diego is preparing a similar request.

The city of San Francisco, one of the original protesters of the 1971 increase, will not file for rehearing, according to deputy city attorney Milton Mares, who said the $68.9 million was still before the state supreme court.

William Bennett, of Kent Woodlands, Sylvia Siegel of Sausalito and Garett Shean, on behalf of an organization called Consumers Arise Now, have filed for rehearing of the entire $124.3 million granted last week on grounds the award was inconsistent with the directions of the state supreme court.

In addition, both General Telephone Co. and Continental Telephone Co. have asked the PUC for a rehearing to modify the commission's demand that they, as well as Pacific, make refunds to customers. The two independent companies maintain that the supreme court order does not apply to them.

Airbase Use Hearing Slated

The Novato City Council will hold a public hearing on joint civilian-military air use at Hamilton Air Force Base at 8 p.m. Monday at Novato Community House.

The city is seeking an agreement with Marin County that will give it equal say in decisions on civilian flights at the base.

The Novato Planning Commission has recommended against approval of plans for joint use until the extent of city control is established and the environmental impact of flights assessed and "found acceptable."

Election Law Is Challenged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A California law that requires the names of incumbent political candidates to be listed first on election ballots is being challenged in the State Supreme Court.

The court said Friday it will hear arguments in December on petitions opposing the law on the grounds that the first named candidate on the ballot has a substantial advantage over the other candidates. The petitions contend the measure violates both state and federal constitutional guarantees.

Petitions have been filed by Black Panther Party chairman Bobby Seale, a candidate for mayor of Oakland; Eric A. Garris, a candidate for the state 61st Assembly District, and Roger Jon Diamond, a candidate for the 60th Assembly District.

Group Endorses Club Plans

The Novato Plan Review Committee has endorsed Novato Rotary Club plans for recreational facilities at Miwok Park, formerly known as Novato Creek Park, next to the Novato Prehistory Museum.

The club's plans for barbecues, picnic tables, wash sinks, drinking fountains and lighting were approved by the committee Wednesday night.

The committee also approved an interior illuminated sign for the Radio Shack at the Novato Fair Shopping Center and an interior illuminated sign at the Pizza Hut, 913 Machin Avenue.

Bentley 1960

A cousin to one of the machines that King Farouk drives.

Automatic transmission, AM-FM radio, and options too numerous to mention here. Two tone green exterior contrasting with its soft green leather interior. This is not only transportation but an experience.

The condition of this automobile carefully hides it years. Priced at a fraction of its original cost. Even if you can't buy it, come down and look.

We think it's the prettiest car on the entire auto row, perhaps in California. 795 FHK.

Russia Considers Turn To Private Enterprise

By CHARLOTTE SAIKOWSKI
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

MOSCOW — Want your floor sanded? A curtain rod hung? A pantsuit made? A peephole put in your front door? A cupboard installed?

If you are a Soviet citizen, more likely than not you will seek help from the thousands of privateers who operate "on the left," as it is called. The state-run economy simply cannot cope with the growing demand for consumer services, and — in most cases — is not prepared even to provide them.

Now comes a bold proposal to legalize this vast reservoir of "underground" activity by permitting the formation of service cooperatives, from small family-type operations to large ateliers. It is even suggested that such a cooperative could run a string of coffee houses, a hotel with a restaurant, or a small shop.

Although this is not a plea for private businesses in so many words, it is tantamount to that. The author goes so far as to suggest that the Soviet Union could profit from the experience of East Germany, Hungary, and Poland, where "individual" enterprises are permitted to function under state control.

These ideas, which must sound almost like heresy to a Soviet Marxist's ear, are raised in the Literary Gazette this week and do not carry the stamp of official approval. But the very fact they are under discussion suggests that the regime may at long last be mulling over the implementation of party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's enigmatic proposal at the 24th Congress last year.

On that occasion Brezhnev advocate that thought be given to a system whereby retired persons, housewives, and invalids could perform services out of their own home or through cooperatives. He legal regulation should be improved and help extended toward this end.

The proposal seemed noteworthy at the time, but then nothing more was heard about it.

If the Literary Gazette discussion actually leads to a more liberal policy in the services sphere, it could represent a revolutionary step in this dogmatically socialist society where with few exceptions, everything is owned and run by the state.

Some cooperative ateliers as well as private services, such as dressmaking, are permitted to operate officially, but these are limited in scope or are heavily taxed.

The author of the article, Alexandar Levikov, acknowledges that the state has ambitious plans for expanding the number of service enterprises throughout the country. But, he writes with astonishing frankness and irony:

"I doubt that all these factories, combines, and millions of sales, if they continue to operate the way they do now, will be able to compete — not with the kopecks earned by the 'privateer,' but with his offer of service at any time of day or week. With his stupendous understanding of competition. With his knowledge of the psychology of clients. With his resourcefulness. With his high quality of work. With his most simple, firm principle: first the work, then the pay."

Bold and new reforms are needed in the service industry, writes Mr. Levikov, adding that Russians are fully willing to pay more for personalized service — to have the laundry delivered to the door, or to have a tailor come to the home.

Finally, he argues that some private services already function in the country.

"It is strange and illogical," he states, "to permit one person to hang out his sign ("pleated skirts on the third floor") and to forbid another — a hairdresser, say, the same."

It all sounds like a nudge for private enterprise.

School Space Fee Due Study

The Rohnert Park City Council will consider a request at 7 p.m. Monday to levy a fee on developers to provide school space.

The Cotati School District board has asked the council to levy a $75 per home fee so that temporary classrooms can be provided. The school district has complained that subdivisions approved by the city will crowd schools next year and that some arrangements must be made for temporary classrooms until a new school can be built.

The council has previously recommended that the school district lease homes to be used as temporary classrooms.

Accidental Blast Fatal To Two

CRANE, Ind. (UPI)—Two women were killed and two others were slightly injured Friday when a demonstration on how to handle dangerous explosives went awry at the Crane Naval Ammunition Depot.

Spokesmen at the south central Indiana munitions depot said the accident occurred during an indoctrination program for about 60 new employes at the depot's demolition range.

The depot, in a prepared statement, said a projectile was placed in a two-foot deep hole in the ground and detonated by electrical impulse. The explosion, it said, "sent a fragment of steel or possible stones into one of the glass viewports, shattering it and causing the mishap."

Mill Valley Play Auditions Slated

Auditions for three plays being produced this fall by the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts will be held at 7 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Friday at the Community Recreation Center, 180 Camino Alto, Mill Valley.

Actors are needed for the following presentations: an original rock musical written by Doug Momary, directed by Jim Funk and musical director John Balmer; "The Infernal Machine," by Jean Cocteau, directed by Ellen Ernest, and "Oedipus Rex," by Sophocles, directed by Martin Frick.

Capital ABM System Killed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An anti-ballistic missile (ABM) defense system for the nation's capital was killed Friday by congressional conferees.

"We did not know how much it would cost or whether it would work," said Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., in a briefing for reporters.

Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was a member of the conference committee that was set up to reconcile differences in House and Senate bills authorizing military weapons for the fiscal year that began July 1.

Export Controls Bill To Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congress has sent President Nixon a compromise bill to liberalize government export controls on U.S. products which are available to Communist countries from other Western sources.

The measure would make possible increased trade with the Soviet Union, China and their allies and help reduce the U.S. deficit in world trade.

The U.S. share of the Communist market is about 3 per cent compared to the Communists' 16 per cent share of the world market.

The Tiburon-Belvedere branch of the Marin County Library was evacuated briefly yesterday in the wake of a telephoned bomb threat.

Tiburon police said librarian Betty McKegney received the call at 5:03 p.m. A "young sounding" male caller advised the librarian to "listen carefully, this is a friend."

He said a bomb had been planted in the library and asked that Mrs. McKegney get everyone out immediately. "I don't want anybody hurt," the caller added.

Officers searched the building on Beach Road in Belvedere for approximately a half hour but found no bomb.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Postpone Finesse If Possible, It Might Be Avoided Later

When you have an ace to knock out and a finesse to take, your contract may depend on which of these plays you try first. In most cases your best course is to postpone the finesse since if the hand develops well you may not have to take it.

DECLARER RUFFS

West opended the jack of spades, and declarer ruffed in dummy. He thought for a moment of trying the club finesse, but decided against it. That maneuver could wait.

Instead, South led a trump to the king and returned a low diamond toward dummy. West had to play low since it would have been fatal to put up the ace. Dummy would then have three good diamonds, and South could draw the last trump and then get rid of the queen and jack of clubs.

Dummy won with the king of diamonds, and South led a trump to his queen. This put him in position to lead another low diamond toward dummy.

WEST PERPLEXED

Once again West was on the horns of a dilemma. If he put up the ace of diamonds, South would later get rid of his two losing clubs on good diamonds.

West again played a low diamond, hoping that South could not produce 12 tricks. Now, however, South didn't have a losing diamond. He won with dummy's queen of diamonds and cheerfully took the club finesse. He could afford to lose a club trick, and could claim the rest of the tricks.

ANOTHER WAY

If South had taken the club finesse early, there would have been a different result. West would have taken the king of clubs and the ace of diamonds in quick succession.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one spade, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - J 10 9 7
♦ - A 10 9 7
♣ - K 8 7 4.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four spades. This shutout bid shows four or more trumps, a singleton or void and very meager high-card strength.

The idea is to keep the opponents out and to warn partner against a slam try at the same time.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Dear Mr. Quiz:
I've read about some fabulous parties given by celebrities. Truman Capote often gives lavish and spectacular fun feasts and David Frost entertains friends in high style aboard jet aircraft. Who do you think has given the best birthday party so far this year?
Signed: Wish-I-Could-Go

Dear Wish:
Yours is not an easy question, because wealthy, successful people often do not publicize their expensive private affairs. I imagine J. Paul Getty, the multi-millionaire, could give a lively bash on his forthcoming 80th birthday (Dec. 15), if he wanted to. So far this year I think Elizabeth Taylor has probably held the smartest birthday ball when she reached the age of 40 (Feb. 27). She and her true love, Richard Burton, rented the entire top floor of an elegant Budapest hotel. Ambassadors from eight nations were among the 168 invited guests, which included Princess Grace of Monaco, wealthy Ringo Starr, romantic Michael Crane, and curvaceous Raquel Welch, to name a few. If you like contemplating the stars, being invited to wish happy birthday to Liz Taylor certainly is heavenly.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS TODAY

Harry Mills (1913-), star of a popular Negro singing group ("Mills Brothers").

Jill St. John (1940-), Hollywood movie actress.

Orville Wright (1871-1948), aviation pioneer and inventor.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The Mills Brothers began singing on radio in 1926, the first blacks to have their own show.
2. Jill St. John's real name is Eva Marie Saint.
3. Orville Wright was the pilot on the first flight of a powered airplane at Kitty Hawk in 1903.

CARMELITE DORMITORY

Bringing Russia To Marinwood

By NELS JOHNSON

San Rafael contractor Michael McLean is bringing a bit of old Russia to Marinwood.

McLean heads a crew of three — one of whom is a 15-year-old boy — that has been constructing a 26-room addition using old style Russian architecture to the Marinwood Carmelite Foundation office building at the end of Blackstone Drive.

The trio began work on the addition last May, and expect to finish the task within four weeks. It's a job McLean hasn't taken lightly.

When it's finished, the building — to be used as a dormitory by the 10 nuns of the Marinwood Carmelite community — will stand as one of the few examples of Russian architecture in Marin, according to McLean.

He stepped down as constable of West Marin last April to devote full time to the project and has since spent hundreds of hours researching old Russian architecture and wood carving techniques. He's visited church libraries throughout Marin and San Francisco and has poked into dozens of books on the subject including a tattered copy of an 1832 Russian manuscript that deals with the finer points of church building.

The 48-year-old McLean told the Independent-Journal about his project the other day amid a clutter of drawings, maps, books and church manuscripts.

"We're keeping all the trim of the dormitory to the dimensions of original Russian drawings," McLean beamed, adding that even the building's window frames required hours of study and research. He has cut the curving frames with a bandsaw and said the facility would eventually be adorned with old-style woodcarvings and intricate engravings.

He said the project has cost the Carmelite community about $45,000.

The contractor has plans for a more extensive project on the two-acre site in the near future. He plans to build a 300-seat Russian chapel adjacent to the dormitory — and in this case, booklearning won't be enough.

McLean has scheduled a trip to Russia next month to get a first-hand look at old Russian architecture and building techniques. He'll visit state historical museums, libraries and churches during the two-month tour, which will be financed out of his own pocket.

"You can read many books about it, but there's nothing like seeing the real thing, McLean said as he puffed on his pipe.

Some Russian chapels are built without nails; instead they are constructed with interlocking wood joints, McLean said. It's a feat he hopes to reproduce in the proposed Marinwood chapel. The church will be topped with one of the traditional Russian "onion" domes, he added.

But Sister Delores — the prioress, or mother superior of the Marinwood Carmelite Foundation — said chapel construction will depend on contributions. About $1,000 has been donated to the chapel building fund so far.

More than $50,000 is needed to build the chapel, she said, adding confidently that the "money will come in" and chapel construction would begin by next summer.

Why is Russian architecture so important to the Carmelite community in Marinwood?

Sister Delores said she and nine other nuns in Marinwood are praying for the Russian people "as our special mission."

"We want that country to return to Christianity," she said.

The Marinwood Carmelite Foundation is one of about a dozen Carmelite communities throughout the state. The order is a "contemplative" branch of the Catholic Church, she said.

McLean said he expects to learn much from his Russian tour even if he never gets a chance to build the chapel. "You're never too old to learn," he chuckled.

McLean, a native of Denmark, came to Marin in 1951 after stints with the Danish and British armies and the U.S. Marine Corps. He studied general contracting at Healds College in San Francisco, joined a building firm in San Rafael and then opened his own contracting business in 1955.

He's done remodeling work for nearby St. Vincent's School for Boys as well as the Carmelite Foundation in the past.

He proudly pointed to a Russian onion dome perched atop the Carmelite office at 530 Blackstone Drive. "I did that at nights in my spare time," he said. The dome consists of 1,800 leaf-shaped shingles which he fashioned and donated to the Carmelite community.

"I used nails in that one because it was the first I had ever made. But no nails will be used on the onion dome that will be on top of the chapel . . . I hope."

GOD AND MAN

Catholic Church 'Growing Stale'

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

After a long period of vigorous growth, the Roman Catholic Church in the U.S. has lapsed into stagnation.

The symptoms are clearly evident in the Official Catholic Directory for 1972, recently published by P.J. Kennedy and Sons.

A Madison Avenue ad man trying to put a good face on the statistics might stress that the total number of Catholics in America reached an all-time high of 48,390,990 at the end of 1971.

However, the increase in U.S. Catholic population in 1971 was less than four-tenths of 1 per cent. That was about half as good a growth rate as the church registered the previous year. And it was less than half as much as would be needed to keep apace of the growth rate of the overall U.S. population.

Thus in realistic terms the church lost ground. At the start of 1971, Catholics comprised 23.5 per cent of the U.S. population. By the end of the year, they accounted for 23.3 per cent. The change was not dramatic, but from the Catholic viewpoint, it was certainly in the wrong direction.

Other figures in the new directory show that the church continued to suffer losses among its front-line troops — priests and nuns. There was a decrease of 740 in the number of clergy, and a decrease of 6,731 in the number of sisters.

The dwindling supply of nuns is forcing Catholic schools to rely more and more on salaried lay teachers. In 1944, when their presence in Catholic schools was first recorded in the directory, lay teachers constituted only 8 per cent of the total teaching force. This year, it is 55 per cent.

This wholesale substitution of hired for free labor is one of the principal reasons Catholic schools are in servere financial trouble and are making a desperate bid for public funds.

Some dioceses have felt compelled to close some of their schools. Others have raised tuition fees. Both moves are reflected in figures showing a continuing decline in Catholic school enrollment. The number of children receiving their education in Catholic schools declined 361,910, or 8.2 per cent, in the past year.

The directory contains other signs of stagnation in America's largest religious body. The number of baptisms dropped by 33,530 last year — continuing a downtrend that began in 1962. The number of adult converts was down by 5,522 to a total of 79,012 — the lowest recorded figure since 1940, when the U.S. population was less than two-thirds its present size.

But periods of slow growth or stagnation are nothing new for the Catholic Church. It has survived many during its 2,000-year history.

Youths To Sing In San Anselmo

"Simple Joy," an ecumenical youth singing group composed of 35 to 40 high school students, will lead the congregation of Sleepy Hollow Presbyterian Church in worship tomorrow.

The group is directed by Mrs. Clinton Bell of Sleepy Hollow. Services will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the church building at 100 Tarry Road, San Anselmo. The public is invited.

Simple Joy has distinguished itself in the past year through its contributions as a choral group.

Singing as "ministers of reconciliation" in churches throughout the Bay Area, the group sings contemporary liturgy, concerts and other music.

The group has been invited to participate in the Lutheran Youth Congress, to be held in San Francisco in early September.

Tale Of The Apple— And The Wily Snake

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hello, Eve," said the snake.

"Hello, Snake," responded blonde Eve, coyly covering her paper-bag body with a large leaf.

The scene, as described by Baptist Press Service, marked the opening of a puppet show at the Ridgecrest Baptist assembly grounds in North Carolina staged by third and fourth-grade day campers.

The children themselves, in their own version of the Book of Genesis account, had written the script and provided the performance.

"Wouldn't you like to have an apple?" Snake said enticingly.

"What's an apple?" Eve replied innocently.

"It's that fruit over there on that tree," Snake replied.

"Oh, no, no, no!" she said. "God told me not to eat anything on that tree."

"God wouldn't care," Snake responded.

"Oh yes he would," Eve countered. "He told me if I ate from that tree something awful would happen to me."

"Well, I ate an apple and nothing happened to me," the Snake boasted.

"Well, I guess I could eat it then," Eve said. She gave a shrill whistle through her teeth and yelled, "Adam, don't you want to eat an apple?"

Each took a bite of the "apple" that perfectly resembled an acorn. Then they vanished into the garden foliage.

The female-sounding voice of God came from behind the Indian-blanket backdrop: "Why are you hiding?"

"Because we ate the apple," Adam and Eve chorused.

"Then you will have to leave the garden," God declared.

Adam and Eve broke into heavy sobs as the scene closed.

The audience, also grade-schoolers, offered loud applause for the production, aimed at helping youngsters familiarize themselves with the Bible in their own way.

The non-denominational school is open to all community children. Further information may be secured by calling the church.

Language Training For Missioners

COCHAMBA, Bolivia (UPI) — Roman Catholic Maryknoll missioners spend six months in language training in Bolivia followed by nine months of living with a family, during which they are encouraged to take university courses, as a means of overcoming communication difficulties.

Rev. Arthur C. Kiernan, director of the order's language school, said about 50 per cent of North American missionaries leave their mission assignments in a two-year period because of inability to speak a foreign language properly.

RUNAWAY — North running back Scott Duncan swept right end for a gain in the first quarter of last night's North-South All-Star football game at San Rafael High School, leaving a trail of destruction behind him. South defensive back Scott Cozza (middle, on ground) had Thursday's Independent-Journal headline, "North Tabbed Over South In Kiwanis Grid Clash," taped to his helmet. Duncan's ability to sweep right end consistently was a factor as the North won, 28-15.

Granite-Like South Subdued By North In Kiwanis Grid, 28-15

By LEW CODDINGTON

The water wore through the rock, as expected, but not before it was clearly established that the rock was solid granite rather than flimsy shale.

Using superior depth to score three second-half touchdowns, the heavily favored North finally prevailed over the surprisingly stubborn South, 28-15, in the seventh annual Ross Valley Kiwanis All-Star high school football game last night at San Rafael High School. A less-than-capacity crowd of about 3,000 attended.

STRAW CATCH

The North did not lead all night until Greg Straw (of Novato High) made a diving catch in the left corner of the end zone on an 11-yard Marty Moroski (Novato) pass with 8:02 remaining for a 22-15 advantage.

The South still had a theoretical shot until 1:40 showed on the clock, when cornerback Kevin Donohoe (Terra Linda) returned an intercepted pass 18 yards for the final touchdown.

'OUT OF GAS'

"We just ran out of gas," said South coach Bruno Banducci. "The guys played great. We could have won it if we didn't have so many players (nine) going both ways.

"Their strength was our weakness," he continued. "Pat Parnow and Jack Stahl (both Marin Catholic) never played defensive back in their lives before the game."

NORTH PASSING

The North passing game was not statistically eye-popping — seven of 16 passes for 125 yards — but Moroski unloaded bombs at critical moments. He passed 39 yards to Duke Bessee (San Rafael) for the first touchdown, threw 34 yards to Scott Duncan (San Rafael) to set up the second, and hit Straw for the third.

South passing led by quarterback Steve Schaumleffel (Marin Catholic) looked as good on paper — nine of 16 for 124 — but the figure is misleading. Schaumleffel as sacked five times for 46 yards in the second half, which contributed to the South's minus 35 yards rushing after intermission.

NORTH RUNNERS

"There were a lot of blue jerseys in there," said North coach Dave Wylie, who felt the pass rush turned the game around. It was the first head coaching victory of his life for Wylie, normally an assistant at San Rafael.

The North ground game hummed for 129 yards. Terry Johnson (Novato), a last-minute substitute for fullback Mark Farrar (San Rafael), who had an injured ankle, gained 45 yards in seven tries. Duncan was even better — 67 in eight — gained mostly on sweeps to the right side behind the blocks of halfback John Buckley (Terra Linda).

Duncan starred on the drive for the second touchdown, catching a 34-yard pass from Moroski, then running 11 and 17 yards, the latter for the score. He got the conversion on the same kind of right-side sweep on which the touchdown came, tying the game at 15-15 in the third quarter.

PERSONAL FOUL

Shortly thereafter, Schaumleffel hit John Schalich (Marin Catholic) for 19 yards to apparently start a retaliatory drive, but a personal foul brought the

Gondak Belts Aid Win By Italian Club

Matt Gondak crashed a pair of home runs and Gene Frey tossed a two-hitter last night as the Italian Club of Marin County routed Fortuna of Eureka, 9-1 in the opening round of the North Bay Regional Joe DiMaggio baseball tournament at Albert Park.

The Italian Club racked up three Fortuna pitchers for 13 hits to propel themselves into a second round game tonight at 6 against the Ukiah Elks, winners by 9-3 over Loleta of Eureka in last night's second game. Loleta will meet Fortuna at 3:45.

Gondak set the tone of the evening in the bottom of the second when he picked up a Randy Niemann fastball and lodged it behind the leftfield fence for the game's first run. But that was nothing compared to the leftfield shot he hit the next inning with a man on to cap a five run rally. The second homer came off another fastball from Niemann, which was his last pitch of the game.

FREY TOUGH

Frey had Fourtuna looking bad all night as he struck out eight and was never in serious difficulty. Rod Thompson got to him for an off field double to left in the second, and Dennis Price drove in the only Fourtuna run with a single to left in the fifth. Dave Steele, who reached first on an error by shortstop Steve Sherry, scored the run.

Sherry, who played for Toby's Truckers and was added to the roster fgr the tourney, more than made up for the error with three hits, two of them doubles. He scored in the third and again in the sixth, and his first double in the third knocked in Doug Hartman with the first run of that outburst.

MISSED BASE

He would have knocked in Hartman again with his second double the next inning, but the latter failed to touch third on his way home and was out on the appeal. At that point, however, it didn't make any difference.

Gondak, Iika Sherry, picked

BY U.S. BLACKS

Walkout Set For Olympics

MUNICH (UPI)—How much support the call for a "sympathy" walkout by black members of the U.S. Olympic track and field team actually had remained in doubt today one week before the scheduled opening of the Games on Aug. 26.

Lee Evans, the 1968 Olympic 400-meter champion, released Friday the text of a statement expressing "a united stand with our African brothers" on the question of allowing Rhodesia to compete in the Games—a question over which 12 African nations have threatened to withdraw.

Evans said the statement was from "the black members of the U.S. track team" He said it had been drawn up at a Friday morning meeting of the black team members here at that time.

Later, three blacks in Munich at the time—Robert Taylor of Texas Southern, Larry Burton of Purdue and Gerald Tinker of the Kent Track Club—said they had not been at the meeting.

Evans, an alternate entry in the 400 meters this time and a member of the U.S. sprint relays, issued the text of the statement as follows:

"In light of the recent Rhodesian acceptance to the 20th Olympic Games, the United States black athletes now in the Olympic Village believe it imperative to take a stand on this volatile issue. We denounce Rhodesian participation in the Games. If they are allowed to compete, we will take a united stand with our African brothers."

Asked if "a united stand" meant that the U.S. blacks would walk out if the African nations walk out, Evans said, "That's what the statement said."

Withdrawal of the African nations would deprive the Olympics of several of the most noted track and field stars from the last Games. Ethiopia is the only nation so far which has formally announced it is withdrawing, and that means the loss of Mamo Wolde, the 1968 Olympic marathon champion.

The Kenyan team includes Kipchoge Keino, whose victory over America's Jim Ryun in the 1,500-meter final was one of the dramatic highlights in 1968, and Naftali Temu, the 10,000-meter champion.

Five Marinites Win In Mill Valley Net

Reasoning that the tournament is, after all, the Marin County Junior Hardcourt, local tennis players implemented home rule yesterday by winning five important matches at the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

Top-seeded Carrie Zarranonandia of San Rafael won the girls 14 championship by defeating second-seeded Lisa Kearney of Alameda, 6-2, 7-5.

Sue Beatty of Tiburon, seeded No. 6, scored an earthshaking upset in girls 16 by defeating top-seeded Sue Brown of Oakland, 7-6, 6-1. "She ran down everything," said Miss Brown afterward.

Unseeded Leslie Airola of Tiburon came up with another stunner, striking down second-seeded Joan Pennello of Carmichael in girls 18, 6-3, 7-6.

On the boys side, fourth-seeded Henry Jacobson of Belvedere dumped second-seeded Mark Jeung of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-0, in 16s. Second-seeded Charles Bolcom of Belvedere

Bright Future For The Revamped Giants

Charlie Fox has completely rebuilt the Giant baseball club and he's done it in two months. The pitching staff no longer leans on Juan Marichal for its primary support and Sam McDowell isn't even in the starting rotation. Youthful arms now carry the ball club with the aid of youthful bat support that once depended on Willie Mays and Willie McCovey.

When the Giants dropped 23 under .500 at 22-45 on June 23, Fox began his youth movement. Between June 23-Aug. 16, the Giants played eight over .500 at 29-21 which still left them 12 under .500 with an overall season record of 51-63.

WALTER MAILS, now retired but still a Candlestick Park press box visitor, says: "I never saw a ball club get turned around as fast as this one. And you got to credit Fox for the turnaround. The Giants are going to be awfully tough in 1973. They may win it all next year buf if they don't, they're going to take it all in 1974. Remember when they do that I first said it on Aug. 16, 1972."

Mails then analyzed the Giants position-by-position.

"Ken Henderson in left, Garry Maddox in center and Bobby Bonds in right give the Giants the best outfield I've seen this year in the National League. And they're going to get better. They can hit and, oh, how they can field.

"As for Chris Speier, I've never seen a shortstop do the things he can do and I've been around baseball for 60 years. Tito Fuentes at second has the fastest hands I've ever seen. Speier and Fuentes make a superb double play combination, the kind a pitcher likes to have backing him up.

"NOW, YOU TAKE that young Dave Rader behind the plate. He's got quick hands too. And a pitcher isn't afraid to throw one in the dirt to him because they know he'll block it. Rader has to be a strong candidate for Rookie of the Year honors.

"Then there's that fellow Ed Goodson. They tell me that he can play third base if a spur below the cap of his right knee can be fixed — and they tell me it can by winter rest with the aid of a cast or, if necessary, an operation. Goodson's bat in the daily lineup would give the Giants a tremendous added punch. His swing is classic.

"DAVE KINGMAN is still learning the strike zone. Once he stops swinging at bad pitches, he'll terrorize pitchers. He does a pretty good job of that now and understandably so because of the way he can crash the ball incredible distances. I think Kingman's best position is first base, a natural heir to Willie McCovey."

Finally, Mails got around to the young members of the Giant pitching staff — Jim Barr, Ron Bryant, Don Carrithers, Randy Moffitt, Steve Stone and Frank Reberger.

"They all have fine young arms," said Mails, "and this season they got a lot of experience. But put these names, too, in your future book — Frank Riccelli and John D'Acquisto. They're down on the farm now. Riccelli, a southpaw, is running up quite a strikeout string at Amarillo."

FOLLOW THAT MAN — South running back Jay Lehman (24) followed the interference of Pat Parnow (21) for a short gain last night while North lineman Russ Weklych (middle) trailed Lehman and eventually made the tackle.

Finley Names Young Coach Of NHL Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — Owner Charlie Finley announced Friday the naming of Garry Young as coach and general manager of the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

Two weeks ago Finley named Fred Glover, a former Seals coach, as club executive vice president.

The naming of Young as coach thus completes the front office lineup. During the period in which the club did not have a coach and while Young was in the hospital for minor surgery, six members of the Seals defected to the new World Hockey Association.

ROOKIE DURHAM WINS

Giants Fall To Cardinals

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—You could forgive Don Durham for not getting excited about hitting a home run.

Usually, when a pitcher hits a homer it's time for rejoicing, kidding and extra high-jinks in the clubhouse, but it didn't turn out that way Friday night after Durham, a rookie right-hander out of Yosemite, Ky., pitched and batted the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The reason why Durham didn't get too worked up over his homer was that with help from the veteran Diego Segui, he nailed down his first big league victory.

After losing his first five starts you could understand why winning the first one meant more than hitting a homer.

Jim Willoughby started for the Giants and retired the first nine batters before Durham, who also played first base at Western Kentucky, singled for the first hit after two out in the third. Singles by Lou Brock and Ted Sizemore followed to give the Cards a 1-0 lead.

The Giants finally broke through Durham, who struck out three and walked two in the 6 1-3 innings he worked, for their only run in the sixth on a single by Bobby Bonds, his 31st stolen base and another single by Ken Henderson. Those were the last hits the Giants got. A first inning double and a third inning single by Chris Speier accounted for the only other San Francisco hits.

Marin's Family Of Bowlers

Bowling 600s in league play is not terribly exciting, particularly in Marin County where kegler excellence is in evidence. But when a brother and sister perform this feat, certainly bowling observers take notice.

This was the case as the McPhersons, Rich and Nancy, accomplished this at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael this week.

Along with brother Mike, they are considered Marin's top bowling family. Rich, 20, notched a fine 638, while Nancy, 16, collected a 603. Rich's efforts included games of 220, 223, and 195, while Nancy carded a 201, 197, and 205 and left no open frames. Thus, she made either a spare or a strike on each frame.

PLAUDITS ARE again in order for Nancy, who was named to the Youth Bowling Association All-State team for the third consecutive year, according to Rich.

Nancy and Rich have definite pro bowling aspirations. "I want to go on the pro tour in a few years," Rich intimated, "and so does Nancy."

Seventeen-year-old Mike has a sizzling 200 average, Rich a 199, and Nancy a 180 — marks that would make many a Marinite bowler envious.

SAN RAFAEL bowlers Marilyn Epidendio and Bea Hoffmann maintained their 10th and 14th place spots, respectively, in the L and L Castle Lanes' 1972 Ladies West Coast Match Game Eliminations following 12 games in the semi-finals competition.

Mrs. Epidendio has a 183 average for 2,447 pins, winning five of 12 encounters; and Mrs. Hoffmann has a 176 average for 2,312 pins, winning four of 12.

A SHUTOUT

A's Odom Tops Perry, Indians

CLEVELAND (UPI) — John Odom isn't worrying about his arm this year.

Odom has a 10-4 mark this year with a 2.13 earned run average. Last year he finished 10-12 with a .428 era.

The Oakland right-hander picked up his 10th victory Friday night throwing a four hitter, beating Cleveland 8-0 and thwarting Gaylord Perry in his bid for his 19th victory.

Sal Bando and Bert Campaneris backed Odom with two-run homers and Mike Hegan clobbered a solo home run.

Odom was pleased with this shuout.

He said this year he wasn't worrying about his arm like he did last year. Odom had surgery to remove bone chips from his right elbow after the 1970 season.

Bando's home run came right after the routine check of Perry's ball to see whether he had been throwing the spitball.

Just before Bando hit his home run, Mike Epstein complained that Perry threw an illegal pitch, then waved his bat at Perry.

That action prompted Oakland Manager Dick Williams to have plate umpire Hank Morgenweck examine Perry. He gave him the o.k.

Epstein struck out, then Bando stepped up and belted Perry's first offering over the left-field fence.

Hegan's home run greeted reliever Ray Lamb, who relieved Perry in the sixth.

13th Triumph For Montreal Reliever

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The way Montreal Manager Gene Mauch sees it, there is no comparison when it comes to rating baseball's top relief pitchers.

You can keep your Sparky Lyles or Tug McGraws; Mauch would rather have Mike Marshall.

Marshall notched his 13th victory—all in relief—Friday night when he turned in 3 1-3 innings of scoreless relief in the Expos' 11-inning 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves. That stretched his scoreless inning streak to 28 and he has given up just one earned run in his last 45 1-3 innings.

In other National League contests, Pittsburgh beat San Diego 4-2, St. Louis defeated San Francisco 3-1, Chicago blanked Los Angeles 5-0, Cincinnati whipped New York 8-2 and Houston edged Philadelphia 4-3.

Dave Cash and Al Oliver each singled in a run in the eighth inning to give Pittsburgh its margin of victory over San Diego.

Ferguson Jenkins scattered nine hits and posted his 17th victory in the Cubs' triumph over the Dodgers.

Run-scoring singles by Denis Menke, Dave Concepcion and Pete Rose highlighted a fiv -run fourth inning that paced the Reds' triumph over the Mets.

Dave Roberts won his 10th game and delivered a runscoring single in a three-run fifth inning to spark the Astros' triumph over Philadelphia.

up three hits for the game, adding a single to his circuit blasts.

Rod Dockins threw five innings of one-hit relief and drove home the winning run to lead Ukiah past Loleta. Dockins entered the contest in the third inning after Loleta's Dennis Wood tied the score at 2-2 with a leadoff homerun. During his stint Dockings struck out eight, and gave up only a last inning single.

UKIAH SCORES

Ukiah scored five times in the fifth inning to decide the issue, the first tally coming when Dockins laced a single to score Tom Walker.

Dale Biondini gave Loleta its first run with a leadoff homer in the second.

No Blue Ribbons For Marin Skiers

I-J Special Report

SEATTLE, Wash. — Water skiers from Marin and Sonoma counties were left to play bridesmaid roles yesterday in the National Water Ski Championships on Green Lake here.

Mike Suyderhoud of Petaluma scored 51 points to finish second to defending champion Kris La Point of Castro Valley in a hotly-contested men's slalom battle that lasted three hours. Kris scored 51½.

Bob La Point of Novato, Kris' brother, had the boys jump wrapped up until Wayne Grimditch of Hillsboro Beach, Fla., uncorked a national record jump of 134-feet on his third and final leap. La Point jumped 123.

Mrs. Thelma Salmas of Novato missed winning senior women's jump by a mere foot, leaping 85-feet to 86 for Mrs. Barbara Cleveland of Hawthorne, Fla.

Mike McGinley of San Rafael came up with a stronger performance than expected in the boys jump, finishing fourth at 119 feet. Larry Boivie of Bel Marin Keys was 10th with 106-feet.

Charles Sugarman of Mill Valley tied for 19th with 34 points in the men's slalom, and Joe Mitch of Bel Marin Keys was 10th in senior men's tricks with 2,160.

Bobby Litwins of Coacoa Beach, Fla, won the junior boys over-all title with 2,593 of a possible 3,000 points, and Bill Schouten of Flat Rock, Mich., won senior men's tricks with 3,597.

Two plays later, substitute punter Stahl shanked an 11-yarder, giving the Northerners the ball on the South 37, from which they scored the go-ahead TD. "Regular punter Pat Parnow (Marin Catholic) had a cramp in his leg," Banducci explained.

The South jumped out to an 8-0 lead, driving 60 yards on the game's first series to score as Parnow ran five yards.

Moroski cut the gap to 8-7 when he hit Bessee for 39 yards in the second quarter, but Schaumleffel connected with Schalich for 24 to give the South a 15-7 halftime lead.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Stout Lolich For Lean Tiger Times

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Detroit Tigers have encountered some rather lean times lately but leave it to portly Mickey Lolich to see them through.

Lolich, the left-hander with the sagging waistline, pitched Detroit back into first place in the American League East as he blanked the California Angels on three hits 2-0.

The victory, only the sixth for Detroit in 19 games during August, moved the Tigers into first place by a half game over Baltimore, which suffered its fourth straight loss Friday night.

In other American league games, Minnesota tripped Baltimore 3-1, Oakland blanked Cleveland 8-0, Texas walloped New York 11-2, Chicago defeated Boston 8-1 and Milwaukee downed Kansas City 7-2.

Rod Carew's fifth-inning single drove across pitcher Dick Woodson with the go-ahead run as the Twins handed slumping Baltimore its fourth straight defeat.

Dick Allen and Jay Johnstone hit three-run homers to lead a 16-hit attack that powered the White Sox past Boston.

Rich Billings hit a three-run homer to cap a seven-run fourth inning and pace Texas over the Yankees, New York's fourth straight loss.

Mrs. Gondak A Pick In Champs' Tourney

(Fifth of a series)

Mrs. Charles Gondak, a big name in Marin County women's golf for the past half-dozen years, will be one of the favorites in next Wednesday's fifth annual Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions at the Mill Valley golf course.

As women's club champion of Marin Country Club four of the last six years, Tillie Gondak has twice represented the Novato course in the tourney of champs. In 1970 she finished third at San Geronimo, and last year took second at Peacock Gap in San Rafael, two strokes behind Mrs. Larry Gapinski of San Geronimo.

A nine handicapper, Mrs. Gondak is no stranger to the Mill Valley course — she began her golf career there nine years ago. "It takes a lot of luck at that course," she says. "You can hit a good shot that just goes absolutely foul. One little mistake can get you into an awful lot of trouble."

This year she will again have to face Nancy Gapinski, as well as Laura Cann of the Meadow Club in Fairfax, Cookie Baer of San Rafael's Peacock Gap, Peg Williams of Novato's Indian Valley and Joan Wheeler of the home course. They will play 18 holes of scratch medal play, beginning at 8:30 a.m.

Mrs. Gondak's husband works for Pacific Telephone in San Francisco. They have three children: Cris, 22, Ralph, 19, and Matt, 17.

Kilmer, Jurgensen Duel For Redskins

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The battle for the starting quarterback job on the Washington Redskins is still up for grabs.

Bill Kilmer and Sonny Jurgensen are fighting for the No. 1 assignment and both continue to look impressive. Kilmer threw two touchdown passes Friday night and Jurgensen added another as the Redskins routed the Philadelphia Eagles 34-10.

Buffalo downed Minnesota 21-10 in the only other National Football League pre-season game Friday night.

Dennis Shaw, unruffled by Minnesota's famed "Purple Gang" defense, threw three touchdown passes to spark the Bills over the Vikings.

There are seven games scheduled today. San Francisco is at San Diego, Cincinnati takes on Miami, Denver is at St. Louis, Houston entertains Green Bay, Oakland is at Los Angeles, Pittsburgh visits Atlanta and Dallas is at New Orleans. On Sunday the New York Giants take on the New York Jets at New Haven, Conn., Detroit meets Cleveland at Ann Arbor, Mich., and Chicago is at New England while in a Monday night game, Baltimore is at Kansas City.

Rival Hockey Loops Slate Court Battle

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

PHILADELPHIA — The fledgling World Hockey Association and the established National Hockey League have squared away in another court battle over the signing of players to contracts.

A suit filed Friday by the Philadelphia Blazers of the WHA charged the NHL with violations of the anti-trust laws. The Blazers claimed that the NHL had a "lifetime grip on any player who wishes to play professional hockey." The suit was filed in the U.S. District Court here.

Like baseball, the NHL signs players under a form of reserve clause. Baseball's reserve clause has been upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Golf

SUTTON, Mass. — Veteran Tommy Aaron and young Hale Irwin are tied for the lead after 36 holes in the $200,000 USI Championship at the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Irwin fired seven birdies for a 67, while Aaron carded a 69 for identical 136 totals, eight under par. Lee Elder and Bruce Devlin were next at 137. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the 146 cutoff, notching a 145.

LEAWOOD, Kan. — Jocelyne Bourassa of Quebec, Canada, sported a two-stroke lead at today's start of the second round in the Ladies Professional Golf Association's (LPGA) $20,000 Westgate Open at the Leawood South Country Club.

Miss Bourassa fired the best score of her pro career in Friday's opening round, a five-under-par 67.

Tennis

FORT WORTH, Tex. — John Newcombe, Arthur Ashe, Ken Rosewall and Tom Okker have advanced to the semi-finals in the $50,000 Colonial National Invitation Tennis Tournament.

Newcombe, top seed in the tournament, downed John Alexander Friday 4-6, 6-3 6-4. Ashe polished off Marty Riessen in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3, and Rosewall eliminated Graham Stillwell, 6-4, 6-2.

TORONTO — England's third-seeded Virginia Wade Friday beat second-seeded Margaret Court of Australia 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 in a semi-final clash at the Rothmans Canadian Open Tennis Championships.

Australia's Evonne Goolagong will go against Miss Wade in today's finals after walloping Louisiana's Linda Tuero in Friday's other semi-final, 6-3, 6-2.

The 20-13 victory left San Francisco with a 1-1 exhibition record.

Glover Tabbed By Sonoma

Tom Glover, 33-year old author and former baseball coach at El Molino High School in Forestville, has been appointed the baseball coach at California State College, Sonoma.

Glover, who has authored several scorebooks in baseball and basketball, will take over the job vacated by William Trumbo, Sonoma State College director of athletics.

"A record like 5-41 (Sonoma's overall record in 1972) is totally unacceptable," Glover said.

Fairfax Again Eyes Zoning Laws

The Fairfax City Council has scheduled its sixth public hearing Monday on a zoning ordinance that would require larger minimum lot sizes for development.

At issue at 8 p.m. in the Women's Club will be the city's commercial zones, according to City Administrator Robert E. Crowe.

Under the ordinance, property now zoned limited commercial, commercial or industrial would be rezoned to limited commercial, highway commercial, central commercial or commercial recreational zone, Crowe said.

Minimum area for limited commercial, or services-grienting zone, would be set at 20,000 square feet with a minimum width of 75 feet.

Minimum area for highway commercial, or retail-wholesale business zone, would be set at 7,500 square feet with a minimum width of 50 feet.

The ordinance would establish a central commercial zone catering to pedestrian traffic and a commercial recreational zone providing for private recreational facilities.

Included in the commercial recreational zone would be the 26.78 acre Marin Town and Country Club property, owned by Max Friedman. Though citizens voted more than 2-1 to rezone the Friedman parcel to commercial recreational last April, the action may be invalid, according to City Atty. Wallace S. Myers.

The April 11 vote was forced by an initiative petition and "it is doubtful if rezoning by initiative is valid," Myers said.

He said that although a superior court in Orange County has upheld the legality of rezoning by initiative, appellate courts have ruled such action illegal.

"It'll take another appellate court decision to straighten this thing out," Myers said.

The rezoning initiative was sparked by a citizen's group last year after Friedman announced plans to sell his property to an Oakland firm planning a residential development. Friedman later canceled the plans in the face of heated public opposition and reopened the swimming resort April 15.

Friedman has opposed the section of the zoning ordinance which would rezone his property from commercial to commercial recreational district. "The only valid economical use for this property . . . is multiple dwelling units, with some commercial uses," Bryan R. McCarthy, Friedman's attorney, said in a letter to the Fairfax council.

The proposed new zoning would allow recreational uses only on the Friedman parcel — though he could establish a resort hotel with recreationa facilities, according to Crowe.

McCarthy has charged tha the proposed rezoning would represent a "taking of his land for public park purposes with out paying him compensation under the law," and has requested either reasonable payment or retention of existing zoning.

The ordinance has been under consideration since first proposed by the county planning staff and the city planning commission two years ago.

'73 Novato Budget On Sewers Up

The Novato Sanitary District board has adopted a preliminary 1972-73 budget of $378,653, up $60,123 from last year, but expected to make little change in the tax rate.

The tax rate in the Novato plant zone is expected to be 37.5 centers per $100 assessed valuation, down from 37.9, and in the remainder of the district, 34 cents, up from 33.9.

Board members adopted the tentative budget Thursday night, with adoption of a final budget scheduled for Aug. 28, according to Bill L. Bayles, assistant engineer.

Although the operating budget is higher, the tax rate in the Novato plant area is lower because the 1970 bond repayment rate, 2.4 cents last year, won't be levied. The repayment will be made through connection charge revenues.

The rate in the Novato plant zone is higher than other sectors of the district because it includes a 1955 bond repayment rate, not levied in areas served by other plants.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Hatful Of Rain' An Outstanding Effort

By KAY KSANDA

Last night at the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts in Mill Valley, Marin's new summer theater group switched roles and subject matter to produce "A Hatful of Rain."

Written by Michael Gazzo some years ago when drugs were supposedly misused only by the poor, this drama probably has been produced by every little theater group from here to New York. But, by this company, which remains unnamed, the play grew from a story into an updated saga.

It does run too long, and there is not enough change of pace throughout the play, and not too many of the characters grow. However, this is only a small complaint, for this group combines fine acting, clear characterizations, and professional technique to do an outstanding job, and produce a fascinating play.

The show is played in the round, and the audience is practically on top of the dining room table. Technical bits — lighting, makeup, props, sound and costuming — are all good. Even the soup served by the hero is steaming and smells good.

The hero is Johnny, who lives with his wife and brother in a New York apartment. She is pregnant and works like a drone at an office while brother Polo is a bouncer in a saloon. It's Polo who pays for his brother's $40-a-day habit. A vicious pusher by the name of "Mother" hangs about the place with his freaky gang, and into this sweet scene comes dear old dad for a visit.

Richard Poe, as Johnny, is very strong in the part and believable in his restraint. He grows, developes and finally becomes rounded and real. Robin Jackson, as the wife, is sweet and stays about the same throughout. Martin Ponch, as the father, also never changes as the story develops. (He was terrific the night before as the senator in another group offering, "The Respectful Prostitute.")

John Garbor is fascinating as Polo, while Michael Collino, as "Mother", had a malevolence that was flat but fierce.

The rest of "Mother's" retinue: Stuart Rudin, Duane Salem, Sue Ann Salem, and Dan O'Brien are all excellent, and also cast in the other shows currently running at the same theater.

The ensemble acts every night except Tuesday alternating "Hatful" with "Prostitute" and "All At Sea," through Sept. 2 at 8 p.m.

Two Who Fail To Report May Face Court Action

Five men were inducted into the armed services in August by the Marin Selective Service Board, executive secretary Joy M. Kinzer reported today.

Twenty-seven men had been ordered to report for induction Aug. 9.

Mrs. Kinzer said two of these failed to report, eight were canceled, six were postponed, five were rejected after physical examinations and one enlisted prior to induction.

Names of those who failed to report were withheld pending possible court action.

The five men inducted were David Sibberensen of Mill Valley, Richard Payne, Michael Dalton and Barton Council of San Rafael, and Karl Wandt of Novato.

Lessons Of History At Olympics Scene

OLYMPIC VISITORS to Germany will find the place bustling. Those whose memories go back to V-E Day will find it hard to relate what they see today to the wholesale devastation of 1945.

Munich was pretty thoroughly destroyed in World War II, but today it is exceedingly difficult to find any visible signs of that destruction.

But the painful human wounds are still visible if you look carefully.

AN HOUR'S DRIVE from downtown Munich will carry you into beautiful rolling hills where farmers are busy in the fields. Watch closely as you drive from one village to the next. In some areas you will see only old women tilling the fields — driving tractors, pitching hay, and performing the stoop labor which is the farmers' lot.

No men and no children are to be seen working in the fields in some districts.

Why don't the men and the children help in these areas as they do everywhere else?

The explanation of the puzzle is that there are no men, and no children. The men of the district went off to war and didn't return. They didn't father any children. Some of those old women in the fields are the daughters and sisters of men lost in the war. Some were never married; their intended were lost too.

IF YOU VISIT a swinging Rhine wine village, you may see an old women's party in one of the wine restaurants. They sit around backslapping and tippling almost like a stag party. When the German band cranks up for dancing, you are likely to see several pairs of the old girls dancing together.

Once more you are seeing a wound of war. Those old women have lived their lives singly; the men of their generation were war victims.

THE PARADES and pageantry of the Olympics will draw huge crowds. Look carefully at those crowds and you will be amazed at how many of the older men are legless or armless, or obviously wearing an artificial limb.

If you are fortunate to be the guest in a home, notice the pictures on the wall. There in a place of honor will be the likeness of a young man in German army uniform. Ask and you will be told it is the son who was lost in the war.

If you motor through the countryside, you will notice that every village has its memorial statue. Look closely at the number of names inscribed. The length of the list is sometimes shocking when measured against the size of the village. Obviously, the village lost just about every able-bodied male.

JOIN A ROUSING party in a Wurtzburg weinstube, the Franconian equivalent of a Munich beer hall. You may note that one merry-maker in his 50s punctuates his hilarity with occasional pensive pauses.

This is where his college class has its annual reunion. Only half the class are still alive. No, there has not been a single natural death among the classmates. The missing half "fell" in the German army's debacle in Russia.

Yes, some participated in the German invasion of the lowlands and France. Some faced the Western Allies on the "second front." They survived to attend reunions. Every one of the missing half "fell" in Russia.

YOU CAN ONLY conclude that today's youth is eminently correct in demanding that all governments everywhere stop their senseless wars.

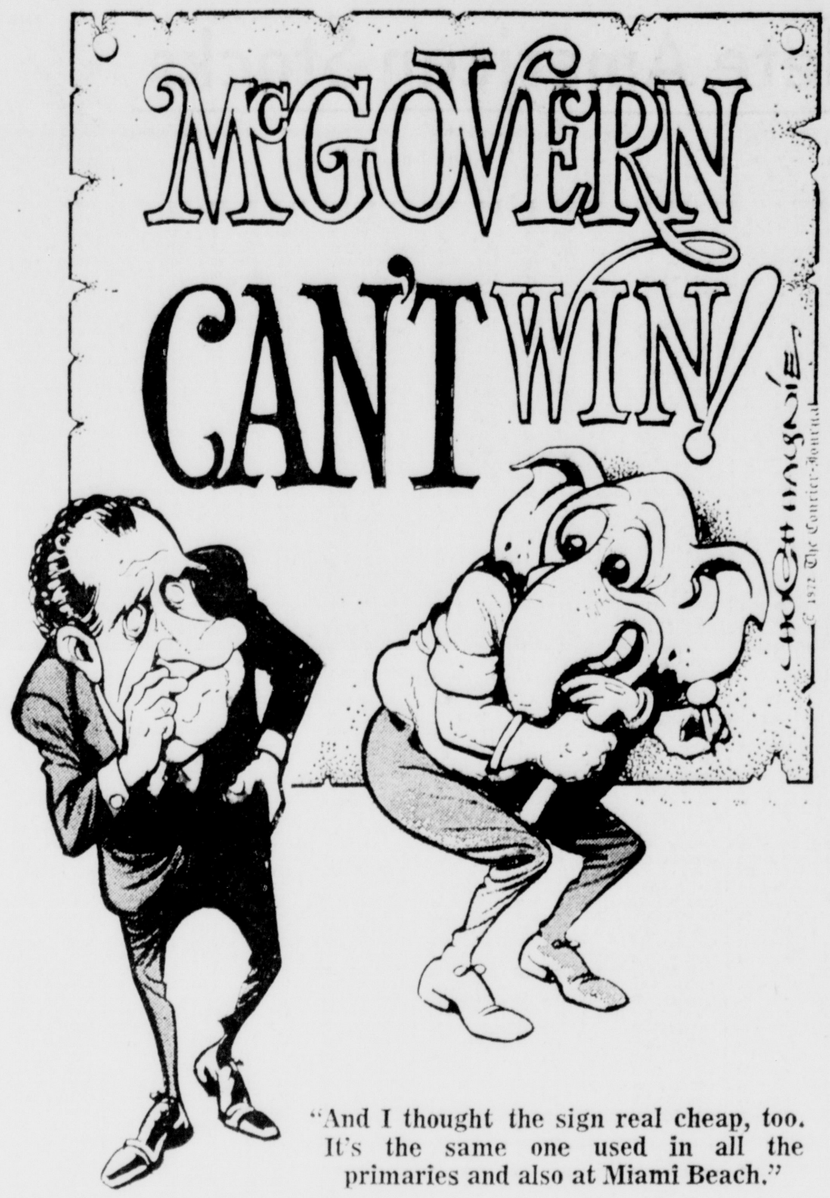
But an hour's drive from downtown Munich will also take you to the still-standing ovens of the Dachau concentration camp where tens of thousands were exterminated.

Humanity had to be saved from Hitler's terrible tyranny.

It took a war to crush that tyranny. Our generation could not prevent the tyranny nor find any way to crush it except by war.

We are hopeful, but lamentably not very confident, that the next generation will be able to save humanity from itself without resorting to war.

—Jack Craemer



"And I thought the sign real cheap, too. It's the same one used in all the primaries and also at Miami Beach."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

'If We Have A Fire, I Hope It's In Novato'

I wish to thank the Novato firemen who came to our house today for their prompt arrival, under five minutes, and the efficient and clean handling of our kitchen fire. They are a great team and if we ever have another fire, I hope it's in Novato.

Sausalito Firemen, Police Respond Quickly

On behalf of my two daughters and myself, may I publicly express our appreciation to the Sausalito Fire Department.

While driving north on Waldo Grade Tuesday evening, Aug. 8th, I had an emergency with my car. Thinking the engine was on fire, and being close to Spencer Avenue, I parked next to the fire house. The station was closed, but I was able to reach the department through the emergency phone. Fire Captain Robertson and Jerry (I did not learn his last name), and a unit of the Sausalito Police Department responded. The car's problem turned out to be relatively minor, but the gentlemen who came to our assistance were genuinely concerned for our safety. They, together with Fireman Jones, went out of their way to help us and see to it that we were able to continue safely home.

Due to their kind attention, my daughters, ages two and five, saw first-hand that if they are ever in an emergency situation, they can always call upon a fireman or policeman and receive fast, efficient and friendly help.

Park Service Road Destroys Natural Beauty

I had occasion recently to drive on the newly completed Mount Vision Road in the Point Reyes National Seashore and was amazed at the destruction caused by the road construction and the total disregard for preservation of the sensitive environment of the park.

This new road is intended as access to Limantour Beach in the park, but since the beach already had a road access, its construction was superfluous. As it climbs over the Inverness Ridge, the road has been constructed utilizing deep swaths of terraced cuts and fills which completely desecrate the hillsides. The steep hillside land through which the road traverses is apparently naturally unstable and numerous slides have occurred along its length. Attempts have been made to repair these slides using stone riprap which makes the road look second rate and poorly designed.

It is completely unbelievable to me that the National Park Service would take it upon itself to construct such a damaging facility that was not even needed. The public has put its trust in the federal government and specifically the park service to save Point Reyes from developers with their land-scarring roads and houses. It is disappointing to see the government go ahead and build unneeded, land-scarring and desecrating roads that we were trying to prevent.

I believe that the park planning policies of the National Park Service should receive careful scrutiny so that future desecrations of our parks can be prevented. The government should seriously consider abandoning the Mount Vision Road and restoring the ground to its natural state.

Regular Democrats Return Slowly To Party Split By 'New Politics'

SAN FRANCISCO — Loyal Democrats are slowly coming back to life after the long nightmare of the vice-presidential fiasco. There is no disguising the cost of the interval that began with the seesaw of indecision following Sen. Thomas Eagleton's disclosure of his hospitalization for mental illness.

The episode further disillusioned prominent Democrats who were already lukewarm toward Sen. George McGovern's candidacy. Normally the source of sizable campaign contributions, they are today waiting it out. Whether they will eventually come around to support a McGovern-Shriver ticket is still in question.

Here is a lifelong Democrat who stops just short of declaring he will vote for President Nixon: "I have 3,00 employes. Each one is carefully vetted before he goes on the payroll. Why Senator Eagleton's record was not thoroughly examined before he was chosen for the second highest office in the land is more than I can understand."

He had backed Sen. Hubert Humphrey in the California primary. Party regulars who had stayed with Sen. Edmund Muskie were put off by the stop-and-start indecision over the possible choice of the Maine senator for the No. 2 spot. This seemed further evidence of ineptitude in the top ranks of the party.

Similar reports of doubt and indifference among the big wheels come from those sampling opinion around the country. At best the attitude is, "wait and see."

THE PRESENCE of Sargent Shriver on the ticket is a plus but, as the Louis Harris polls the McGovern camp had taken just before the Miami Beach convention showed, any No. 2 other than Sen. Edward Kennedy would make only a point or a point and a half difference. As a long-time friend and ally of Chicago's Mayor Richard J. Daley, Shriver should help substantially in Illinois. And Illinois is one of the states the Democrats must carry if they are to have a chance to win in November.

While as a Kennedy in-law some of the magic of the name may rub off on Shriver, the Senator from Massachusetts would have made, according to the Harris survey. A 13-point difference. Shriver will for the first time be testing his vote-getting ability.

All this is the old politics, and is as dead, if you believe the young militants who put McGovern over in the primaries, as Tammany Hall. Yet even6their crusading spirits have been dampened by the backing and filling over the vice presidency. The task they face looms ahead with the vastness of a Grand Canyon to fill up by Nov. 7.

It is here that the loss of a precious month can mean the difference between a possible narrow win and disastrous defeat. The young, the apostles of the new politics, had 18 months to work their miracle in the primaries. Now in little more than two months they must work a second miracle. For the cynical, the doubters, this is simply not in the cards.

CALIFORNIA, the most populous state in the union, is showcase of what was achieved in the primary and what must now be done before election day. A million new voters must be signed up before the deadline of Oct. 8 if the McGovern-Shriver ticket is to have a chance in this state. John Kaufman, head of the McGovern voter registration drive in Northern California, has hundreds of deputy registrars at work. But while nearly 50,000 new voters, presumably McGovern voters, have been signed up since McGovern won the nomination, Kaufman is frank to say that it is an uphill battle.

The bulge in favor of the Democrats, with a million and a half new voters registered in the past year, is greater than ever before. But how much this means in the present volatile political climate is beyond prediction and perhaps beyond even the pollster. Will they vote in November? Will their allegiance to McGovern hold after the dismaying Eagleton affair?

These are questions the miracle workers do not try to answer. They are at it again 14 to 16 hours a day and if only they could stretch the weeks and months out a bit they might make it.

China's Moves Face Russians With New Two-Front Alliance

We were wondering the other day whether the Russians might still be thinking seriously of a quick military thrust at China designed to take out China's nuclear establishment before it gets any bigger. So we asked some questions in places where the answers are supposed to be. We were told:

Don't worry about that one anymore. The Chinese have mounted a battery of short-range nuclear missiles aimed at Vladivostok. True, the Russians could take out all the Chinese nuclear weapons factories if they chose. But the price includes an end to Vladivostok, and anything else worth mentioning out on that far end of the Trans-Siberian Railway.

IN OTHER WORDS the Russians have missed that boat. Had they wanted to prevent China from becoming a full-scale nuclear power they should have acted before China came into possession of its own deterrent. Even one nuclear missile targeted on Vladivostok is quite a deterrent. The Chinese, it seems, have more than one and can hit more than one Russian target.

In turn this means that the nuclear weapon has been largely canceled out of the Chinese-Russian equation. And that can put Russia someday at a large disadvantage. China wants back a lot of territory gathered up by the czars which in earlier times had been vaguely under Chinese suzerainty. The Chinese need land. The Russians have more than they can yet use. The Chinese keep printing maps showing big slices of Siberia as Chinese. It makes the Russians uncomfortable. They should be.

To add to their discomfort the Chinese have been inviting a string of western European officials to Peking. The invitation includes the Germans who haven't come yet. It seems more tactful to them to wait until they have completed their new treaties with the Poles, East Germans, and Russians. But eventually the Germans, too, will make the pilgrimage to Peking which Richard Nixon popularized.

The Chinese areparticularly interested in the new Common Market which will emerge, presumably, after the British join in January. The Chinese can do business with Western Europe without getting tangled up in the Russian-American relationship. Western Europe is safe. And, of course, the closer the ties between China and Western Europe, the less the inclination in Western Europe to do a deal with Russia.

SO RUSSIA, which was well along with its detente with the west Europeans before the China factor was unloosed into the European arena by Mr. Nixon, has to beware of strengthening the bonds between its east and west neighbors. There is a natural affinity between peoples living on opposite sides of a great power. Russia is a great and assertive power not famous for tenderness toward neighbors. If that brings the neighbors together the Russians have only themselves to blame. Perhaps they begin to see that right now.

As a matter of fact the men of the Kremlin have a great deal to be distressed about these days and only one onsolation. The consolation is that their unintended, and hasty, departure from Egypt (reminiscent of the time they were bundled out of China in 1960) happens to reduce the tensions between themselves and the world Jewish community.

Israel seemed for a time after the 1967 war to be the real target of the Russian supply of weapons, advisers and armed technicians to Egypt. Russia behaved as though it might actually be intending to help Egypt exterminate Israel. And at the same time mistreatment of Jews in Russia seemed to reach almost czarist-era proportions. It was getting close to an open war between Russia and the Jews.

A generous (for Russians) emigration policy has reduced the friction inside Russia. The departure of most Russians from Egypt removes the Russian threat to Israel. Israel simply is in no danger at all anymore — from anyone. There could be peace any day now between Russians and Jews.

Otherwise the men of the Kremlin preside over an empire which is shrinking by the day. The real question is how much more will be lost before they can check the trend.

Moist-Skinned Bug-Catcher

The other day we lifted a redwood fuchsia tub in our garden, trying to see if alien roots were coming in the bottom of the tub and causing the ill health of the plant. We found no roots, but we did find a salamander.

Although it did not solve the the mystery of the ailing fuchsia, it pleased us. We quickly replaced the tub, being careful not to crush the little amphibian. While we do not find these moist, little inhabitants of dark places very attractive, they are better than any insecticide when it comes to slugs, sowbugs, snails and millipedes.

Salamanders may look like slimy, obese lizards, but they are the scourge of garden pests.

Already, The Cycle Renews

The last brown seed pod from this year's crop has not fallen from the acacia trees. Yet, already the cycle of renewal has begun. Slender, pale green, straw-like buds about three-inches long are taking shape. For six or seven months, these buds will swell. Then in February or March they will burst forth in golden cascades of blossoms. Acacias, it seems, never rest.

Sarge's Promise Leaves George With Problem Of Logistics

WASHINGTON — The political campaign is now under way, and we can expect to hear some wild promises made by the presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

Just the other da R. Sargent Shriver told the people of West Virginia that if George McGovern is elected, the poor people would be eating in the White House. He said there would be dinners there for people who need the food, rather than rich fat cats who have been invited to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue in the past.

I don't know if Shriver checked this out with McGovern, but it could raise some very serious logistical problems if the Democratic nominee is sworn in next January.

LET US ASSUME that McGovern has been elected President.

After he's been in the White House a few days, he says to his wife Eleanor, "We have to give a dinner for the poor people tomorrow night."

"How many will there be?"

"Sarge said 1,300,054 people."

"You've got to be kidding," Eleanor says. "I don't have that many place settings."

"Can't you borrow some from Eunice?"

"Even if I did, we wouldn't have enough room to serve them all."

"Yes, I thought of that. But Sarge promised that the first dinner we had in the White House would be for the poor people, and our credibility is at stake."

"WELL, WHY DOESN'T he give the dinner then? He has more money than we do," Eleanor says angrily.

"Because he's not the Prsident. It doesn't have to be a sit-down dinner, you know. It could be buffet."

"I don't care," Eleanor says, "I'm not going in the kitchen and tell the chef to prepare a buffet for 1,300,054 people."

"Couldn't we have it catered?" McGovern asks.

"This is ridiculous. We'll use up our entire entertainment allowance in our first dinner. What are we going to do for the rest of the four years?"

"Maybe we could freeze the leftovers," McGovern suggests.

"I still say Sarge got us into this — let him get out of it," Eleanor says.

"HOW ABOUT the strolling Air Force Strings for entertainment?" McGovern asks.

"You said you were going to cut them out of the defense budget," Eleanor reminds him.

"Oh yes, I forgot that. Did I promise to cut the Marine band, too?"

"Down to one Franch horn and two tuba players."

"Hmm. Maybe Warren Beatty can rustle up the Grateful Dead."

"George, I don't think this is going to work. More than 25 million people in this country go to bed hungry every night. You can't just invite 1,300,054 and not expect the others to be very angry."

"Well, you cant' have every poor person in the country to the White House," McGovern says. "It would be impractical."

"Why didn't you tell that to Shriver before he opened his mouth in West Virginia?"

"Maybe we could have the 1,300,054 for dinner and invite the rest in for coffee and dessert."

"All right," says Eleanor, "I'll do it. But Sarge has to address the invitations."

Just An Un-Average Guy

Behind The News

By MELVIN MADDOCKS
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

"Persons who oppose the war in Vietnam tend to buy imported Roquefort cheese and wild rice."

—Emanuel H. Denby in Psychology Today

Alfred P. used to be an absolutely Average Consumer. He cut his hair not too short, not too long. He wore not-too-wide, not-too-narrow neckties — patterns of modesty against his white shirt. He drove a car not too prestigious, not too cheap, not too new, not too old. He lived in a sort of colonial-ranch-split-level with just the approved mortgage for his income, which was, of course, median.

Alfred P. kept up with the Joneses but never, never got ahead of them. He constituted the human statistic in the middle —a living masterpiece of inconspicuous conformity. He was the anonymous man who made name brands . . . well, name brands. And he was proud of it.

Then he read the article in Psychology Today, and his life changed.

There are, he learned from Emanuel Denby, two kinds of consumer: the "Passive Consumer" and the "Creative Consumer." The Passive Consumer is a rather timid, colorless character who puts his money in the bank and for his big times, watches sports on TV. He thinks of himself as "cooperative, steady, good-natured, reliable, self-controlled, patient, stable, and reserved."

The Passive Consumer — this paragon of dullness — Alfred clearly saw was himself.

The Creative Consumer, on the other hand, dreams of being "innovative, progressive, imaginative, foresighted, sociable and responsible." He throws one-and-a-half times as many parties as Passive Consumer — and, oh yes, they are "better parties." Furthermore, his wife wears her skirts higher than Passive Consumer's wife, and he is more "curious about life." While Passive Consumer is slumped before his idiot box, Creative Consumer is out golfing or skiing, "often with professional instruction."

The Creative Consumer, concluded Denby and Psychology Today, belongs to the "vanguard" that "lives on the edge of change; in effect, they create the economy of the country."

Alfred flung down his latest not-too-wide, not-too-narrow tie and resolved to join this new elite. He purchased a mod wardrobe because 47 per cent of those "venturesome" Creative Consumers spend more than $300 a year on their clothes (as compared with 20 per cent of the Passive Consumers). He bought an electric blender because three-and-a-half times as many Creative Consumers own blenders. (Poor Passive Consumers "don't know what to put in a blender, how the blender works, or when it is best to use one.")

Alfred P. — the new Alfred P. — quite literally has gone for broke. Like all the other Creative Consumers, he dutifully drinks four times as much bitter lemon as the Passive Consumer and dines out three-and-a-half times as often. Twice as many Creative Consumers buy new cars; so Alfred buys a new car.

Instead of painting his house, refinishing furniture, and doing his own plumbing —all Passive Consumer avocations — he travesl to Europe and joins a book club. He gives his daughter ballet lessons, his son violin lessons, and sends them both to private school.

And, of course, he changes his politics. For if the Creative Consumer "scores higher on all of the questions that relate to the ways man has fun," he also "expresses much greater concern for civil and human rights."

Nibbling on his imported Roquefort cheese and wolfing his wild rice, Alfred is now liberal, bankrupt and happy. And why not? For he isn't really in the "vanguard" at all. He belongs to the new majority. Endlessly self-conscious about what's in, what's out — opinions as well as neckties — he has fallen right into the middle again.

Meet the new Alfred, meet the new American. Is he better? Is he worse? Mostly he is less innocent. Buying diluted counterculture like a supermarket commodity, afraid of nothing so much as being a square, here is Babbitt come to a "life-style" — and like the original Babbitt, he is worthy of our laughter and our tears.

A Visit With Alexandra

By PEGGY POLK

VALLEY COTTAGE, N.Y. (UPI)—Alexandra Tolstoy was born 88 years ago into a world that no longer exists.

The 12th of the great Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy's 13 children, she grew up in czarist Russia nourished by the writing of her father, the baroque ritual of the Russian Orthodox Church and the beauty of the Russian countryside.

At the age of 17 she became her father's confidential secretary. At 2 she was at his side when he fled the family estate to seek a more "spiritual" life and instead found death on the journey. He died of pneumonia at 82.

Alexandra remained in Russia through the revolution and after to edit the first 92-volume edition of her father's work and to establish the Tolstoy Museum.

Then, in 1929, she left her homeland on what the Soviet government believed was to be a brief visit to Japan. Once there she bought a steerage class passage and set sail for America with $50 in her pocket.

A staunch anti-Communist, she has never returned to Russia but has dedicated the rest of her life to helping fellow White Russian refugees and to preserving their culture through the Tolstoy Foundation.

(In November 1964, Miss Tolstoy spoke in San Rafael, saying the West and Communist societies could not and should not co-exist peacefully.)

A small woman, she was dressed in a blue and white seersucker dress the day of our interview. Her white hair drawn back in a bun, she sat in her small study in her cottage on Tolstoy Farm with her two fox terriers, Mickey and Betsy, at her feet. At her side was her cane on which someone—she forgets who—had painted flowers.

ALEXANDRA TOLSTOY
She misses Russia

She walks with a cane because of arthritis but she is exceptionally vigorous for her age. Until last year, when she was weakened by the flu, she drove a car and enjoyed fishing.

The walls of the cottage are covered with photographs of family and friends, President Nixon, sketches and watercolors of Russian scenes. Books are stacked on tables, shelves and windowsills. A pile of manila folders holds notes and four completed chapters for the book she is writing on the Tolstoy Foundation.

She still gardens and outside her roses were in bloom.

"I don't know which country I like best," she says after 43 years in America. But she misses Russia. The people most of all, then nature.

"Where I was born it's a very beautiful place, an estate called Yasnaia Poliana," she said. "There are forests and there are meadows, forests and then meadows. My father used to go riding on horseback and I would follow him."

Miss Tolstoy, the only surviving Tolstoy child, was born after her father had completed his monumental "War and Peace" and "Anna Karenina." She remembers him after he had put his materpieces from his mind and wanted only to write evangelical tales for Russia's peasants.

"When people asked him what is the greatest work he wrote, he said, 'The stories for the simple folk, for the peasants,' " Miss Tolstoy said.

As her father's secretary she would copy his work on a Remington typewriter sent as a gift to Tolstoy by its American makers.

"He would write a first draft. I would copy it with big margins all around and bring it to him at nine in the morning. At one or half past one he would come to lunch and I would pick up the manuscript and there was nothing left — he had written in the margins, in between each line, everywhere there was space. And I would copy it again.

"I remember I copied one article 50 times."

Miss Tolstoy (she is a countess but her father, a count, preferred not to use the title and she feels the same) has lived and worked for more than three decades with Mrs. Tatiana Schaufuss, another exile.

Together 33 years ago they founded the Tolstoy Foundation which has helped to resettle 23,000 Russian refugees and was instrumental in blocking Soviet attempts to force tens of thousands more to return to the Soviet Union after World War II.

Recently they built a 96-bed nursing home for aged refugees on their 50-acre farm in this Hudson River community near New York City. Next they want to raise money to add a museum and an institute of Russian studies on the land given to them by the Harkness family.

She is highly critical of Svetlana Alliluyeva, even though Stalin's daughter gave the Tolstoy Foundation $50,000 from the royalties from her first book.

"She could do so much for Russia, knowing what Stalin has done in Russia. She should tell this instead of living as she does — marrying and now divorcing," Miss Tolstoy said. "She is a fool."

The 'Glades Need Love To Survive

By MARY KIRKLAND
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — In the winter of 1971 flames spread throughout the Everglades. Coastal towns that had been gulping water from the drained lands finally were forced to ration their intake. Inland, thousands of fresh-water fish perished.

In this atmosphere, Everglades National Park personnel began a program to bring fourth-grade students from almost all the schools in Dade County to a special, unburned section of the park.

They figured that if the Everglades area was to survive, it needed love.

Adults, they decided, either already loved the Everglades or were ready to pave it. Children were the ones to reach.

"A Day in the 'Glades" was devegped to instill love. It was given a budget of $51,321, or $1.28 per child.

This year 9,000 children have visited the Everglades and both school district and park personnel praise the program as one of the best in existence.

The area chosen (the Shark Valley Loop Road) had been closed to the public for three years. It features the most concentrated wildlife in the park.

Sixty students ride down the road every school day of the year and even with that schedule only a third of the 25,000 fourth graders in Dade County have the opportunity to visit Shark Valley.

Some of the children have been to the park before but many others have not. One ranger tells of a "misty, choked-up feeling" he gets when inner-city kids who thought "wildlife" meant cockroaches and rats see their first white heron.

Once 60 inner-city children piled to the front of the bus to watch a little Everglades deer, once almost hunted to extinction, bounce along in front of them. The white tail led all the way to the fire tower at the end of the trail.

The bus comes to a halt at this 50-foot-high fire tower. Another ranger and three Miccosukee Indians meet them there and the kids split into two groups.

One group climbs the fire tower, from which they can look down on the River of Grass to see deer grazing and alligators sleeping.

The other group goes on a treasure hunt. They find fossil sand dollars in the parking lot and identify plant life before ending the hunt by discovering a long, but harmless. Indigo snake in a cage.

"We encourage the children to pick up the snake," says Dale Smith, assistant chief naturalist. "If they touch it, they will find that it isn't an evil, slimy thing, but just a natural part of the environment.

"Too many of these children think of the Everglades as a place filled with poisonous snakes and darkness," he adds. "We want to show them the beauty."

One of the rangers who lives at the fire station shows the children his pet raccoon. "I think you are the luckiest man in the whole world to have your own raccoon," says one of the girls.

The ranger hasn't made up his mind about that, "especially wnen it tipped over the garbage in his small living quarters and scattered orange peels through the rooms."

After a lunch eaten on the moat-surrounded fire-tower location, it's time to fish.

The rangers bait the hooks and untangle lines as the students concentrate on hooking four- and five-pound bass from the 10-foot-deep barrow holes.

The more silent ones are rewarded by the quiet intrusion of blue heron, white heron, white ibis, anhingas, little green herons and wood storks to the edge of their fishing holes.

Throughout the fishing time one ranger takes Polaroid pictures of students with their fish and gives them the pictures later.

"We want to give them something tangible to help them remember what a good time they had here," Smith comments. "Then maybe when they will have basic environmental decisions to make, they'll remember what they learned and use the experience to help them make their judgments."

The Chains' Big Fight To Survive

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK — Food chains are struggling as hard as housewives to make ends meet these days.

Despite some charges of "middleman profiteering," the trend toward higher food and meat prices has done little to fatten the coffers of supermarket operators.

During the first six months of 1972, the industry's after-tax profits skidded to 0.7 cents on each sales dollar — their worst drubbing in more than a decade. In 1971 food chains earned 0.9 cents on the dollar.

The industry's profit woes are well recognized on Wall Street, if not in Washington. Since the temporary price freeze of August 1971, the market value of food chain shares has plummeted by almost $1 billion.

Food chain executives blame declining profit margins on a resurgence in price competition and discounting among major chains, and —to a lesser extent — on Phase 2 controls. Both have made it difficult for stores to recoup rising labor and other operating costs at the checkout counters.

"Competition bas been a more effective price regulator than Washington's controls" said Thomas McMaster, chairman of Detroit's Allied Supermarkets, the nation's 11th-largest chain.

Phase 2 rules allow supermarkets to pass on any increases in wholesale grocery costs, provided they don't exceed normal markups that prevailed before last year's freeze. But as a practical matter, McMaster pointed out, keen competition has forced most large chains either to shave their markups in most product lines or suffer a loss of business.

Although rising food prices have been a sore point with Washington inflation-watchers, supermarkets executives doubt the Nixon administration will make any major moves to roll back retail prices.

"With 90 per cent of the industry operating below the profit margin ceilings allowed by the Price Commission, additional controls might seriously damage the industry's viability," one top executive commented.

What's more worrisome than close scrutiny by Washington right now, industry leaders agree, are the spreading "price wars" that rage in Detroit, New York, Cleveland, Chicago and Washington.

Largely in response to a hard-hitting new discounting policy by Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., the industry giant, many chains are trimming grocery prices, dropping trading stamps and extending store hours.

In a crash effort to regain a fading leadership position, A&P last year began converting its 4,200 stores to "WEO" (where economy originates) discount units. Dropping prices a few cents on hundreds of grocery items, selling merchandise directly from bulk cartons and concentrating on fast-moving items, the $5.5 billion-a-year retailer is seeking to reverse a steady decline in sales volume and profits.

To date, more than two-thirds of all A&P units have hoistedthe distinctive green WEO posters, luring a bevy of new shoppers and producing some pained outcries from smaller competitors.

"A&P is squeezing everybody," acknowledged an official of Giant food stores, a medium-sized Washington, D.C., chain that until recently was unchallenged as the area's leading discounter.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Who was doing what and where about the Vietnam war was clear. But what the reasons were behind the flurry of activity ranging from Washington to Paris, from Hanoi to Saigon, was much in dispute. Was they anything more than speculation to the idea that a breakthrough had come in the Paris peace talks? Was the meeting between presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Thieu in Saigon a sign of such a breakthrough? Or was it, as Democratic presidential candidate Sen. George McGovern charged, a public relations gesture in an election year?

Did Pierre Salinger's meeting, at McGovern's request, with North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris pose a threat to peace negotiations, as the Nixon administration said? Or was it, as McGovern maintained, a sincere gesture on his part to step closer to peace by telling the North Vietnamese that they should not wait for a change in administrations but negotiate peace whenever they could?

The cloudy distinctions between reality and campaign oratory were further blurred by Democratic candidate Sargent Shriver's charge that the Nixon administration flubbed an opportunity for peace in its first months, and by the Republican reply that, if such an opportunity was flubbed, it was the Johnson administration which flubbed it.

Nor did the return of former Attorney General Ramsey Clark from a visit to Hanoi clarify matters. Clark said the United States was bombing schools, hospitals and dikes in the North. John Mitchell, Clark's successor, said Clark was giving aid and comfort to the North Vietnamese.

And the meeting between Kissinger and Thieu had its own complications. Kissinger flew to Saigon after talking with North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho, who promptly returned to Hanoi. That sparked the speculation of a breakthrough. But Thieu said he was too busy to meet with Kissinger right away.

When they did meet almost a day after Kissinger's arrival in Saigon, they smiled and chatted but said nothing about their conversation. Thieu, however, had said at the beginning of the week that the United States must keep up "relentless bombing" of the North for another six or seven months.

Toward the end of the week, American planes were conducting the heaviest bombing raids of the war against the North.

Londoners Still The Safest From Crime

By WILLIAM F. WRIGHT

LONDON (UPI)—In an era of rising crime rates, London remains the safest of all great metropolises.

Most Londoners can't define it—perhaps it's the friendly, unarmed "bobbies," the placid British public, the reassuring red doubledecker buses, the staid black beetle cabs—but for them there is a certain something that breeds a sense of security in a violent world.

The feeling is supported by statistics and, excluding strifetorn Northern Ireland, embraces the whole of these snug, sceptered British Isles.

In many cases, especially crimes involving violence, the crime count actually is going down.

New York-type muggings with guns or knives were so rare in London last year they failed to rate a mention in the crime statistics. And in a metropolitan area with a combined resident and transient population last year of about 16 million, there were only 6,000 purse-snatchings, pocket pickings and other petty personal crimes.

That meant the odds against such a thing happening were about 2,500 to 1.

Police recorded only 77 cases of murder in London last year compared with at least 58 murders in a single week in New York in July of this year.

There were 117 murders overall in England and Wales in 1971, or about three murders per million of the population. In West Germany, with about the same population, there were 700.

Despite a British penchant for spectacular crimes—great train robberies, multiple murders, etc.—crime actually has declined statistically in Britain since Jack the Ripper's days of the last century. In 1895, about half a million convictions for all kinds of offenses were reported. In 1971, excluding traffic offenses, there were still about half a million convictions. In the meantime, the population iccreased by about 50 per cent.

Reported rape cases in London last year, 107, were down from the previous year's 141. Manslaughter and infanticide were down from 54 to 41.

Criminologists attribute the low murder rate and the general not-so-violent nature of British society to the country's stringent anti-gun laws, which make it difficult for a private individual to buy firearms.

Although the British underworld has shown a growing disregard recently for the old unwritten understanding with police not to use guns in bank robberies and similar crimes, the government holds that arming the police would "probably lead more to the escalation of violence than to increased protection for police or anyone else."

Waterway To The Ross Valley

Winding in graceful curves to San Francisco Bay, Corte Madera Creek descends from the hills of its origin to the broad flood plain where development is marching upon its banks. Townhouses, about 186 units, have been constructed along the creek (left center), while apartments are planned along the north bank (right center), and Piper Park (center) with its baseball diamond is slated to be the new location for the Larkspur Police Department's headquarters. The vacant land along the north shore (lower right), adjacent to Bon Air Shopping Center has been considered as a potential site for a regional shopping center. Much of the scene is dominated by Redwood High School (center) and its playing fields near a residential lagoon. A cluster of apartments on Bon Air Hill and the towers of the Tamalpais retirement residence loom above the north bank (center), and beyond the buildings and athletic field at Marin Catholic High School. In the upper center, the creek passes yet another educational center and athletic field on the College of Marin campus in Kentfield. Hidden by the hills are the Ross Valley cities of Ross, San Anselmo and Fairfax.

NBC-TV's John Chancellor, left, and David Brinkley in the photograph above will be only one of the network teams covering the Republican National Convention from Miami Beach, Fla., as all three networks concentrate their facilities and personnel Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on coverage of that event. Coverage of the 1972 Summer Olympic Games, from Munich, Germany, however, will be exclusively an ABC-TV affair, beginning with a preview show on Friday and with the opening ceremonies the following day. "Anchor men" for ABC will be Jim McKay, left, and Chris Schenkel as shown in the photograph at right. The Games will continue through Sept. 10.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

"The Carol Burnett Show," the best all-round variety program on television, will start its sixth season in the fall for CBS. Among the guests so far scheduled for the new season are James Garner, Pearl Bailey, Melba Moore, Sammy Davis Jr., Carl Reiner, Tim Conway, Carol Channing, Steve Lawrence, Edie Gorme, Bernadette Peters and Jim Nabors. The latter, who has been the guest on the opening show for five seasons, again will do the honors on Sept. 13.

Patrick Macnee, the Scottish actor who became so well known to American video viewers through his role as the debonair leading man of "The Avengers" series, is the new star of Broadway's long-run suspense play, "Sleuth."

ABC has scheduled for Sept. 10 a 90-minute entertainment special saluting television's 25th anniversary. Many of the early stars, some of whom are still around, such as Bob Hope, Lucille Ball and Dinah Shore, will appear. Some may think that this is jumping the gun by a year, preferring to date the beginning of big-time, regularly scheduled video from the fall of 1948.

The Making Of The Candidate

By BOB THOMAS

For many years Hollywood held to the maxim, "Political pictures don't sell." If that's true, then how do you explain the current success of "The Candidate?"

No film within memory has been more blatantly political. It is a step-by-step analysis of a California race by a young liberal lawyer, played by Robert Redford, for the U.S. Senate seat held by a confirmed conservative, Don Porter. There is no melodrama and scarcely any plot.

"THE CANDIDATE" originated with Redford, who has a design to make a series of films depicting the American scene, especially on the theme of winning. It was directed by Michael Ritchie, who made Redford's "Downhill Racer," and produced by Walter Coblenz.

The film has a script by Jeremy Larner, a worker for the Eugene McCarthy campaign in 1968. A consultant on the picture was Nelson Rising, who helped manage John Tunney's successful race for the U.S. Senate in 1970.

Producer Coblenz and consultant Rising were discussing the success of "The Candidate."

"At a production cost of one and a half million dollars, the picture is bound to get into a profit situation," said Coblenz. He admitted that the film industry's traditional prejudice against political pictures at least partly dictated the modest budget.

"We felt we could make a big-looking picture at that price," said the producer, "and we got something in return: tremendous freedom. Warner Brothers let us go off and shoot it (much of it in Marin) without any interference."

PROFESSIONALS who view "The Candidate" are amazed that it could have been made for a million and a half. Crowd scenes galore. The big look to the film was the result of careful planning — and the campaign know-how of Rising.

"For all the crowd scenes we used real people, not Hollywood extras," said Coblenz. "Sometimes we made contributions to political clubs. We did that to get 2,500 people for the labor temple scene, which was filmed in the old Paramount theater in Oakland."

Country Music Goes European

Western European television viewers are in for some first-hand reports on the international growth of country music.

A television network in West Germany has filmed a portion of a country music fair in Nashville, Tenn., and said it would be viewed by about 30 million people in Western Europe.

Politics And TV's Big 'Glass Eye'

By JACK WAUGH

Ever since 1948 when television first thrust its big glass eye into politics, politicians haven't been sure whether they have been using it or it has been using them.

Winners swear by it. Losers swear at it. Underdogs are lifted to victory by it. Front-runners are undone by it.

It has transferred campaigns largely from the stump to the tube. It has put cosmetics into politics and taken squeaky voices out. It has shown both the doldrums of politics and its most heroic hours on prime time. It has made candidates more visible to the public and the public less visible to the candidates.

It has caused Nicholas Johnson of the Federal Communications Commission to prophesy that "our presidential campaign is really going to be waged between two television consultants nobody knows."

IT HAS DONE all that and it is likely to do it all again, because no matter what else television is to politics — what it has become or ever has been and what it has ever done or not done — running without it is unthinkable.

In some alcoves of the political process, TV is pervasive. It virtually controls the hours, nature, and character of the two national political conventions.

It dictates the time. The delegates convene at Miami Beach at 7:30 because that is television's prime time. It dictates how the hall will be lighted, specifies the kind of public-address system, and is clearly the way most Americans — including politicians — follow the convention.

On election nights, television preempts not only all the airways, but the entire nation's time. And its anchormen — Walter & John & David & Harry & Howard — are names better known to the nation than most candidates.

IN THE LAST presidential election the three major candidates spent 21 million dollars among them to put their cases to the voters on TV. Richard Nixon spent 12 million; Hubert Humphrey, six million; and George Wallace, three million.

Two years later, in 1970, Republican candidates for all offices in the nation spent $16,531,867 for radio and TV — and mostly TV — and the Democrats spent $14,257,198.

Last year the first campaign-spending reform law in 40 years passed the Congress, limiting each candidate in 1972 to only 13.9 million dollars in advertising — 8.4 million dollars for television and radio. Most political TV media men believe that will be enough.

But buying time on TV isn't the only way a politician gets there. There are talk shows, panel shows, press conferences, documentaries, national conventions, and the 6 o'clock news.

HOWEVER, THE other side of television —and its most controversial aspect — is universally regarded as that part that is bought and paid for. And the spot advertisement, the 10-second "quickie," has won a reputation as a black-caped villain that defiles politics, the voters, television, and the democratic process. It enters the scene to hisses and boos.

Newscaster Frank Reynolds of the American Broadcasting Co. has said that "the slick political spots now polluting the air are no less injurious to public health" than cigarette advertising.

Anchorman Howard K. Smith, also of ABC, has charged that the 10-second to 60-second commercial "is made to order for trickery, innuendo, implications, or reason, smear, or irrelevance."

THERE IS an outcry to banish them from the airwaves altogether and replace them with five-minute spots and even with longer 15-and 30-minute shows in which a candidate can be fleshed out to fuller dimension and seen in all his issue-and-image splendor by the electorate that sits at home.

But despite this, the 10 to 60-second spot is still seen by professionals as the essential single cog of political weaponry on television. And as such it has its defenders.

The voter that the spots are likely to reach is the one the candidate needs most — the undecided, independent, ticket-splitting, show-me-if-you-can variety. He is not very interested in politics, and yet he is the swing voter, the one who decides who wins. He's the kind that sees a 15-minute or 30-minute show about Charlie Candidate listed in his TVguide and snaps the dial over to Archie Bunker.

HE HAS GOT to be sneaked up on and taken by surprise. The only way his attention and a political pitch are likely to mesh is by accident.

And as Allan D. Gardner of David, Oskner & Mitchneck Inc., a New York advertising agency says: "The longer you make your spot, the more likely

TV Poses Problems For Politics

the viewer will be to switch the dial somewhere else."

A typical TV viewer's attention span to politics isn't noted for excessive length. Besides, says Gardner, he has a built-in filter system.

When a spot flashes on the set he looks on it as a commercial and "filters out 30 to 50 percent of the content." The candidate is lucky if his name survives the process. But in some cases the name may be enough.

The biggest audience ever recorded for a half-hour paid political program — a Lyndon Johnson show — was seven million. Most of them draw four million or less, a rating that would drum a commercial show off the network the next day.

ALLAN GARDNER says: "The way TV is structured today you either get the 10 to 60-second spot or nothing. And like it or not it often is the one brief link with the candidate that many voters are ever going to have."

This bothers most critics of the spot, who say it is impossible to make a serious and useful statement in 60 seconds or less.

To which Joe Napolitan, the veteran media manager of many political campaigns, retorts: "If elected I will unilaterally withdraw all of our troops from Vietnam within three months of election day." "I will go to Korea." "Will you marry me?" "I love you."

Another reason candidates must fall back on the quickie message crammed between shows on prime time is that the climax of the political campaigns and the TV rating season arrive at the studios the same time of the year — the early fall — and any political message longer than 60 seconds is hard to come by.

"IT IS DIFFICULT enough to buy five, 15, or 30 minutes on TV any time," says Ruth Jones, recognized by many media men as the best buyer of TV time in the country. "But in the rating season when the new shows start, you not only get viewers screaming at you if you preempt a prime time show, but the networks don't like it either. It's a lot easier to buy time in June than in October."

But even after a candidate buys his time, films his spots, edits his 15 minutes and 30-minute documentary specials, do they do any good?

Walter de Vries and V. Lance Tarrance, a political scientist and a census statistician, respectively, have tried to answer that in a book called "The Ticket-Splitter." The answer: not as much good as getting on TV without paying for it does.

THEY SAY there are two kinds of TV exposure — controlled and uncontrolled. The controlled embraces all the paid programs that can be stage-managed by the candidate's media men. The uncontrolled variety is getting on TV and taking your chances — on talk shows, panels and news programs.

De Vries and Tarrant say the kind of voter that counts — the unpredictable ticket-splitter — prefers the uncontrolled type overwhelmingly. Of the nine kinds of media that can be bought and controlled by the candidate, includign TV spots, none crop up in the De Vries-Tarrant "very important" group of election-time persuaders. Indeed, De Vries and Tarrant rank TV ads 24th down the list.

While Allan Gardner is not basically a disciple of the sharp school of television critics, he does believe that the impact of TV on a political campaign is overrated.

HE REMEMBERS that in May, 1968, before Mr. Nixon started spending his 12 million dollars on TV, his standing in the Gallup poll was 43 per cent. On election day, six months and 12 million dollars later, he won 43 per cent of the vote. He hadn't moved a point higher.

And throughout the campaign the highest he ever went was 45 per cent.

In the candidate-crammed Florida Democratic primary this year, where spot messages were so frequent Ruth Jones says "boredom and confusion, utter confusion" set in.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay bought $170,000 of broadcast time and got 7 per cent of the votes. George Wallace spent $75,000 and got 42 per cent. Hubert Humphrey spent the same as Wallace and got 18 per cent. And Edmund Muskie spent $150,000 and got only 9 per cent.

What nobody cares to say is how a candidate would do if he didn't buy TV time at all. And neither does anybody have the nerve to try. Ruth Jones dismisses the whole idea as out of the question. "Let's face it," she says, "TV is still the greatest mass media we have. It has to be important. How can you possibly say a mass media of sight and sound isn't instrumental in this age?"

THE POLITICAL landscape is full of names that meant nothing or very little to voters before they mounted massive TV campaigns.

When John Lindsay decided to run for mayor of New York City in 1965, he was hardly known beyond the "silk stocking district" he represented in Congress — until Ruth Jones started buying his TV time.

"In the Bronx," for instance, she says, "nobody had heard of him. So the first trick was to get his name known. We started early, with 10 spots interspersed on baseball exhibition game broadcasts. We aimed for high frequency, the programs that had the most listeners and viewers."

After most of New York had at least heard of him, Ruth Jones began buying time to put across the image the candidate wanted: "a man in shirt sleeves walking among the people — the common man."

IN 1969, WHEN Lindsay ran again, the problem was totally different.

"We had to overcome the unpopularity he had roused by dint of being mayor of New York for four years," says Ruth Jones. "We figured we had to go after the Jewish middle-class housewife. So we booked all the time we could around the Gabe Pressman show, which we knew was the show most of them watched." And it worked.

The most common charge against TV in politics today is that it turns a political campaign into a struggle of images — and may the most telegenic image win.

Roger Ailes, a TV consultant to the Richard Nixon campaign in 1968, says this may not be so bad.

"Nine months from now," he says, "the six issues so important today may not be important at all. There may be six new ones instead. But what kind of a man a candidate is, who he is, is still going to be important. Image is crucial and I am not sure that is wrong."

CHARLES GUGGNEHEIM, the Academy Award-winning documentary filmmaker who is running the McGovern media campaign, says: "We will echo what the candidate is doing on the stump."

He says the campaign expects to put 25 per cent of its legally alloted 8.4 million dollars for TV and radio advertising into network advertising and 75 per cent into local TV.

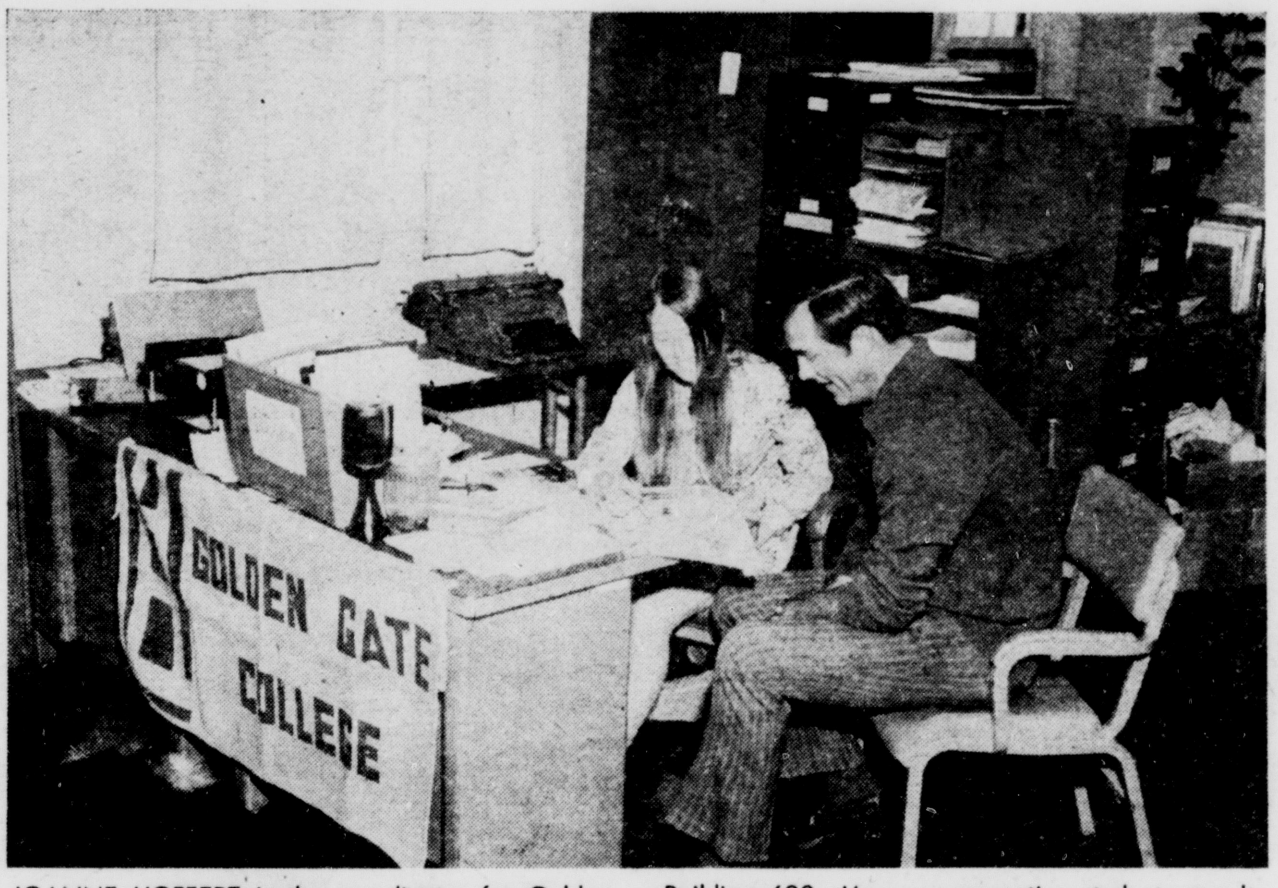
A College Campus At The Air Base In Building 630



JOANNE HOFFERT is the coordinator for Golden Gate College of San Francisco for the courses, open to both civilians and servicemen, it offers at Hamilton Air Force Base in the Education Center in Building 630. Here a prospective student consults Mrs. Hoffert concerning those classes. Other institutions of higher education also offer high school, college and graduate-level courses at the base.

NOT TOO MANY Marin residents other than military personnel and their dependents have taken advantage of the college courses at Hamilton Base. An exception are these Dominican nuns. And Dominican College conducts a Master's Degree program in education-counseling at the base.

INSTRUCTORS WITH diverse and practical experience in the fields in which they are teaching are one of the big attractions of the Hamilton Air Force Base Education Center program. For example, the instructor here is George Cardin, an associate economist with the First California National Bank.

(Air Force photos by S/Sgt. Byron Baird)

Marinites are familiar with their College of Marin Dominican College and the seminaries — and justly proud of those institutions of higher education.

But there's another educational program — virtually a small college — functioning in their county of which they are largely unaware.

It goes almost unnoticed because it operates behind the gates of Hamilton Air Force Base.

Yet the educational opportunities it affords are open to civilians and service personnel alike.

THE SITE IS ununimposing military structure — Building 630, or the base's Education Center. But inside are taught courses that run the span from the high school level to graduate school studies.

Military personnel wishing to work toward a high school diploma get a helping hand from Naomi Ingram, education specialist who coordinates the courses offered on the base under Novato Adult Evening High School auspices.

"Most of our military personnel and many of their dependents earn their high school diplomas in two semesters," reports Mrs. Ingram.

These people usually come to Mrs. Ingram with one or two years of high school work already to their credit. These credits, plus credit awarded for the General Education Development Test and/or work experience on the part of the student usually put that student very close to the diploma.

OFTEN, SHE SAYS, all that remains is the completion of the required courses in U.S. History and U.S. Government.

Mrs. Ingram says the greatest gratification from her work comes when these people, their high school diplomas earned, then go on to college courses while at Hamilton Base.

An Associate of Arts Degree is available from two institutions through programs at the air base.

The first is the Marin Community College District's new Indian Valley College, established to relieve the ever burgeoning student population at College of Marin and scheduled for a permanent Novato campus, but already functioning at Hamilton in Building 630.

COL. VERMONT Garrison, base commander, and Daniel Spelling, education officer, point out that both the college and the base benefit from the arrangement, giving the school a badly needed temporary home and the base the benefits of the enriched educational program.

Dr. Ernest H. Berg, president of Indian Valley College, expresses his school's appreciation of access to a facility where it can offer day as well as evening classes, pending the realization of its own campus.

Beginning in September there will be 23 classes offered during the day at Hamilton in the area of lower division general education credit — such courses as English, Sociology, Psychology,

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

WHY CARPET? Sometimes it's worth reminding ourselves of the many answers to that question. There are some very good reasons that go far beyond the basic purpose of esthetic appeal and luxurious appearance.

Easier housekeeping, for instance. Vacuuming is a quick and easy way to have your rooms looking fresh and clean. No mopping, no scrubbing, no waxing or polishing chores to worry about with wall-to-wall carpets.

Quiet is another important plus. Carpets muffle the sounds of children playing or television blaring, even party sounds that would otherwise be nerve-shattering. Footsteps fade softly on carpets, and the sounds you want to hear — good conversation, music, entertainment — are more of a pleasure to enjoy.

Want more? There's extra warmth and insulation, beneficial to the whole family and especially to young children who like to play or read the paper spread out on the carpet. There's safety, without feet slipping or skidding on polished floors. And there's the foot comfort and reduction of fatigue for the woman who puts in long hours at home.

Good carpeting puts it all together — beauty, comfort, warmth, easy care and quiet — for a lot less than you might expect. Look over our carpet displays, a wonderful world of color and texture that belongs in your home. For selection and savings too, visit and Physics. During the evening there will also be classes from 7 to 10 p.m. in American Studies, Psychology (1a), Biology, and Real Estate Principles.

College Classes At The Air Base

Hamilton Has Busy Program

THE LAST class mentioned is also the beginning of a program in which 18 hours of real estate courses and six elective hours will entitle the student to a Real Estate Certificate. In the spring semester, two courses in this program will be offered and all subsequent real estate classes will be held on base in the evening.

The fee per unit for all courses offered by Indian Valley is $3 per unit if the student is over 21 years of age. If younger, no fee is charged the student.

The other Associate of Arts Degree program on the base is offered by Golden Gate College (to become a university in September) of San Francisco. Sixty units of credit are needed for this A.A. in General Studies. Eighteen of the 60 units are required courses such as English, math, and U.S. History, and 48 units are elective credit.

JOANNE HOFFERT, Golden Gate's on base coordinator, does not like to stress the A.A. Degree as an end goal with that school. She says: "Most of our students are ultimately working for a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Management or Economics and it is generally only when they have a move coming up that they fall back on the A.A. Degree as a sort of unification of all their prior credits and as an interim goal."

Because of the cost factor and the availability of junior colleges in the area, Golden Gate's on-base program does not offer many lower division courses in its yearly curriculum.

The fee for Golden Gate's courses is $35 per unit.

The Baccalaureate Program (B.A.) available on base is also provided by Golden Gate College. In fact, Golden Gate has programs at 23 bases and with many corporations.

This is a fact that Daniel Spelling is quite proud of because it was at Hamilton, in 1965 and largely through the efforts of Spelling, that Golden Gate began its first off-campus program.

THIS B.A. Degree program is made up of five eight-week terms and one five-week summer term a year. This September the courses offered will be:

Principles of Economics, Monday and Thursday; Law of Contract and Agency, Tuesday and Thursday; Government and Business, Monday and Thursday; and Principles of Organization and Management, Tuesday and Thursday.

THE STUDENTS HERE are participants in the education-counseling Master's Degree program conducted at Hamilton Air Force Base by Dominican College in San Rafael. So far the program has produced one degree recipient, but several others will complete their work in the immediate future.

According to Mrs. Hoffert, most of the students are quite happy with the compact term (two three-hour classes weekly) because it allows them more scheduling control from temporary duty assignments. Therefore fewer class withdrawals are experienced through this arrangement.

During each eight-week term, four classes are conducted carrying three resident credits each. For the most part these are upper division classes and are usually rather small with an average of 15 to 20 students.

THE GENERAL make up of the classes traditionally has been four-fifths military and one-fifth civilian students. This is a situation that Mrs. Hoffert has been trying to alter since she began working for Golden Gate College a year ago. "I have been writing publicity articles, arranging photos and news stories each term and sending out schedules to the larger companies in the area, but so far I haven't been able to draw many new people from the civilian community."

It is not only the favorable small-class situation which is a plus, she emphasizes, but also the practical experience each of the instructors has acquired in the field in which he is teaching.

S/Sgt. Johnny Candy relates "In the two full years I have been attending Golden Gate's on-base proram, I have had only two professional instructors. The rest have been people who are actually working in industry during the day, and relating their experiences to us in the evening."

Two examples of this kind of expertise are both Novato residents.

Clair Anderson has been teaching for Golden Gate at Hamilton in the field of economics for three years. His primary job however, is vice-president of the First California National Bank in San Francisco.

DONALD RICHARDS has been teaching for two years. He is the personnel director of the South San Francisco School district and he has been teaching in the field of social and organizational aspects of management.

"Even though we are geared for management" says Mrs. Hoffert, "we are always searching for meaningful electives which will 'turn on' our students."

An example of this kind of course is a class currently in session, Cultural and Intellectual History of the United States. It is a large class of 30 and is made up of students of all races and from all parts of the country. The discussions are described by the instructor as "quite lively."

THIS PAST June, there were 24 students from the Hamilton campus who received degrees from Golden Gate, with the honors of having the highest baccalaureate grade point average going to CM/Sgt. Charles Sheeley.

Because of the Air Force's growing concern that all its personnel become knowledgeable in social problem areas, two other colleges offer classes on the base that emphasize social and political problems of today. They are the College of Notre Dame, and Sonoma State College.

The social area is handled by the College of Notre Dame, offering two classes in Sociology each semester, and , like Golden Gate, on an eight-week basis.

The College of Notre Dame is located in Belmont on the Peninsula and all courses offered at Hamilton carry full resident credit. It is possible to complete the requirements on base for the major area of concentration for the B.A. Degree in Sociology.

DAVID OLSON, the other education specialist at Hamilton,

A Place To Earn Those Degrees

coordinates this program with Notre Dame. He is pleased with the ever-increasing enrollment each semester and he and Spelling have been conferring with officials at the college about the possibility of having a full-time program on base in the near future.

IN ADDITION, Sonoma State College also offers extension courses at Hamilton. Its areas of concentration are Psychology and Political Science. These courses run on a semester basis and up to now only one course has been offered each semester. The Fall course to be offered in September is The Cultural Revolution, Wednesdays, 7 to 10 p.m.

S/Sgt. Joseph Mrenek, the non-commissioned officer in charge at the Education Center, is involved with this program and he is hopeful that a degree program may be starting soon here with Sonoma State College.

THERE ARE two Masters Degree programs on base as well. One in the field of Education-Counseling with Dominican College, and the other in the area of Systems Management with the University of Southern California.

The degree program with Dominican College of San Rafael has been on base since the Spring of 1971. Two graduate classes are offered each of three semesters a year. Thirty semester hours is the requirement for the M.S. in Education.

Both Master Degree programs are handled by David Olson. As to how many have received their degrees from Dominican, he explains, "Up to now we have had only one degree recipient, but there are several scheduled to complete their degree requirements by the fall semester."

Dominican's proximity lends itself well to providing instructors right from the main campus' faculty.

THE UNIVERSITY of Southern California offers a M.S. Degree in Systems Management.

"This is a very substantial program," relates Olson. "We have 30 or more students currently enrolled in our program, and this past June we had 12 students earn degrees."

The quality of instruction is first-rate, since the instructors are flown up to Hamilton from the Southern California campus every week. This ensures the constant high quality that is required of a prestigious school with the reputation of USC.

Another program with USC is now in the planning stages. Spelling is currently polling the area to see how much interest there is in a Doctorate of Education at Hamilton.

Which completes the roll call of higher educational opportunities available at Hamilton Base and its Building 630. These are, those in charge say, opportunities too often overlooked by Marin's civilian population seeking a school in which to earn a degree. Next time you whiz past Hamilton Base on Highway 101, they suggest you remember that there is a "college" functioning inside. And that its doors are open to you.

A PROUD and smiling Dan Spelling, center, education officer at Hamilton Air Force Base, presents a Master's Degree to Capt. David Cohen, left, and the Golden Gate College award to its highest grade point graduate to Sgt. Charles Sheeley, in ceremonies at the base.

Test drive a Sonett. And see why a sports car with front wheel drive makes sense.

Front wheel drive will make any car handle better and corner surer.

But it's especially good to have in a sports car. Because, after all, a person drives a sports car for the way it handles and responds.

But besides front wheel drive, you'll find a lot of other things about the Sonett that make sense.

Things like rack and pinion steering, a fiberglass body with an anti-corrosion treated bottom, front disc brakes, dual built-in roll bars, radial tires, retractable headlamps... things that make the Sonett one of the most exciting sports cars you'll ever drive.

At Saab, they have some very definite ideas about how a sports car should be built.

And they built the Sonett to be one of the most sensible sports cars on the road.

In every respect.

"It lets the students see the environment where the Indians once lived. Then they can really feel what they have studied in the classroom," says an instructor concerning a College of Marin anthropological field trip."

Marin Students Explore Land Of The Yahi Indians

By DONNA HOROWITZ

They trod the same paths, slept on the same ground and swam in the same streams as the last Indians to inhabit their native habitat in Northern America while living as a tribe in their centuries-old way-of-life.

This group of some 30 College of Marin anthropology students spent four days this summer in Tehama County looking for signs of the now extinct Yahi natives of that area.

They were students enrolled in the anthropology classes of John McBeath and Peter Kassebaum. And the field trip was planned, not as a class requirement, but as a supplement to the classroom studies.

THE STUDENTS went to Tehama County well prepared for what they would discover there.

Part of that preparation was the reading of Theodra Kroeber's classic "Ishi in Two Worlds."

Ishi was the Yahi Indian believed by anthropologists to be the last survivor of his tribe of the white man's conquest.

In 1911, at age 50, emaciated and frightened, he had wandered down from the hills into Oroville in search of food. He took refuge in a slaughter house corral, and there he was discovered by dogs whose barking aroused the butchers. They called the local sheriff and asked him to take away "the wild man."

ISHI COULD speak no English, but the sheriff recognized him as an Indian. He placed him temporarily in his jail to protect him against the many curious people who flocked to Oroville to get a glimpse of the wild Indian.

The fearful Indian had expected brutal treatment from his white captors. But later he was to tell of kindly treatment by "a big chief" who put him in a fine house and fed him well.

Accounts of Ishi spread over the state and brought an anthropology professor from the University of California at Berkeley to see the red man.

THE PROFESSOR, after first determining Ishi's tribe, was able to speak to him a few Yahi words that he had compiled from earlier studies. He then took charge of Ishi, and transferred him to quarters at the university's Museum of Anthropology.

Ishi was to spend his remaining days there, demonstrating for museum audiences such Indian skills as fire-building, the making of arrow, harpoon and spear points, and the construction of pendants and necklaces from clam and abalone shells.

But Ishi was to live for only another five years, succumbing to tuberculosis.

IN TEHAMA County this summer the party of College of Marin students encountered an old "mountain man" who had dwelled in the hills for years, and who told the collegians he had spent 30 days with Ishi. He also claimed to have seen signs of Indian life in the area as late as the early 1920s, contradicting anthropological studies that had designated Ishi as the last tribesman.

Students questioned the "mountain man" sharply, and their opinions ranged from belief to skepticism.

Andrea Wray of Tiburon, who had studied "introductory prehistory," scanned the caves and cliffs of Tehama and said: "This makes it easy to imagine something of what it must have been like to have been an Indian here."

SHE TOLD her fellow students of reading a journal of a sheriff responsible for the killing of Indians. "Those Indian-killers were the same kind of men as those who killed four grizzly bears, just for the fun of killing," she declared.

On a trail, Mrs. Wray found an Indian tool chiseled from a slate rock. The students had learned not to remove artifacts unless they were found in a disturbed area such as a pathway, and to do no digging except in areas specifically designated for such work.

In what was once the land of the Yahis, Mrs. Wray recalled from her studies the extensive use these Indians had made of nature. They had ground up acorns and buckeye nuts, then soaked them in water to rid them of their tannic acid, before eating the nuts. And they tossed unleached nuts into streams, where the tannic acid drugged the fish and brought them to the surface, to be harpooned easily by the Indians.

STUDENT TOM Campbell of Terra Linda, who took directed research in anthropology this summer, described "the life of silence" led by the Yahis while they were being hunted by the white settlers.

The Yahis, said Campbell, took care to walk on rocks instead of soft ground so that they would leave no tell-tale trail of footprints. They scaled or descended cliffs by rope to reach streams or pearks. They killed their prey for food silently with share, harpoon and bow and arrow.

IN TERRAIN SUCH as the rugged cliff area shown here, College of Marin anthropology students searched this summer for evidence of the extinct Yahi Inians. Many of these steep, cave-riddled areas are still untouched by man — at least by modern-day man.

While the Indians were being hunted down, the white men drove away much of the game, continued Campbell. The Indians were left with little to eat and out of desperation shot grazing cattle, which further angered the settlers.

BEFORE THE white men began wiping out the Indians they lived a "pretty groovy life" according to student anthropologist Campbell. There were plenty of fruit-bearing trees and well-stocked streams for their sources of food. But, Campbell admitted, the Indians' way-of-life also required a great deal of hard work.

John Innocenti of Novato, a student who took an independent study class in anthropology this summer, was so excited by his first glimpse of Indian country that he planned a return to explore the area for several weeks.

"When I walk down a road I'm always looking for things," said Innocenti. He added that he has always been interested in the past.

McBEATH HAS made three other trips to Tehama County with his classes in the past several years. He believes the educational value of these trips is that "it lets students see the environment where the India.. once lived. Then they can really feel what they have studied."

He said students are able to see the very caves where the Yahis had smoked their venison and fish. Markings of the cave fires are still visible. Most of the numerous caves in the area however, were not explored by students because ropes would have been necessary to enter these steep cliff dwellings.

THE FOUR-DAY field trip of the College of Marin anthropology students was coming to an end, and camp was being broken when Tom Campbell took this photograph. The collegians had slept where the Yahi Indians once slept, had trod the same trails and had romped in the same streams. The had explored caves and found artifacts. And in so doing had added depth and understanding to their studies of the Indian tribe that ended with Ishi, the Yahi immortalized by Theodora Kroeber in "Ishi in Two Worlds."

THE INVITING ENTRANCE to the western regional headquarters of Commerce Clearing House Inc. atop San Rafael's Quail Hill combines Parallel-O-Bronze glass, Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. product, with exposed limestone aggregate. The bronze tone of the glass complements the warm-colored masonry.

Glass And Limestone On Top Of Quail Hill

"People-oriented" with equal emphasis upon beauty and utility is the way its designers, architects Marquis & Stoller, describe the western regional headquarters of Commerce Clearing House Inc., legal publishing firm.

Part of an 83-acre planned community on San Rafael's Quail Hill, the building combines reinforced concrete and exposed limestone aggregate with generous expanses of Parallel-O-Bronze, a specially-tinted glass that minimizes glare while permitting full enjoyment of the hilltop vista location. Lower air conditioning costs are another benefit.

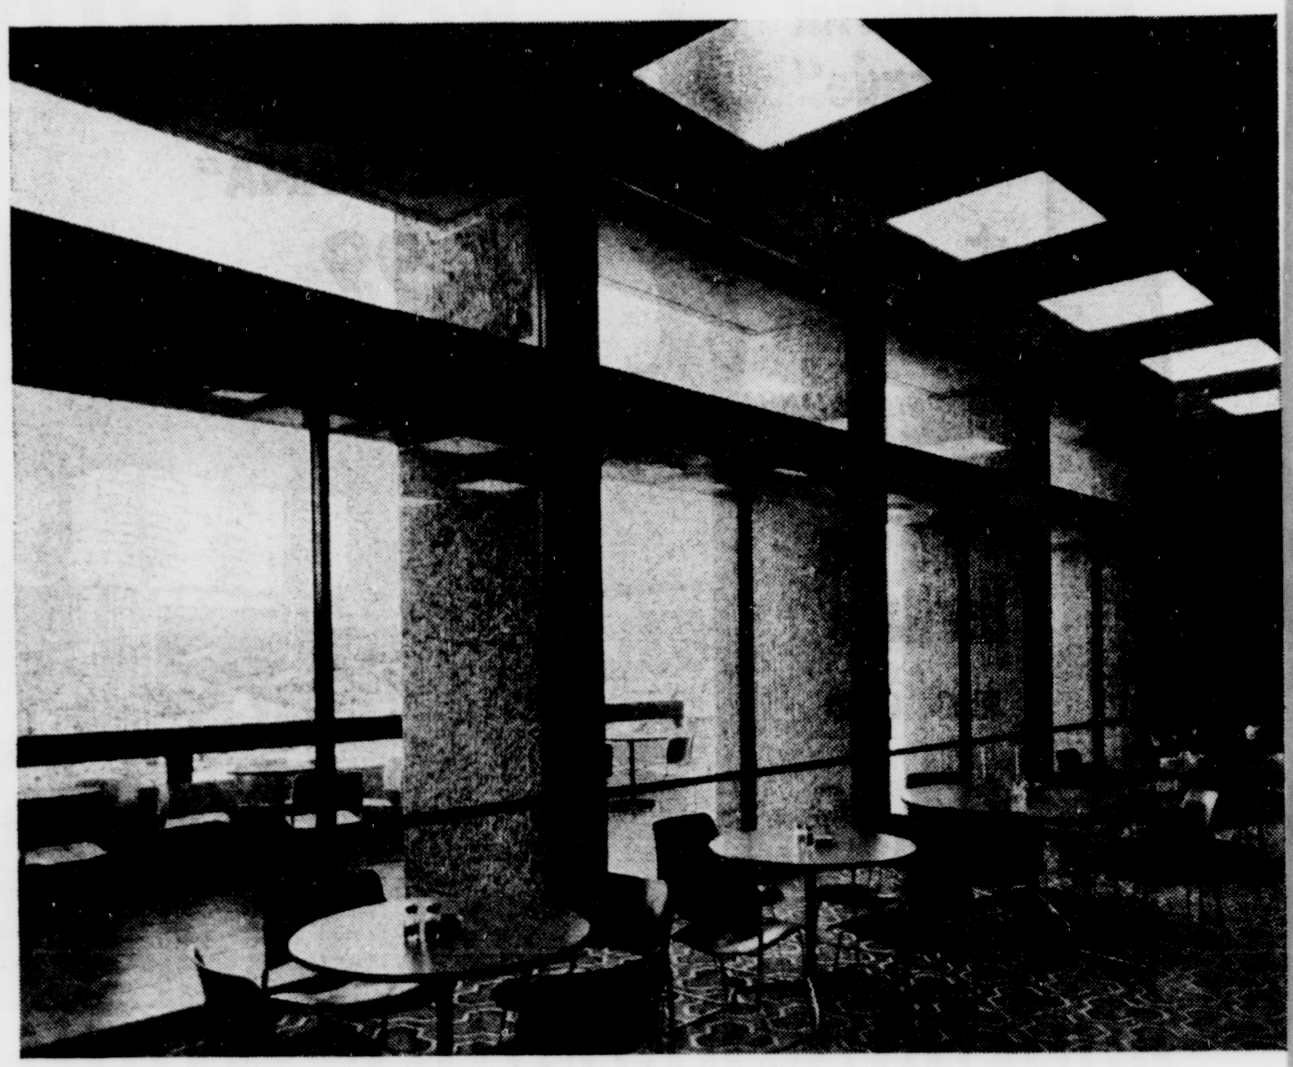
All major office space is on the top floor of tha three-story structure with exterior terraces that permit direct access to the outside. Offices utilize an open design with individual work areas separated by furniture, bookshelves and plantings, instead of walls.

Lower floors contain parking, shipping and specialized use space, plus a comfortable dining facility.

In the center of the structure is a landscaped courtyard with galleries, planters, a sculptured fountain, and a rolling skylight that can be opened.

Interior office and lounge areas are open to the light and view of the courtyard, and the court galleries provide all major internal circulation in the structure.

The Aberthaw Construction Co. was the general contractor for the building, and Webster Glass Co. the glazing contractor.



EMPLOYEES AND GUESTS of Commerce Clearing House can enjoy a spectacular hilltop view while lunching. The glazed, bronze-tone glass of the expansive window area minimize solar glare and brightness for those inside the dining room. Architects Marquis & Stoller designed the building.

A Car That's More Than Status Symbol

They call Volkswagens "Beetles" and American-made cars "Detroit Iron," but to Porsche aficionados a Porsche is a Porsche is a Porsche: no other name will do.

And all wrapped up in that word is affection, respect, even adulation for what their owners consider without equivocation is the best car ever made. Certainly, it is the only car for them.

Some treasure them as priceless jewels more to be admired than used; but for most owners the name of the game is "go" — to work, to play — to participate in the many activities arranged by the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America.

LAST MONTH members toured four wineries in the Sonoma and Napa valleys routed through lovely wooded areas where the undulating hills gradually climb to oak-crested peaks, eventually falling away to verdant pastures and lush vineyards that hug the gentle curves of fresh water creeks.

Five-band radios kept the group together and signaled directions and delays. Like a tinker toy parade, they passed in colorful revue: reds, yellows, oranges, avocado greens, blues, pristine whites, one subtle slate grey — and the bright sun only made them shine and sparkle more.

Besides being pleasurable outings, such tours are plotted to test driving skills. For this is really the sugar in the Porsche owners' cup of tea.

Take the Oakville Grade, for example. At first a beguiling, sylvan two-lane stretch of road, it soon gives way to sinuous, snake-like challenging curves — the kind most people avoid in favor of the high speed gloss of super highways. But for club members, this is where the action is. They call them hill climbs.

The truth is they love to drive; and that, they agree, is something most Americans don't like to do.

JACK BUNCE, for 24 years a safety engineer, an avid Porsche fan and one-time professional racer, says, "Today, people don't drive their cars. Instead, they climb in, roll up the windows, turn on the air conditioning and let the power brakes and power steering take over. It should be the other way around.

"Did you ever hear a person admit that he's a bad driver? Of course not. It's always the other guy's fault. Yet every year 55,000 people are killed in auto accidents and thousands of citations are handed out daily."

Bunce switched to Porsches because, he says, he wanted a car that is better than average, that is fun to drive and that will do the things most other cars won't do.

"You don't need to be an expert to drive a 912 or 194. They are quiet, normal cars with five speeds forward so you always have the right gear for what you want to do. My car has a tiny engine, only 80 horsepower, but with five speeds it'll do anything. And it'll pass anything except Corvettes, Stingrays or the Datsun 240 — and the latter has twice the horsepower.

"I DON'T RACE anymore. It's a hairy, tough business and my reflexes aren't as good as they used to be.

"In 1959, I was chairman of the Sports Car Club of America and was intensely oriented to time and distance rallies. Now I drive for fun and am past the stage of wondering what people think because I happen to drive a Porsche. I do it because it's a great car."

Gene Babow, president and founder of the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, doesn't believe that Porsches are status symbols.

"For one thing they aren't all that beautiful," he says, "and, besides, there are plenty of other cars as expensive or more expensive to buy. It's strictly functional and does what it's meant to do. So really it is a very practical car. That's the main reason people go for them."

"And a very fundamental difference is the fact that they are built first, then priced," Babow continues. "There is never any cost cutting. Generally cars are priced first and corners must be cut to stay within that figure.

"THEY ARE IN every sense of the word hand-crafted automobiles. Annual production averages from six to seven thousand, about half of Ford's weekly production. Half are shipped to the United States and half of these to California."

And if you want to look at the car from an investment and

READY TO test her driving skills in a Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, sponsored driving session, Mrs. James Lamb is behind the steering wheel of the 1959 356A 1600N Miessean coupe that has given her and her husband so much motoring pleasure. Writing with the stop watch and ready to scrutinize closely her driving are club officials Gene Babow and Emmett Wilder and husband Jim Lamb who will be a judge in the Open Sports Car Class at the annual Town and Country Village Auto Show on Mill Valley's Strawberry Point Sunday, Aug. 27. Some 30 Porsches will be on display at the event, many of them belonging to Redwood Region Porsche Club members.

GENE BABOW, right, president of the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, gives driver Franklin Rudolph one last look at the map before he takes off on a competitive hill climb route. Babow founded the club in 1967 as the Tamalapis Porsche Club. Its name was changed in 1969, and its membership has risen from 14 to 114. Porsche owners interested in joining the organization are invited to write the club at Post Office Box 4234, San Rafael. resale stand point, Babow says his 1966 model 912 cost $5,000 and is today worth $3,200 while a 1966 American luxury car bought for $7,000 would bring only about $1,500 today.

With undisguised pride, Babow points out that the total membership of the national Porsche club is over 7,000.

"No other foreign car has that kind of enthusiastic following," he claims.

"People who buy Porsches as a status symbol are soon disenchanted," asserts Jim Lamb, publicist and member of the board of directors. "Equating the two just doesn't exist within the club. We all know the prices. The fellow who pays $10,000 for one may find to his amazement that an older, less expensive model is held in higher esteem than the newest and flashiest model. What club members care about is how much a person is really involved with his car. How much does he know about it? Can he talk car lingo with other owners?

"With the club, the common bond is the car."

JIM AND MARILYN Palmieri frankly admit they bought their 911T (1970) six-cylinder Signal Orange Porsche after having worked their way through a number of other sports cars. In their opinion none come close to rivaling the Porsche for easy handling, power and comfort.

Marin Porsche Owners Enjoy Their Driving

chairman, adds. "We bought ours so that Marilyn could drive it. Most men don't let their wives drive their Porsche, much less give them one of their own."

"Which sort of makes us second class citizens, doesn't it?" Marilyn asks shyly.

Jim claims that Marilyn drives the car better than many men. Both are unanimous in their praise of club functions which give them varied opportunities to learn more about the car, because, Palmieri confesses, "To be honest with you, I really didn't know how to drive a Porsche until I started going to the technical sessions."

IT WAS BABOW, who has been "into cars since the 1950s" and a three time Porsche owner, who founded the club in 1967. He ran an advertisement inviting owners to a meeting. Fourteen came and formed the Tamalpais Porsche Club.

In 1969 the name was changed to the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America.

Babow is current president and has served as the club's co-director since 1968. Membership is now up to 114.

Further information and applications are available by writing to Post Office Box 4234, San Rafael. Also serving with Babow are: Tamelyn Le Febure of Larkspur, vice-president; Creighton Norris of Kentfield, secretary, and James Haskell of San Rafael, treasurer. A monthly bulletin is edited by Sandy Kane, Novato.

A former bank auditor, Babow "on a hunch" opened a supply house dealing only with Volkswagen and Porsche parts. In two years "Parts & Parts" has doubled both in space and sales volume. He indulges in other hobbies such as photography, swimming and scuba diving, but cars are "his thing," and before discovering Porsches he drove Jaguars and Corvettes.

A MEMBER OF the Antique Car Club of America and Classic Car Club, Babow recently sold his prize-winning 1947 Lincoln Continental. Active in Bay Area concours events, Babow was master of ceremonies at the Concours D'Elegance at Pebble Beach Aug. 6, and will be an honorary judge at the concours at Silverado in September.

Currently, his involvement with the activities of the Porsche Club of America takes top priority. Club members participate in social events, tours, rallies, meets, shows, technical and driving sessions. The latter two are designed to teach owners more about their cars. Some are conducted in a classroom atmosphere with experts speaking on such topics as tires, sparkplugs, electrical systems and brakes.

At the Cotati race track, behind-the-wheel sessions patterned on difficult driving situations teach members the safest way to handle their cars.

TO KEEP IN touch with the national club, a zone representative is appointed by the national president. Former club president Hank Malter, a San Francisco business executive and San Rafael resident, represents the Redwood Region, one of 77 regions in the country. It falls into the Zone 7 slot and is bounded by Fresno to the Oregon border, east to Nevada and west to Hawaii.

The San Francisco-based Golden Gate Region is the largest in the country with 500 members; the Redwood unit is rated average size.

Malter gives some 15 hours a month and travels over 3,000 miles a year to conduct club business. He defines his role as that of a liaison officer between the regions and the national board and he helps to establish and maintain goodwill between Porsche dealers and distributors who contribute prizes and/or monetary support to special events.

Because he believes that all regions within a zone should work together, Malter spearheaded a drive for Zone 7 to sponsor the club's annual Porsche parade. Next year the four-day event will be held at Pebble Beach.

Closer at hand is the club's traditional participation in the 8th Annual Town and Country Village Auto Show, Mill Valley, Sunday, Aug. 27, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission price is $1 with children under 12 free.

CO-SPONSORED with the Antique Car Club of America, the show, Malter says, is an all-club-member activity that is "a lot of fun but also a lot of hard work." He attributes the club's association with the show since 1968 to Gene Babow who will be the 1972 master of ceremonies.

"Not many regions are engaged in fund-raising activities of this kind. We are proud of the show and happy that it benefits a worthy cause," he says.

For the fourth consecutive year proceeds will aid the Marin Chapter, Northern California District, of the National Kidney Foundation. Fund-raising chairman Charles Alvarez reports that proceeds from past shows have helped the 80-member chapter start a school screening program for the early detection of kidney disease.

A just completed pilot program screened children in the

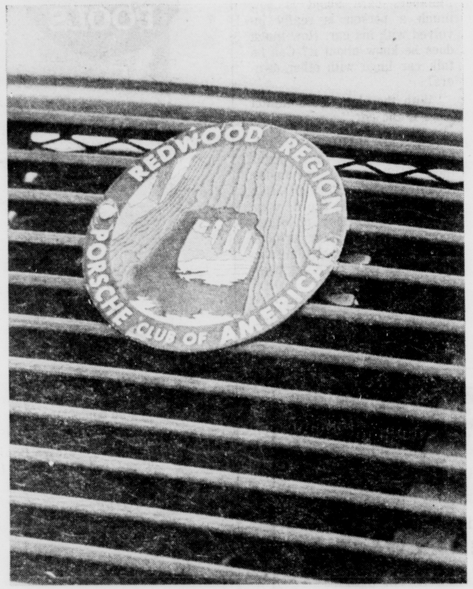
JUST FOUR OF the more than 30 Porsches that will be on display Aug. 27, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., at the eight annual Town and Country Village Auto Show in Mill Valley were lined up for this photograph. Left to right are the 1959 356A 1600N Miessean blue coupe of Jim and Betty Lamb, the 1955 Spyder 550 Silver racing car of Franklin Rudolph, the 1972 911S Silver Targa of Emmett Wilder, in white shirt discussing tour directions with Gene Babow, and Babow's 1966 white 912.



THE FAMED giant redwood tree of Northern California, wide enough for a roadway, is the emblem chosen by the members of the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America. And the club's monthly bulletin, edited by Sandy Kane, is called Der Risenbaum — German for the redwood tree.

THERE IS NOTHING quite like the feeling of the steering wheel of a Porsche in motion, Emmett Wilder believes. He is competitions director for Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, and schedules hill climbs, rallies, autocrosses and similar events for the group. His own 1972 Silver Targa is one of five club cars equipped with band radio, a valuable asset in keeping tour groups together. (Independent-Journal photos by Alfred Arn) first three grades at San Rafael's Coleman School and next fall will screen students at St. Raphael's. Early detection can eradicate the disease. Funds also helped establish a drug bank which provides kidney patients with drugs at cost or free of charge if they are unable to pay.

MORE THAN 130 entries are expected for the Aug. 27 show at Strawberry Point, according to James Webb, show director and manager of Town and Country Village. The show's nine classes of stock autos (that is, cars not customized or hot-rodded) include Horseless Carriage 1900-22; Antique 1923-34; Vintage 1935-48; Classic 1925-48; Post-war Sedan 1948-60; Super Sport and Sport 1930s-72; and two Porsche classes.

The non-stock classes are Hot Rod and Custom; Classic Hot Rod; Competition Class; Customized Class, and special classes of five or more of any one type.

Of unusual interest for showgoers will be the 1955 Spyder 550 owned by Franklin Rudolph, manager of the Southern Marin business office of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph and a San Rafael resident. Rudolph bought the car in 1967 and was soon launched on a repair project that led to total dismemberment.

It took him two years of conscientious work to put it together again. And he didn't lose a part. Small pieces went into jars with identifying notes; bigger parts were stored in cartons that completely filled a spare bedroom.

BUILT AS A racing car, it weighs 1,300 pounds and was one of the first Porsche racing cars built in any quantity (110). Its colorful past reveals that it was owned and raced by the illustrious Count Carel Godin de Beaufort, scion of an aristocratic Dutch family.

The Spyder has the engine between the rear wheels and the driver, which, according to Rudolph, makes for better weight distribution and consequently easier handling.

Although this idea of engine placement was not a new concept, Porsche was the first to make a series of cars using this design. It proved to be very acceptable and other manufacturers have been doing it since 1960.

Lacking the authentic 137 horsepower engine, the car doesn't qualify as a show entry. Until one turns up, Rudolph installed a 110-hp, four-cylinder, 1,700 cc push-rod engine.

Considered one of the fastest cars in the world when it was built, it is in the small 1,500 cubic centimeter engine class and frequently beats cars in larger classes.

RUDOLPH currently has the car for sale because he wants a different model. He claims it is impossible to calculate how much time and money he's invested in it. "But when you have a hobby and really get into it you don't stop to weigh the cost. When I sell it, I'll probably come out even — not counting time. In the meantime, I learned a lot and enjoyed doing the work."

Jim Lamb, who will judge the Open Sports Car Class, wi show for the first time his 1959 356A 1600N Miessean blue coupe.

It's a car that doesn't rest on a pedestal. Lamb says, "I didn't restore the car just to look at it, but preserved it so we could use it." The last of the basic 356 design series and one of a total of 6,000 produced in 1958 with various body styles, it has a 70 horsepower, four cylinder engine.

Although he does his own repair work and admits that rebuilding four-cylinder engines is an avocation, Lamb notes that a 2,400 mile warranty check on an eight-cylinder car costs him $70 and the same work on his Porsche would have been half that because of the four-cylinder engine.

Lamb sold his two-year-old Camaro for $1,800 to buy the then nine-year-old Porsche for $1,900. It had 52,000 miles on it and he drove it for another 20,000 before a piston went out. Filed away are the untotaled repair bills because, "the sum would scare me to death."

BETTY LAMB shares her husband's enthusiasm. An active participant in club events, she attends "tech" sessions and it is she who most frequently uses the car for commuting. She likes the car's "sculptured look" but Lamb was Porsche-persuaded because of the mechanical design and function of the car.

"Other cars bore me," he says. "I'm leery of them. I never feel in control. But driving the Porsche is like an extension of myself. You are one with the machine. It responds to every input. You can feel the road through it."

He laughs. "Others not so enthused say you can feel a grain of sand. Still, Porsche drivers are among the best and most courteous drivers on the road."

It's like the Porsche manual says: "Judging by the car you've chosen one must certainly conclude that you are a motorist of a special caste. Quite likely, you are no freshman when it comes to automobiles."

Shannon Is Still The Gateway City For Visitors To Ireland

The Travel Pages

By ALBERT HUGHES

Shannon has long been the Atlantic aerial gateway to the Republic of Ireland — and it now appears as though it will stay that way.

This historic pattern was going to be disturbed by the Republic's good and longtime friend, the United States. The United States wanted, in fact, demanded, the right for all of its three carriers, Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines, with passenger and mail flights, and Seaboard and Western Airlines, an air freight line, to serve Dublin with the option of bypassing Shannon.

The United States even laid down an ultimatum to the Irish that if it did not get rights to Dublin it would withdraw the rights of Irish International, Irish overseas carrier, to land in New York, its principal market. The move is part of a "hard look" which the United States is taking at all of its bilateral air agreements.

BILATERALS ARE pacts by which the various governments lay down the routes, destinations, and stops, sometimes even the number of flights, between the airlines of the covenanting nations.

The United States has argued that the Irish airline serves New York, Boston, and Chicago, the principal Irish markets, and, in return, its airlines serve only Shannon. The Irish countered with the argument that its carrier has no onward rights in the United States from its present terminals there, but that the Republic has granted onward rights from Shannon to Great Britain and Europe to all three U.S. airlines.

The American move probably caused resentment in the Republic which could only be compared with the Ulster crisis. But cooler heads have prevailed, and a compromise has been reached. It now is reported in an Irish newspaper that the Republic will grant Dublin rights to one American carrier (possibly Pan American, which applied for the right), but that all three carriers will continue to stop at Shannon.

FOR THE IRISH, bypassing Shannon is virtually unthinkable. Since the mid-1930s the Shannon area has seen the pioneering of transatlantic air service, first by flying boats. When Shannon Airport was completed, piston-powered aircraft, and eventually the jets, began to come into Shannon.

When the jets began to have the non-stop range to overfly Shannon, the Republic improved its transatlantic air service and set about plans to enhance Shannon's viability on overseas air routes. The result has been the construction of a major airport facility with an international duty-free shop, development of tour and vacation facilities, and an industrial estate providing Irish jobs and considerable export airfreight tonnage.

Upsetting the traffic pattern for Shannon would have altered the delicate traffic and economic balance of the airport complex. Shannon is to a large extend dependent on its air commerce.

LIMERICK, THE nearest city to Shannon, is 15 miles away, but the airport authority has felt it necessary to build Shannon Towne within the airport complex. It accommodates more than 4,000 of the 7,000-plus workers in houses and flats, has churches, schools, shops, community halls, playing fields, tennis courts, a golf course, youth club and restaurant.

Shannon Towne is believed to be the first such community nurtured by an airport.

It is estimated that the Republic, through the Shannon agencies, has spent the equivalent of $23 per capita on the Shannon complex, based on the present Irish population of nearly three million. An unofficial source estimated that something in the order of more than 250 million dollars has been spent over the years to develop Shannon.

LIKE MOST major airports, Shannon has been kept level with the latest terminal facilities. The new wing accommodates the latest wide-bodied jets, including Irish International's 747s and those of other carriers landing there, and the coming long-range versions of the Douglas DC-10, the Lockheed TriStar (L-1011) and the European Airbus.

The duty-free store, which was the first ever established and which now is a feature of most major world airports, occupies three times the space in the new wing than it held in the older section. It is an enormously successful enterprise and deals with more than one million transit and terminal passengers annually. The store also does a considerable mail-order business.

Shannon store clerks are not only cheerful and helpful but they also are as familiar with the American dollar as they are their own currency.

SHANNON STORE purchases, which include Irish silver, knit goods, textiles, lace, pottery, glass, jewelry, wood carvings, as well as the standard European offerings, are not weighed with the passenger's baggage, an advantage for tourists traveling light.

The Shannon industrial estate also is a big factor in providing jobs for the Irish and the nation's export trade. The United States and the Republic of Ireland match each other here in the number of companies providing manufacturing or service and warehousing facilities. They provide more than 4,000 jobs, and close to 45 per cent of the exports are destined for the United States, mostly by air freight.

The airport complex is, of course, strategically located with respect to the Republic's major tourist area — Galway and Connemara, the Killarney lakes, Tralee, Waterford, Cork, and nearby Blarney Castle. There are tours to all these areas, many of them organized by American travel agencies. Some of them go to Dublin and back to Shannon, or the reverse, or continue on to Great Britain and Europe.

ONE OF THE most popular tours (because it can be done on a short stopover) is the castle tour.

Transatlantic air passengers here enjoy the novelty of being whisked off a modern jet and within hours being transported back several centuries at nearby Bunratty Castle, eating medieval food and listening to entertainment of the period. (Although potatoes are an Irish meal staple, there are none served at these medieval banquets since the period is well before Sir Walter Raleigh introduced the potato into Ireland from the New World.)

The banquets, it goes without saying, are enormously popular, involved considerable castle restorations, and research and organization for medieval meals and entertainment. Initiated by the Irish, this entertainment now is being imitated in Great Britain and the Continent.

TO INDUCE longer stays in the Shannon region, the airport development authority evolved the rent-a-cottage scheme.

At strategic places in the area, chosen for their scenic value and well away from large communities, groups of thatched cottages were built.

Friendly Irish People, Green Land Charm Guests

Modern inside, they provide an opportunity for their tenants to enjoy Irish living and partaking of Irish food shopping, marketing, and some of their social events. Rentals are popular, and the occupancy is high.

Dublin, on the other hand, is Ireland's face to Europe. Here its air company competes with British and European carriers with whom the Republic has air agreements. Its sea services from Britain come into Dun Laoghaire, a small port south of the city, and passengers reach Dublin by bus or train.

Dublin has a progressive feeling marked by many new buildings, but its facade is 18th Century. The city is regarded as an excellent example of that period.

DUBLIN IS a small city by international standards, and is eminently walkable. It stretches between Parnell Square and Stephen's Green in a north-south direction and between Dublin Bay and Phoenix Park in an east-west direction. Most points of interest lie within these boundaries.

Coach tours operate in the summer season from the major bus terminal of CIE, the national transportation organization. They range from short sightseeing trips of three hours to scenic all-day and evening tours to such popular spots as Powerscourt, Glendalough, Vale of Avoca, Liffey Valley, Boyne Valley and Shannon area, among others.

Dublin's buildings are evocative and marked in many cases with Ireland's struggle for independence. Among these are Dublin Castle, Old Parliament House, Custom House, Four Courts, Kilmainham Jail, Arbour Hill, and the General Post Office.

WORTH A VISIT also are the Joyce Museum, the National Gallery, Municipal Art Gallery, Trinity College, and the Book of Kells, Phoenix Park, the Botanic Gardens and St. Stephen's Green.

The Republic has hotels of the modern continental type in Dublin, Limerick, and Cork. Dublin has very comfortable, first-class hotels such as the Shelbourne, Gresham, Royal Hibernian, Jury's and Russell's. The meals they serve are excellent. Proof of this is that the locals patronize these hotel restaurants.

The climate is equable, even in the winter. If it snows, the precipitation is usually gone by the end of the day. Heavier wear may be needed in the winter season more because of the chill moist winds which sweep in from the Irish Sea. They're colder than any snowfall!

For the independently-minded tourist, the Republic's transportation company offers a ticket, somewhat like the Eurailpass, called the Rambler, which provides train travel at will over a certain period. Another Rambler provides both rail and bus travel.

DUBLIN IS AN ideal city for shopping, and one can do well in the big stores like Arnott's and Switzers. The smaller good shops are located along Grafton and side streets.

If in any doubt as to what to buy, go to the special display room of the Irish Tourist Board which has just about everything in the way of good Irish products that can be imagined. All of the goods here have been juried by a panel of experts, so there is excellent quality merchandise.

Nothing is sold at the tourist-board display, but the attendants can give you the names of the shops where any of the items are sold.

Best buys are Irish glass, tweeds, antiques, silver, lace, jewelry, pottery, linen, knitted wear — especially Aran sweaters. If unable to shop in Dublin or elsewhere, the traveler's last resort, and a very good one, is Shannon's duty-free shop. It also carries all the European standards such as cameras, perfumes, watches, suits, frocks, fabrics, as well as the Irish specials. You can even mail out purchases.

THE CUSTOMARY tip in the Republic of Ireland is 10 per cent of the bill — sometimes the tip is added on hotel and restaurant bills (usually so stated). Hotel, train porters, and taxi drivers also are tipped.

The Irish people are cheerful and helpful, and they will invariably go out of their way to give advice and directions. On the other hand, never patronize them, and never, on any account, discuss politics or religion — even if they provide the opening.

Observe these, and the Irish people and their green land will charm the heart out of you — they never fail.

HOW TO AVOID 'MONTEZUMA'S REVENGE'

"Montezuma's Revenge" is its most famous name.

Misery is its most common symptom. It's traveler's diarrhea, the curse of those who have set sail for exotic places since the time of Alexander's conquests.

Traveler's diarrhea occurs throughout the world, according to the American Automobile Assn., but it is most common in areas where personal hygiene and sanitation are below the standards the traveler finds at home.

In addition to the syndrome which gives it its name, the ailment is often accompanied by vomiting, abdominal cramps, chills and low-grade fever. In most travelers the symptoms disappear in one to three days.

Public health service officials aren't quite sure what causes the ailment. Although unaccustomed or exotic foods often have been blamed, doctors tend to discount their effect.

AAA passes along these tips from the U.S. Public Health Service on how to prevent the onslaught of traveler's diarrhea:

Eat only what can be peeled or has been cooked.

Drink only boiled or bottled water, beverages that have been boiled, bottled carbonated soft drinks, beer and wine.

Tap water uncomfortably hot to the touch can be used for brushing teeth and for drinking after cooling.

Finally, if the condition persists, consult a physician.

GET LOST IN Norway, and chances are a pretty, perky "tourist pilot" will zip over on a motorscooter and lead you back onto the right track. Oslo and five other Norwegian cities now boast corps of attractive helmeted guides whose sole duty is to aid the lost and perplexed. (Norwegian Tourist Office photo)

You Can't Miss The Sights If You Travel Norway By Auto

Driving is still one of life's pleasures in Norway, where the motorist's question, "How far is it to the scenic spots?" seems out of place, because, as the Norwegians politely point out, you're there all the time.

Norway's roads are themselves among the country's leading scenic attractions, and their picturesque routes along fjords, across mountains and past glaciers and waterfalls introduce breath-taking sights at every turn. Hairpin bends on mountain routes offer extra thrills, but roads are well-kept and safe, and good hotels are always near-by.

The new"Auto Hotel" vouchers provide an ideal system for motorists, and these vouchers can be bought in USA before departure.

The fabulous terrain and frequent fjord crossings by ferry make travel times deceptive to the motorist planning his trip. Bergen and Oslo, for example, are linked by express trains in 8 hours, and planes make it in one. But the most interesting and direct auto route is 310 miles, a day's drive in America, but you'll need three days for it in Norway, where 100 to 150 miles a day is considered a comfortable maximum.

This is exactly the reason why any motoring trip of Scandinavia should start preferably in Bergen or Stavanger, both being famous gateways in Norway's Fjord Country.

Information about motoring vacations in Norway — including maps, folders and route descriptions — is available from Scandinavian National Tourist Offices, 505 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017 or 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, 90010.

Bistro Hopping On The Riviera

A host of quiet but genuine gastronomic experiences bask on the Riviera.

Bistros without fanfare line the byways between Saint-Troupez and Menton. The little village of Chateauneuf-de-Contes, in the hills behind Nice, is where one finds the Auberge Antoine. Perfectionist chef Antoine is likely to be snipping herbs from his garden for the succulent lamb.

Be prepared for a two or three hour lunch, well worth the time.

AT THE ENTRY to Nice's Grand Corniche stands La Pignata d'Or, a cafe-tabac with a cordon bleu surprise in its tiny dining room. Specialties range from home-made "ravioli aux cepes," to rabbit in port wine.

Once inside, the gourmet understands why advance reservations are required.

Well hidden among the rocks is La Pinede, at the tip of Cap-d'Ail, awash by the Mediterranean. Here, a simple but delicious meal, under the stars and the pines, caps a visit to this uncrowded section of the coast.

FOR TRAVELERS to whom atmosphere is second to cuisine, unpretentious Aristide is a must-stop in Theoule on the Route Nationale. Bouillabaisse, by special order, and flawless "loup" (white fish) demonstrate Aristide's very special talents with fish.

Antibes boasts a celebrated fish market and close by is the Restaurant l'Oursin, equally famed for the freshness and variety of its fish and fruits de mer. In nearby Biot, Les Terraillers offers hearty cuisine in a vaulted 16th century decor.

At these and many other bistros tucked in along the coast, memorable meals can be had at modest prices.

TV And The Big Fight

By DON KEOWN

GARDEN OF INNOCENTS by Art Fisher and Neal Marshall with Charles Einstein; Dutton, 185 pages, $5.95.

A growing complaint among some sports fans is that television is changing their favorite games from athletic competition into show business.

Such critics overlook the fact that there has always been a strong "show biz" element to big-time sports. There is no more impressive piece of pageantry than the opening and closing ceremonies of an Olympic Games. A John L. Sullivan, Pancho Gonzales or a Dizzy Dean has always been part-actor along with being all-athlete. Ice hockey has added to its excitement with fistfights, staged and otherwise. College football's halftime festivities have been copied by the professionals.

But there is no doubt that the television cameras have had a marked — sometimes almost a controlling — influence upon major sports. Time-outs are scheduled to fit the needs of commercials. Rules are changed or bent to speed up the action for the armchair viewer who substitutes rapidity of thrills for the sense of involvement of the fan upon the scene. Uniforms are chosen for their appeal on television. Egotists such as Howard Cosell and Joe Garagiola strive from the sidelines to overshadow the actual participants in the combat.

"Garden of Innocents" is an eye-opening account of just how topheavy some sports promotions have become, with the complicated and highly technical arrangements for television seeming, at times, to make the event itself almost secondary.

It is the story of the televising from New York's Madison Square Garden on March 8, 1971, of the world heavyweight championship fight between Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali.

Telling the story are Art Fisher, director, and Neal Marshall, his co-producer of the television show. They have the help of Marin's Charles Einstein, whose expert and practiced sportswriting hand is very much in evidence.

The Frazier-Ali bout — available to USA and Canadian TV audiences on closed circuit only in theaters and halls at a cost of $16,300,000, but viewed less expensively in 48 other countries for a total audience of 300 millions — drew the biggest single video audience of all-time.

To put on this show, promoter Jerry Perenchio, a talent agency chief by profession, backed by multimillionaire sportsman Jack Kent Cooke, chose in Fisher and Marshall two young Hollywood producers with experience and success in the variety show field but no previous contact with televising sports.

This very lack of a prior background enabled Fisher and Marshall to take some fresh and original approaches to their assignment — and to cause consternation among traditionalists who saw in them a greater than usual TV threat to the "purity" of sports.

"Garden of Innocents" tells how Fisher and Marshall rode over some of that opposition, and improvised and compromised to deal with the rest. But to fully enjoy the book, certain requisites are required of the reader.

He must have a considerable curiosity concerning the behind-the-scenes activities of television sports; otherwise Fisher and Marshall will be telling him a great deal more than he wants or needs to know about their profession. He must adjust, too, to a rather irritating narrative technique in which Fisher and Marshall take turns at the commentary. A straightforward narration by silent partner Einstein, using Fisher, Marshall and others as his sources, would have made more comfortable reading.

The adjustment is not made any easier by the personalities of Fisher and Marshall who seem to be playing self-consciously their roles of the brash, mod young clever nonconformists, tweaking the noses of the establishment.

And finally to appreciate the book one must conclude — and this is not easy for some of us — that boxing, or "the sour science" as a sportswriting colleague back in Wichita, Kans., used to call it, is really worth all this attention and effort, and the recording and reading of it. A contest between two men bent on pounding each other insensible is hardly the kind of thing that reflects man's finest instincts.

But if you have that curiosity, if you adjust to the back-and-forth ping-pong narration, if you swallow the Fisher and Marshall personalities, if you can regard boxing with tolerance or even enthusiasm, then it is all there in "Garden of Innocents."

This "all" includes the battle of wits and wills between the Madison Square Garden hierarchy, determined to retain at least some semblance of control over the promotion, and the TV forces; the special problems of lighting, color, timing, sound and personalities that were involved in setting up the coverage; the characters who played their parts, including celebrities such as Burt Lancaster and Frank Sinatra and nonentities such as the bookie Henry VI, and even occasionally Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali themselves.

JOE FRAZIER versus MUHAMMAD ALI
300 million viewers in 50 countries

Old-style sports fans will be pleased that the "new" or "show biz" wave didn't always emerge victorious in the many confrontations, such as when the Black Muslim leadership wisely spiked a particularly silly publicity plan for Ali to announce his candidacy for U.S. President — for 1976.

Still, the book does demonstrate that Marshall and Fisher went about their jobs with a considerable amount of originality and flair. Tinged with the show business syndrome though their thinking was — there was even a rehearsal with stand-ins for the fighters — it was certainly different. And their efforts met with a more favorable public reception than most such endeavors, although a considerable amount of credit for this must go to Frazier and Ali and the viciousness of their assaults upon one another.

Of course, there were those who bemoaned the absence of free television access to the fight — not for themselves, of course, but for "the poor black 15-year-old who can't afford to buy a ticket to the theater for the show."

Now isn't that exactly what our poor black teen-agers need most? Not jobs? Not educational opportunities? Not decent homes? But a free seat from which to watch two other black men brutalize one another, for the enjoyment of Burt Lancaster, Frank Sinatra and you and me. Well, hurray for Joe and Ali for making us pay dearly for our jollies!

WHEN A daytime television interview show that offers viewers an opportunity to question its guests by telephone brought a couple of podiatrists into the studio, its lines were literally swamped by callers.

Everyone, it seems, has feet that hurt. It has been estimated that Americans spend more than two billion dollars a year on corn plasters, powders, pads, lotions, liniment, arch supports and specially-fitted shoes. And yet feet ache.

Podiatrist Morton Walker tried to provide some guidance on every day foot care and comfort and on the relief of the more common complaints with his "Your Guide to Foot Health," first printed in 1964, and now republished as a $1.65 paperback in its ARC Book series by Arco Publishing Co., 219 Park Ave. South, New York, 10003.

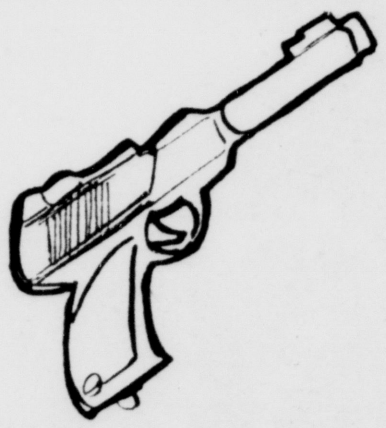
THE RECKONING by Hugh Atkinson; McKay, 191 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



"The Reckoning" by much-traveled Hugh Atkinson was first published in the early 1960s, but is now receiving its first American exposure. It is a powerful, off-beat crime novel set in Australia's desolate Blue Mountains.

Into this forbidden terrain goes a posse that must travel on foot in pursuit of an immigrant suspected of murdering a farm woman. But Atkinson is not keenly interested in the hunted man, and pays him scant attention. What he is interested in is the effect of the chase upon the hunters — the embittered policeman, the wealthy landowner, the scheming salesman, the newspaper reporter, the bully, the town simpleton, and all the others who find themselves caught up in something quite unlike anything else they have ever experienced.

Atkinson is strong on description as well as characterization, and the sustained tension that he demands of his readers seems at times almost unbearable. A cheerless, not optimistic story, and yet one that in a surprising way accords man, for all his weaknesses, a certain saving dignity.

THOUGH I KNOW SHE LIES by Sara Woods; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 196 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

Another in the intelligent series of suspense novels about British barrister Antony Maitland; intelligent because the dialogue and action, and above all, the plot, are impeccably reasoned and engrossinsg.

This one has the urbane barrister (a more highly qualified lawyer than the general practice solicitor) endeavoring to save a beautiful murder defendant who is loath to save herself.

A cool and classy exercise.

Aaron — Better Than 'Papa'

KING OF THE HILL by A. E. Hotchner; Harper and Row, 240 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

This is a delightfully nostalgic novel.

Aaron, age 12, tells us what it's like to be a boy in St. Louis in the summer of 1933.

Though he wins the Achievement Award at Admiral George Dewey School and sees himself as "King of the Hill," Aaron has problems: an out-of-work father, a tubercular mother, and a constantly nagging hunger.

But Aaron is lucky. He has Lester, a 15-year-old scrounger and expert con man who miraculously produces food, new shoes and part-time jobs.

Aaron also has Skippy, a bashful canary who not only sings but also fathers saleable baby birds.

Best of all, Aaron has imagination. He's not always "some cheesy kid living in a ratty hotel room with only one pair of pants and a pair of busted Keds."

When life is full of "mud slides" he takes refuge in his dreams. Like D'Artagnan, he says "Mon Dieu" and whips out his sword. Or like Pepper Martin, he "slides into second on his belly." Or he becomes Captain Nemo, Dizzy Dean, or sees himself on the Major Bowes Amateur Hour.

Aaron also has his own great moments. He's not strong enough to be a success as a caddy at the St. Louis Country Club — but he gets to see Babe Didricksen play. And he acquires a lifetime hero when he watches Charles A. Lindberg wing The Spirit of St. Louis under the Eads Bridge.

Aaron is, in short, totally believable as he copes with fate in the terrible summer heat of St. Louis. Author Hotchner grew up in St. Louis — he and Aaron must share the same skin — and the steamy Border city is all here: Forest Park, Delmar, Kingshighway, Bushmeyer's Cafeteria, even the Jefferson Hotel and Barnes Hospital Free Clinic.

The plot is pure melodrama. Will Aaron and his parents be locked out of their hotel room, and cut off from their slim possessions, for non-payment of rent?

Skippy, the lusty canary, with a bit of help from Mr. Roosevelt and the WPA, saves them. But only because Aaron, who is left completely alone by his sick mother and his neglectful, defeated father, is strong, canny, determined and wise beyond his years.

A. E. Hotchner is best known for his controverisal memoir, "Papa Hemingway." Aaron, the "King of the Hill," is better and, like Oliver Twist, he's also history.

To understand why Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected President four times in succession, or why your parents (or grandparents) get that thin line around their mouths when they mention the Depression — or why they don't talk about it at all — read Aaron's story.

The First Full Chronicle Of An Ecological Crime

BLACK TIDE by Robert Easton; Delacorte Press, 336 pages, $10. Reviewed by James Meldrum.

Robert Easton has written, in the manner of the suspense novel, a book that examines in minute detail the events leading to the disastrous oil spill that polluted the Santa Barbara Channel in January 1969 "Black Tide" is a thoroughly documented piece of reporting that gives us, as Ross Macdonald the well-known author and conservationist says in the introduction, "the first full account of an ecological crime . . ."

You may feel anger and dismay when you read this account of how political and business groups failed to heed repeated warnings. They made hypocritical and false statements in order to protect their respective huge financial interests.

The cast of characters in Black Tide reads like a "Who's Who" of American government, and although many prominent officials aligned themselves with conservationist groups, there were also many well-known high echelon politicians who sided with the huge oil companies.

Citizen groups such as GOO (Get Oil Out) fought a long hard battle in their efforts to dispel public and industrial apathy. They appealed with some success to the national media for help. One Life Magazine reporter who was a veteran of many war scenes, described the agonies of dead and dying oil-soaked seals this way: "It was the most sickening sight I have ever witnessed."

Needless to say Life was penalized for its outspoken criticism of the oil interests. Millions of dollars in advertising fees were withheld from the magazine.

The author gives many other examples of political and financial pressures that were brought to bear on those who might be tempted to speak out against the very real dangers in off-shore oil drilling.

Robert Easton has chronicled an awesome series of events and ineptitudes. He will have helped insure, we would hope, that other Black Tides will never again be allowed to occur.

Stephen and Janet Greene, the imaginative Brattleboro, Vt., publishers, report in their "occasional newsletter" that their small house now has "perhaps 130 books in print, and we are adding around 30 new ones each year," and that "The Stephen Greene Press doubled its sales in the first quarter of 1972 to the same period in 1971."

The Charm Of A Cheetah And Her Brood Of Cubs

PIPPA'S CHALLENGE by Joy Adamson; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 177 pages, $9.50. Reviewed by Karen Hunter.

Joy Adamson, author of "Born Free" and six other books on the people and animals of Africa, has written yet another heartwarming work. "Pippa's Challenge" is a sequel to her "The Spotted Sphinx" which described her relationship with a cheetah named Pippa.

The new book starts with the birth of Pippa's fourth litter of cubs. The book is concerned mainly with the mating of cheetahs under natural conditions in the wild in an effort to save this endangered species from extinction. The animals live naturally in the wilds — yet are helped with food and vitamins supplied by Joy Adamson.

The love she feels for these magnificent animals is so great it brings a lump to the throat. To Joy Adamson, happiness is lying under a bush with her head resting against the soft fur of a purring cheetah.

It is easy to fall in love with Pippa and her cubs, and to envy the author her relationship of trust with a wild cheetah even as you admire her for her dedication of her life to the cause of conservation of African wildlife.

The book also contains beautiful color and black and white photographs of Pippa and her cubs in their day-to-day activities. This book should be read and enjoyed by all in the family — then left out in plain sight where guests can skim its pages and share your enjoyment.

Must For Musicians

THE MUSICIANS GUIDE, 1972: The Directory of the World of Music; Music Information Service Inc., 1,-014 pages, $39.50. Reviewed by Maybelle Speckmann.

This is a comprehensive, library-bound reference work that should be in all music and even public libraries, where the professional musician and music journalist will find it essential.

The format is complete but concise with information quickly and easily accessible.

The book is not only an expansion of information in the 1968 edition but contains entirely new material from original sources such as found in Section II: competitions, awards and grants; Section III: education, giving information about colleges and conservatories, music schools and summer music programs; and Section IV: publications and recordings, including classical, jazz and rock discographies.

Other sections are updated, including a director of music organizations and a listing of music festivals in the U.S. and abroad.

Reviews Of New Reading

PETER GOWLAND used an Instamatic underwater camera and shot into the sun to obtain this photograph of the subject leaping out of the water as the wave strikes. The star effect is from the water on the lens of the camera. And the photo is from "Gowland's Guide to Glamour Photography," $6.95, published by Crown Publishers. While the book is filled with photo studies of some of America's most beautiful young models, nude and near-nude, the book is not a pin-up collection, but rather a serious text by one of the country's most famous photographers of glamorous women, with each picture accompanied by Gowland's discussion of the equipment and technique used. "The successful glamour photographer must be able to create exciting, provocative pictures and still maintain technical quality," Gowland begins. And then proceeds to show how he does just that.

NEW BOOKS FOR JUNIOR READERS

Adults, at best, are sporadic environmentalists, practicing the "theology" of ecology periodically, when it comes to mind and when it doesn't interfere with their own comfort and convenience.

Is there any hope for making better, more consistent adherents to conservation of our children?

Frances L. Behnke, wife of a science editor and journalist and herself a science teacher and writer, gives it a good try in her "The Changing World of Living Things" (Holt, Rinehart, $5.95), a book that kicks off a series of ecological works for which other volumes are already under way, and for which she will ba the editor.

Dr. Behnke begins by analyzing the natural balance that makes possible Nature's grand scheme, then takes up one by one the various ways in which man has interfered with that balance — by extinction of species, by pollution of air and water, by noise, by over population.

"There is no generation gap when learning how all living things are affected by and depend upon the environment," she writes. One hopes her optimism is justified. The book seems a reasoned presentation of the argument for a more reverent treatment of our environment, and appears to be effectively ptiched at the intended audience — 10-year-olds and older. In fact, it wouldn't hurt at all if a few parents borrow Junior's copy and read the book as well. More strident warnings haven't been notably successful. Perhaps a child-level thesis will be more readily understood and appreciated.

SOME OTHER new books for the juniors:

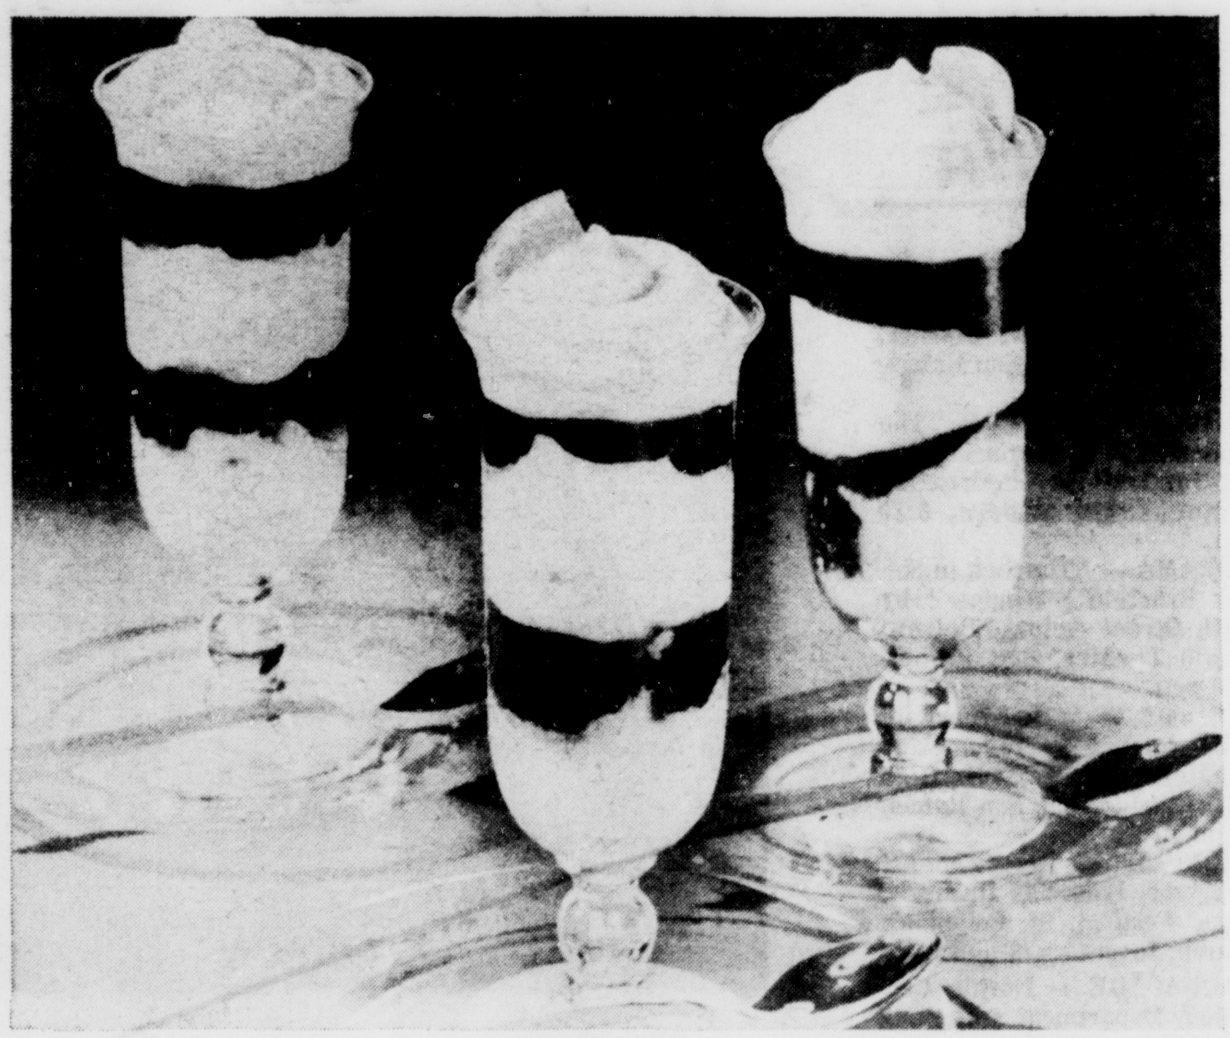
"Corvus the Crow" (Four Winds, $5.50) is by the distinguished nature writer Franklin Russell who won acclaim for his earlier "Watchers at the Pond," and who now deserves further praise for this newest work. He tells the absorbing story of a year in the life of a crow residing in the woods near a pond, his movements restricted by a crippling injury and forced to adjust to a life without the usual seasonal migrations of his kind. Russell's writing crackles with the excitement of the out-of-doors, reflects fully the author's special understanding and sensitivity to wildlife, and presents the ecology message in a manner certain to attain maximum impact. Richard Cuffari has contributed some quite beautiful black and white nature sketches. For 10 through 13-year-olds.

TALL TALES are an integral part of the lore of the Old West. And, well-told, an unending source of delight for listeneres. Texas-born, Arizona-reared William D. Hayes, author of a number of earlier books for juveniles, proves himself adept at spinning such yarns in a tome intriguing entitled "How the True Facts Started in Simpsonville and Other Tall Tales of the West" (Atheneum, $4.50). Hayes writes with wry, understated humor in the breezy manner of the Western storyteller. Yungsters should enjoy wholeheartedly such episodes as "How Matt Carney Retired and Raised Chickens" and "How the Sneaky Water-Stealer Set the Cattlemen and the Sheepmen Against Each Other," as well as the title tale.

For 12-year-olds and up, suggests the dustjacket for "A Screaming Whisper" (Holt, Rinehart, $4.95). But this collection of poetry by Vanessa Howard, 17 and black, with photos by J. Pinderhughes is certainly not for every 12-year-old. It's potent stuff. Sample: "He lay in the alley dead, cold/ his helmet lay beside him/ his gun in his hand still hot from firing/ his badge not so shiny now . . ." And: "Agnew rushes into the waiting room/ where ghetto dwellers have been waiting all their lives/ while Nixon lies D.O.A./ from an overdose of poverty and taxation . . . " There are less angry poems, as well, and Miss Howard's early-blooming talent is unquestionable. But despite the poet's tender age, this is, with rare exceptions, for an older reader than the impressionable pre and early teens.

Few figures in history are more colorful than the heroic, often violent, always adventuresome Norsemen. Samuel Carter III attempts to bring them to life for young readers in his "Vikings Bold: Their Voyages and Adventures" (Crowell, $4.50). Artist Steele Savage gets the project off to a good start with a vivid depiction on the book's dustjacket of a landing by these marauders from the sea. Carter and illustrator Ted Burwell, however, are not quite so successful in capturing the fire of these awesome Scandinavians, although the latter, when given a full page on which to work, does portray them with considerable power. Carter's text tends to plod in as far as one can plod when dealing with such unplodding subjects. It's what some youngsters regard as school textbook prose. But informative enough.

FOR THE CALORIE-CONSCIOUS



THIS TEMPTING PARFAIT, promises the newest Better Homes and Gardens cook book, "Low Calorie Desserts" (Meredith, $1.95), gives you only 112 calories per serving. It's a Cit.us-Berry Parfait, and the ingredients include gelatin, frozen raspberries, lemon whipped dessert mix, lime juice and peel, beaten egg whites and low-calorie dessert topping. It is but one of 188 such rich-looking (but not too fattening) dishes described in the 96-page hardcover book designed and illustrated with Better Homes' usual good taste. It's for those with weight problems who have concluded they are going to have to live with, and occasionally indulge, a sweettooth.

The Fragrance Of Good Things In Baking Oven

COOKIES FROM MANY LANDS by Josephine Perry; Dover, 157 pages, $1.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This is an unabridged republication in the familiar quality softcover format of Dover Publications of a book originally published in 1940 as "Around the World Making Cookies." It remains after three decades still one of the most useful and most tempting cookbooks of its kind.

The range is wide, from the simplest oatmeal cookies and scones to sacher torte and Swedish spet caka.

The contents are divided by the origins of the recipes — New England, New Orleans, modern America, German, Ireland, France, Danish, etc. And also by their use — dessert, afternoon tea, cookie jar, lunch basket, Christmas, etc.

There's Scottish bannock and Danish ableskiver, New England ginger snaps and Virginia wafers, French babas and Mexican banuelos, and a special section of cookies made with wine.

Just browsing through the book brings to mind the fragrance of cookies in the oven. The real thing is certain, of course, to be far better. And with the holidays drawing ever nearer, this time-proven collection of tasty tidbits should be especially valuable in the kitchen.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

"FIEDLER'S FAVORITE OVERTURES" — SHOSTAKOVICH: "Festive Overture"; SULLIVAN: "Overture Di Ballo"; COPLAND: "Outdoor Overture"; GOLDMARK: "Springtime Overture" — Polydor 24-5006:

It's hard to get used to having Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops on Polydor and Boston Symphony on Deutsche Grammophon, since both are German record labels.

It's all part of the take-over of U.S. concert recording by European companies, and it certainly benefits the record connoisseur in this case, because the programming and the engineering on this LP make it the most exciting Boston Pops album I have ever heard! The music is tuneful but unhackneyed and the reproduction will pin your ears back; it is demo-disc quality.

Like most DGG recordings, the surfaces are impeccable. Let's have lots more gems like this one.

ARTHUR FIEDLER and BOSTON POPS
On a German record label now

CRUSADERS 1 — Blue Thumb BTS 6001:

Formerly known as the Jazz Crusaders, this is a tight and clean-sounding quartet augmented by electric guitars to a more rock-pop-jazz sound.

Wayne Henderson's trombone is a primary ingredient in the group's distinctive sound, and he is responsible for many of the tunes on this double-disc album which gives a thorough representation of where the group is at today. Carole King's "So Far Away" is the longest track in the album, and keyboard man Joe Sample's "Georgia Cottonfield" really moves.

The several blues-based tracks show a gutsy feeling the Crusaders always have.

MARK-ALMOND — Blue Thumb BTS-27; MARK-ALMOND II — Blue Thumb BTS-32:

These two truly quality albums feature a quartet of talents as much at home with a jazz riff as a rock run.

Jon Mark, who composes just about all the lovely music, plays classical and electric guitar, bass and percussion, and is the lead vocalist. Johnny Almond plays the various reeds, vibes, congas and does vocal harmonies.

The first album, as is usually the case, gets the highest rating of the two. Every tune is a gem, from the sensitive "The Ghetto" to the moving "Love" suite.

"Soft rock" is too demeaning a monicker for this type of music-making. It has the widest appeal, yet maintains integrity.

By the way, the second album features a "Sausalito Bay Suite," and shows the group expanded to a quintet.

GABOR SZABO: "High Contrast" — Blue Thumb BTS 28:

Guitarist Gabor Szabo is evolving his pop-jazz style into a harder-driving rock statement. This album, made last year, shows the beginnings of this change in subtle ways.

While some tunes, like Bobby Womack's "If You Don't Want My Love," are typical single-line melodic Szabo, "Just a Little Communication" boasts a James Brown-like soul beat and even some electric guitar note-stretching that owes much to Jimi Hendrix.

BARCLAY JAMES HARVEST: "Once Again" — Sire SI 4904:

I don't know a thing about this group, and there are no liner notes, but it's a thoroughly captivating musical trip into a vocal genre something like the albums that the individual members of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young have been bringing out. The arrangements, employing at times a full symphony, are tasty and well carried out.

I enjoyed "Mocking Bird" and the lyric "Lady Loves" especially.

A Babbling Brook At Your Backdoor

THE PLAINEST backyard suddenly becomes a place of beauty with the addition of some water — a waterfall, a fountain or a fishpond. Idea man Steve Ellingson has designed a project that will give you all three at your doorstep. There's a pond four feet by 16 holding 300 gallons of water (but you can make it any size you want) that you can stock with fish, or simply decorate with water lilies. There's a fountain spraying in its center. And it is fed by a waterfall trickling over rocks. Send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Pattern 508 for building the waterfall-fishpond-fountain. And you are on your way. The plans include step-by-step pictures and instructions, from the digging to the final plaster coat. There are guidelines for filtering and draining the pond. And a list of tools you'll need for the project. To add to the fun and to save money, you can collect your own rocks, a few at a time. Other backyard improvements: Pattern 371, a wishing well, $1; No. 162, outdoor barbecue, $1, and No. 471, a swimming pool, $3. Ellingson also offers for $1 a booklet showing some 500 do-it-yourself projects for which he has designed patterns.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Keep The Child's Room Simple

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Sometimes I wonder if little girls really like fussy, frilly bedrooms or if dear Mom simply projects her own daydreams on the unsuspecting little miss.

Given an alternate choice, such as a room that's easy to keep neat and one that accommodates a variety of activities, most junior misses would settle for simplicity with a touch of color.

PERHAPS THE growing unisex approach to life will filter down to the private pad level and wipe out the foolishness of a his-and-hers childhood environment. We do start pushing sexuality and male-female preferences pretty early in life, and probably cause children to choose one side or the other.

Even our dens (as in den of iniquity) are given the masculine look and we stress the "hisness" of high-back leather chairs and recliners, when in fact most of us, male and female, enjoy a really capacious chair.

So when planning a room for a pre-schooler or pre-teener, why not just decide that the main furnishings should be asexual? They should serve all the needs shared by growing children.

THE ROOM itself can easily reflect individuality. But that's done with color, personal artworks, hobby equipment and temporary interests. The things that don't change are the storage spaces.

Bookshelves, a work table or desk, clothing storage and fluctuating toy storage spaces are basics. And the solutions needn't be different for the 4-year-old than they are for the 10-year-old. In fact, furniture that adapts to a growing child's needs is the only wise investment for a young family.

The room shown on this page is geared for a particular little girl. But if you strip the accoutrements and look at the basic units of furniture, you'll see their sexlessness and practicality.

IN THIS CASE the furnishings are lacquered in poster pink, orange and green. But they also are available in white, blue and a bittersweet orange color. The chests and mini-armoire unit are scaled slightly smaller than adult, but with regrouping these components could stay in the family for many years.

The room was designed by a young family-type, Carolyn Bishop, the home furnishings editor of Family Circle magazine. She worked with Gail Morgan, interior designer, to create a 24-hour living room for a youngster.

The trundle bed was a must for the room, since Ms. Bishop says the lower portion can be pulled out for daily lounging as well as for that overnight guest. And when pulled half-out, in an island position, it makes a great junior chaise!

ALL OF THE pieces were chosen from Bassett's Rallie collection and are wisely surfaced in spill-proof white Micarta plastic. Floors are easy-wipe vinyl with just a touch of luxury in the deep shag rug.

Here's a room where a child's mind can take shape — not one that will shape the child to his parents' preconceived notions of the beautiful life.

DON'T LAY ON too much of a "his-and-hers" emphasis in decorating your child's living quarters, advises home fashions writer Carolyn Murray. Instead, go the easy, unisex way, and give the youngster a place to play, learn and mature. Girls don't necessarily need ruffles. A pleasing color scheme is far more satisfying. As an example of such a room, Miss Murray points to this one done with pieces from Bassett's Rallie Group, and a minimum of fuss and feathers. Carolyn Bishop and Gail Morgan were the designers.

Maybe we have a haughty exterior, but test our interior for prices and ideas, on draperies, carpets, etc.

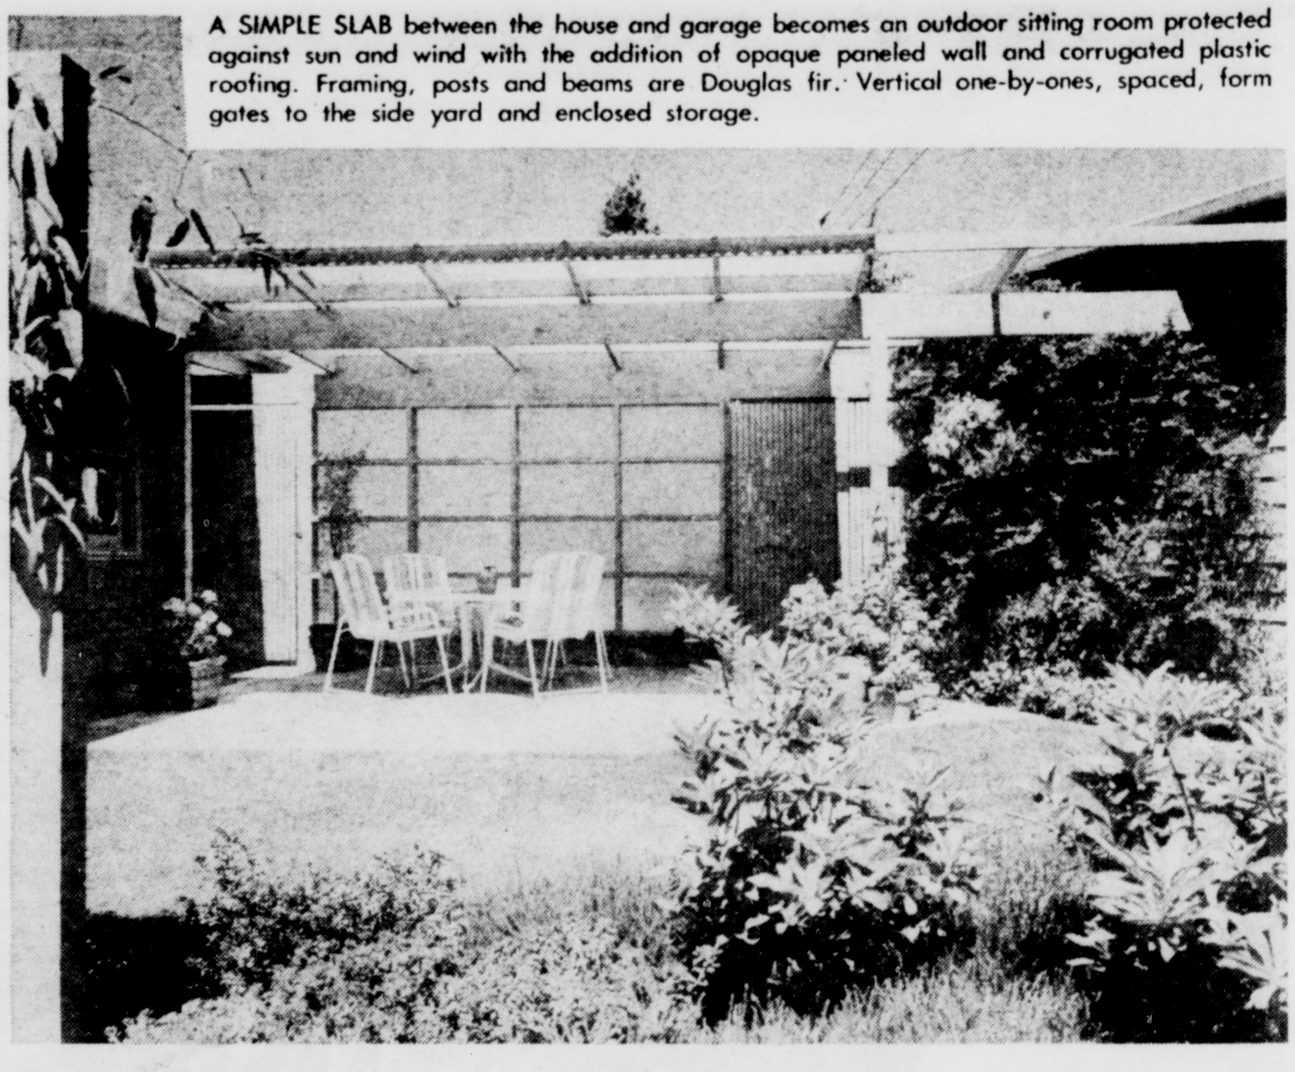
Plan The Patio To Serve As Outdoor Room



A SIMPLE SLAB between the house and garage becomes an outdoor sitting room protected against sun and wind with the addition of opaque paneled wall and corrugated plastic roofing. Framing, posts and beams are Douglas fir. Vertical one-by-ones, spaced, form gates to the side yard and enclosed storage.

Proper location for a backyard patio is a little more complicated than backing a cement mixer up near the back door and pushing the "pour" button.

Planning a new patio is just like planning a new room — The object is to get as much return as possible from the investment. To make an outdoor room pay dividends in hours of pleasant open-air lounging, dining, reading or sunning, walk over the most likely site with compass in hand to determine the exposure.

AN IDEAL angle captures morning sun for systematic tanning and healthy container gardening on deck or patio, then becomes a haven of shade on hot afternoons for cool dining or relaxing.

If the site isn't perfect, and few are, then stack the deck with environment controlling screens and sunshades to offset nature's deficiencies.

One family recently visited built its patio in the area between house and garage. Dimensions were right and location was central, accessible from all critical areas: kitchen, dining room, garden, side yard and garage.

CLOSENESS TO the two main structures lends a sheltered feeling but still the spot was subject to prevailing winds and strong sunshine.

To create needed cover, corrugated plastic roofing panels were fastened to a framework of two-by-six inch Douglas fir stringers over four-by-four inch posts on two-by-eight inch beams spanning the patio from house to garage.

The attractive wood and plastic theme set by the roof continues in a side wall facing northern exposure. Sixteen rectangular opaque panels form a neat four-row pattern in light-stained one-by-two inch fir framing.

TRANSLUCENT panels admit light but block the wind and effectively screen a neighboring yard. Clean framing lines which repeat the spacing of roofing stringers add balance and continuity to the design.

A trim gate of vertical, slightly-spaced one-by-ones on one side of the plastic-paneled center wall gives access to the side yard, and its match on the other side opens to convient storage for garden items and deck chairs.

Sun roof and screen not only make the patio a favored spot in high summer but actually seem to stretch the season to savor a few extra late autum. days of fading sunshine in its shelter. And children will happily use it right on through the winter.

They are not only toys that challenge the imaginations of tots, but colorful toy boxes as well. Or chairs, or any number of other uses. And they can be built inexpensively with simple woodworking tools. The dimensions: 16 by 16 by 16 inches.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plants in containers require more food than those in the ground. Figure on two feedings for every one you'd give to the same plant growing in the open ground.

✓ Feed lawns lightly if it has been a month since you last did it. Water them deeply and regularly through the dry summer season.

✓ It's not too early to start sowing winter vegetables. Carrots, lettuce, radishes, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower are all candidates.

✓ The dry summer and foot traffic may have compacted the soil beneath your lawn. If so, a bit of spiking will make your watering and feeding more effective.

✓ Chrysanthemums are coming on. Select them in bloom at your nursery for October-November color.

Planning For Your Autumn Color Show

It's the mark of a wise gardener that he is always looking ahead.

He knows that the middle of spring is too late to plant spring color — so he had planned and planted accordingly. Midsummer is no time to wonder where warm season bloom is to come from — he has already assured himself of summer color by planting ahead of time.

RIGHT NOW, the conscientious gardener is looking ahead to fall for the possibilities of color which come in that wonderful season.

He is bringing along chrysanthemums and dahlias for a fall show of color. If 'mums weren't started earlier, nurseries always seem to have blooming pots of this popular flower, which can be transplanted directly into the gardem.

Dwarf dahlias and zinnias will provide plenty of color for autumn enjoyment; giant-flowering marigolds should be planted for the brilliant splashes for autumnal orange and yellow.

The wise gardener is also watering, mulching and feeding his roses to insure a good fall display of blooms and considering new varieties with colors to match the season. And, if his garden lacks them, he is shopping nurseries for shrubs and trees that will color-up when the first cold nights set in.

THE HYBRID liquidambar trees (sweet gum) offer surefire fall foliage color, and varying intensities of brilliance are to be enjoyed from the fall foliages of maidenhair (ginkgo), Chinese pistache, Japanese cherry, or tupelo (Nyssa sylvatica).

Many northern California gardeners know fall color success with Dogwoods and Mollis azaleas. Photinia, heavenly bamboo, Oregon grape and hopseed bush (dodonea) thrive throughout the state. Some members of the Viburnum family color-up beautifully.

Let your nurseryman assist you in selecting the plant materials to assure a colorful fall season in your garden. But act now. October will be too late.

One Vote For Sprayer

Spraying, we think, is better than dusting in the garden. Dusting is messy, since chemical particles spread, and it is more expensive.

The main targets are chewing and sucking insects.

Experts report Sevin and Malathion are good in combination. Sevin kills chewing insects, such as bean and striped cucumber beetles. Malathion eradicates such suckers as aphids and leaf hoppers.

Also recommended for home gardens until two weeks before harvest are Manzate and Captan.

These four chemicals are used two tablespoons each per one gallon of water.

For effective coverage, try a mixture of two insecticides plus one fungicide to get rid of most pest insects and hold down disease. Don't wait until your plants are covered with bugs.

FULL RANGE OF RECLINING POSITIONS
From lounge—to TV partial recline — to full stretch-out comfort.

Probably only once or twice in a lifetime will you buy a chair for Dad. So naturally you want it to be a good one - One Dad himself would pick for comfort, durability, and Value. Well, here it is. Sure to please him every time he settles into its relaxing comfort through the years.

THIS IS a noble chair! Some recliners are a wee bit skimpy for total relaxing, but not this one. The back and seat adjust perfectly to assure this total comfort. Some chairs feel pretty hard after you've been sitting for awhile, but not this chair. It's foam lavished. Yes, every point of contact is deliciously foam padded, from deeply tufted back to the 5" thick foam seat. Even the arms and footrest are comfortable foam padded. And every ounce of foam is effectively supported and permanently anchored to always stay in place without ever becoming lumpy.

Oh, this is a handsome chair, too. Dad will surely be the envy of his friends, when they see it. You shall be proud you gave it to Dad, proud of the way it looks in your home. The fabric has the appearance of fine leather, but it's really a far more practical plastic. Not ordinary plastic, mind you, but supple, luxurious vinyl that's also tough and resistant to snags. Easy to keep clean, too — just wipe soil away with a damp cloth. The colors are rich and clear.

Like we said, this is THE Recliner Dad wants. We bought enough to get the price way down, so you can buy at a clearance price. But the VALUE here is so sensational our supply won't last forever. So don't disappoint DAD — don't miss this FANTASTIC RECLINER VALUE. Make your selection now (phone your order if you can't come in).

One more thing: you can give Dad this chair without wrecking your budget. Just place it on our Revolving Charge Plan, Bank Americard or Master Charge. But do it NOW.

GOP Labor Plank Sop To Meany

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — White House agents succeeded Saturday in killing a conservative-backed, Republican platform endorsement of "right-to-work" laws, which AFL-CIO President George Meany has cited in withholding support from George S. McGovern.

Instead, during a heavily guarded 17-hour session that ended at nearly 2 a.m., the GOP Platform Committee approved a draft plank simply praising organized labor as the "cornerstone" of America's free enterprise system.

Omitted by the 108-member committee, reportedly at the insistence of high administration officials who flew down from Washington, was any mention of "right-to-work" legislation.

These laws, vigorously opposed by Meany as anti-union, were clearly endorsed in the party's 1968 platform on which President Nixon won a narrow election victory over Hubert H. Humphrey four years ago, against labor's determined opposition.

The White House obviously sought to avoid waving a red flag this year at Meany and the AFL-CIO Executive Council, which are sitting out the 1972 presidential campaign. Meany has criticized McGovern, the Democratic nominee, for a Senate vote during the Johnson administration interpreted as opposing repeal of Section 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act which authorizes states to outlaw labor contract requirements that employes belong to a union.

One of the conservative committee members, Ernest L. Wilkinson of Provo, Utah, said the platform's omission of a right-to-work endorsement was "a political decision" contrary to sentiments of most delegates.

Another conservative, who requested anonymity, said that "despite all the insults that George Meany gave Nixon when he came to Florida," for the AFL-CIO convention last winter, "they (the White House) wanted us to turn the other cheek. I'd turn the other cheek all right, but it wouldn't be on my face."

Among the White House operatives on hand for the final platform writing were Bryce Harlow, a Washington lobbyist and former Nixon liaison man with Congress, and John D. Ehrlichman, the President's counselor for domestic affairs who conceded Friday he was "a little ... right" about a right-to-work plank.

Sources close to the Platform Committee's deliberations on the fourth floor of the Fontainebleau Hotel reported that the White House gave in to a drive by committee women led by Rep. Margaret Hechler, R-Mass., to have the platform endorse day care centers for children of working mothers.

The original White House approved platform language said "we emphatically oppose massive federal spending" for day care, a Democratic feature of an appropriations bill which Nixon, complaining of a threat to family life, vetoed last year.

But the committee, sources said, overcame White House

Longshoremen, Teamo Merger?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The West Coast longshoremen's union announced yesterday agreement on "a proposal of merger" with the Teamsters Union, the largest independent labor union in the United States.

Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (ILWU), said a final decision to merge with the Teamsters would rest with the 15,000 members who man the docks on the West Coast and in Hawaii.

Bridges said merger proposal was begun because the ILWU was not "getting any stronger" due to technology and other changes in waterfront operations.

ART INSIDE THE WALLS

The Peter Bekey family of Terra Linda examine their purchases at the 18th Annual San Quentin Art Show and Sale, held today. The Bekeys were among approximately 5,000 persons who had thronged to the prison by 11 a.m. to view and purchase inmate paintings, crafts, leather work and jewelry. Prison officials said approximately $10,000 in items had been sold by noon. The Bekeys, shown here with children Richie, in his mother's arms, Lint, standing, and Kim, seated, say they attend every San Quentin show and always buy four or five paintings. COUNCILMAN'S STAND

Laughlin Won't Join The Army

Stephen Laughlin, 24-year-old Cotati city councilman, has refused induction into the Army on moral grounds and vows to go to jail rather than enter the service.

Laughlin said yesterday he submitted to two days of preinduction physicals and testing at the Oakland Induction Center last month but refused to step forward to take the oath and be inducted.

"My reasons are on moral grounds," Laughlin said. The councilman, elected in April, said he has long opposed the Vietnam war, pushing antiwar resolutions through the city council and writing letters to President Nixon objecting to the war.

"I probably could have worked at it and done something to my body (deliberately injure himself), but I didn't feel I should ruin myself for the Army," he said. He did not seek conscientious objector status.

Joseph Reeves of the U.S. attorney's office in San Francisco said yesterday that Laughlin has not yet been reported by the Army as a draft violator. He said when a report is received, his office will conduct an investigation to determine if the matter should be submitted to a federal grand jury for possible indictment.

Reeves said the process may take a long time since a staff of three attorneys normally handles between 400 and 600 draft cases a year.

STEPHEN LAUGHLIN
'On moral grounds'

Laughlin said he lost his student deferment when he entered graduate school at Sonoma State College. At that time deferments were extended only to undergraduate students. An appeal by Laughlin to have the status restored was denied by his selective service board in Sonoma County.

Laughlin said he originally was notified to appear for induction more than a year ago, but merely ignored that and subsequent notices.

"Last month I noticed two men following me around town in a car and a few days later they turned up at my house and I knew for sure they were FBI agents," he said. "The agents told me I'd better show up or they would escort me there."

Laughlin said that after the physical testing program was completed he was separated

The Metric System Has Senate Nod

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate has pushed the United States along the historic first step to adoption of the metric system of weights and measures.

The United States is the only major nation that uses pounds, quarts and inches as official measures. Under the Senate bill, weights would be determined in kilograms, liquids in liters and distances in meters.

The bill passed by the Senate Friday and headed for the House would spread the conversion over a 10-year period.

Recommended in 1971 after a three-year Commerce Department study, the legislation declares that the metric system should be the predominant, but not the exclusive system of measurement in the United States.

It would establish an 11-member National Metric Conversion Board to prepare within 18 months a plan for conversion, and declare as federal policy that government procurement practices will be used to encourage use of the metric system.

The Senate Commerce Committee, which managed the bill, said that 11 per cent of the country's economy is already on the metric system, primarily in medical, engineering, drug, military and scientific fields.

The only other countries in the world not on the metric system or committed to making the change are Barbados, Gambia, Ghana, Liberia, Muscat and Oman, Sierra Leone, Southern Yemen, Tonga and Trinidad.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., said the conversion would "enable United States industry to compete more effectively overseas, since every other industrialized country in the world uses metric measurements."

Allies Rip Massed Quang Tri Tanks

29 Enemy Vehicles Lost In Attacks

SAIGON (UPI) — North Vietnamese troops marked the 27th anniversary of Ho Chi Minh's takeover of Hanoi by attempting Saturday to move up masses of tanks to the Quang Tri city front but allied troops and planes knocked out at least 29 of them, military spokesmen said.

Heavy fighting also erupted in the Que Son valley, 25 miles southwest of Da Nang, and in the Mekong Delta below Saigon, where a high-ranking U. S. military adviser was wounded when his helicopter was hit by gunfire.

In the Quang Tri city fighting, South Vietnamese Marines killed 17 members of a North Vietnamese platoon (32 men at full strength) during a probing attack. The marines found several of the bodies had been tattooed with the words, "Born in the north to die in the south," UPI reporter Ted Kurrus said.

Kurrus said South Vietnamese Dragonfly jet bombers knocked out eight of 12 North Vietnamese tanks spotted Saturday two miles west of Quang Tri city. On Friday, South Vietnamese planes knocked out 11 tanks south of Quang Tri city, a military spokesman said.

The spokesman said seven other North Vietnamese tanks were knocked out by U.S. planes Friday and Saturday within 10 miles of Quang Tri, while South Vietnamese marines and paratroopers destroyed three others in the same area.

It was the biggest tank kill since the start of the South Vietnamese counter-offensive in Quang Tri province June 28. It coincided with the anniversary of the August day in 1945 when the late President Ho Chi Minh's Viet Minh forces entered Hanoi following the defeat of the Japanese in World War II.

The U. S. command reported Saturday a second American plane—a U.S. Navy A7 Corsair II attack bomber—was shot down during the massive 370 tactical air strikes against North Vietnam Wednesday. The North Vietnamese had claimed that five American planes were destroyed. Earlier, the U.S. command had reported a Navy F4 Phantom destroyed during the raids.

Both planes were shot down by SAM2 antiaircraft missiles. All three crewmen were listed as missing. It brought to 24 the number of American planes downed by SAM2 missiles during the current North Vietnamese offensive.

The U.S. command also reported that a U.S. Army AH1 helicopter made a forced landing Friday after being hit by ground fire 47 miles northwest of Qui Nhon in the coastal highlands. One crewman was wounded, military spokesmen said.

UPI reporter Matt Franjola said that a South Vietnamese Air Force CH47 Chinook helicopter went out of control and crashed while taking off from the Kontum city airport in the Central Highlands late Saturday. The crew and an unknown number of refugees were killed, Franjola said, when the helicopter burned on impact.

The helicopter was one of a dozen Vietnamese and American choppers ferrying refugees from the border ranger camp at Ben Het, about 25 miles northwest of Kontum. Most of the approximately 50 refugees aboard left the helicopter when it landed to refuel but a number were still aboard, Franjola said.

UPI photographer Willie Vicoy reported that Highway 4 remained blocked for the sec-

Hijack Ends With Shooting

SEATTLE (UPI)—An FBI agent Friday night shot and wounded a hijacker who 13 hours earlier rode a bicycle with a rifle strapped to the handlebars across the Reno, Nev. airport, commandeered a Boeing 727 jetliner and demanded a $2 million ransom.

The FBI identified the captured suspect as Frank Markoe Sibley Jr., 43, of Stateline Village, Nev., a Lake Tahoe community near Reno.

Sibley was rushed to a private room at King County hospital where he was questioned by FBI agents.

FBI agents, posing as a relief crew, sneaked a pistol aboard the United Air Lines jet on a runway at Seattle-Tacoma Airport to thwart the biggest eftortion attempt in U.S. airline history.

Less than $1 million of the ransom was collected because the airline could not come up with the full amount. He also received 15 gold bricks.

The salt and pepper haired, middle-age hijacker was shot in the back, neck and leg. The wounds did not appear serious. The man was conscious and talking as he was carried away on a stretcher.

The gunman claimed he was part of a paramilitary organization opposed to the Vietnam war which was involved in a conspiracy to blow up United planes unless the war is ended.

The hijacker took off with three crewmen from Reno after releasing 25 passengers and stewardesses and flew to Vancouver, B.C. He had gotten to the plane at Reno by riding a bicycle across the air field to the parked jet and ran aboard with his rifle.

While at the Vancouver airport the hijacker demanded three tommy guns, three pistols and three holsters. None of the items was delivered but he got some of the money at Vancouver and 15 pounds of gold. More money was taken aboard at Seattle.

The plane was on the runway in Seattle for six hgurs and FBI agents hid under the aircraft waiting for an opportunity to move in.

The hijacker made a statement over Seattle radio station KVI in which he said he was part of a paramilitary group.

"If the so-called hijacked aircraft is destroyed by our members due to an attack, we will avenge the sacrifice by destroying your fleet one by one until passengers will no longer ride with you," he said in the broadcast.

Two FBI agents from Portland, Ore., were driven to the plane on a forklift truck. Both men are licensed pilots and were posing as the relief crew.

While the two men stripped off their airline uniforms at the hijacker's demand, a third agent worked his way to the front of the plane's belly where he lifted a pistol on a pole to one of the regular crew in the cockpit.

The agents, after putting their clothes back on, entered the cockpit. A crewman then passed the weapon to one of them who shot the suspect.

The man was caught "totally by surprise," said FBI agent Joe O'Connell, and did not have a chance to fire the rifle.

"We had a general plan to move in when we were assured the crew was safe as possible," O'Connell said.

Busy Congress Recesses; 'Tidy-Up' Session Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congress has recessed for two weeks leaving behind so much unfinished business that some members were gloomily predicting a post election session to tidy up the loose ends.

Both houses adjounred yesterday so Republican leaders could attend their national convention and other members could campaign for the fall elections. Congress reconvenes Sept. 5.

The target date for final adjournment was Oct. 7 or at the latest Oct. 14. But many members concede that so much remains to be done that a lame duck session may be needed.

Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., jammed the Senate calendar yesterday by introducing a little-used parliamentary tactic in hopes of forcing swift floor consideration of the House-passed antibusing bill.

The strong antibusing measure, approved by the House on a 282-102 roll call vote early Friday, was sent to the Senate several hours later. Allen threatened to block the recess until he was assured the bill would not be sent to the Labor and Public Welfare Committee where antibusing forces said it would be killed.

The measure would ban court ordered cross-town busing of any student and allow for the reopening of old desegregation orders that do not comply with the bill's guidelines.

The Senate began debate on a $34.8 billion revenue-sharing bill which would allow states, and localities to share a portion of federal income tax revenues on a no-strings attached basis. The House has overwhelmingly passed a similar measure.

In other Congressional action:

—The House approved a bill to liberalize government export controls on U.S. products which are available to Communist countries from other Western sources.

—The Senate gave final congressional approval to legislation that would set aside the new eligibility regulations for the guaranteed student-loan program.

—The Senate approved by voice vote a bill to extend a government loan guarantee program for small airlines and triple the amount any one carrier may borrow under it.

Lopsided House Support To U.S., Russia N-Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) —With only seven members voting "No," the House yesterday approved an interim agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union to limit offensive nuclear weapons.

Among those voting against the Strategic Arms Limitation (SALT) agreement were the American Independent Party's presidential candidate, John G. Schmitz, R-Calif., and John M. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, who unsuccessfully tried to wrest the GOP nomination from President Nixon.

The lopsided 329-7 roll call vote Friday came in spite of widespread criticism from House members about "loopholes" and "dangers."

The agreement, signed in Moscow May 26 by President Nixon and Chairman Leonid Brezhnev, is bogged down in the Senate which has been tied down by debate over whether the United States came out on the short end of the pact.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., charging that the Russians lied about the number of their ballistic missile-carrying submarines, has introduced an amendment urging the President to seek "equality" with the Russians in the second round of SALT talks this fall.

The agreement must be passed by a majority of both Houses before it takes effect.

The Jackson amendment figured in the House debate Friday.

Chairman Thomas E. Morgan of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said under prodding that he would be "sympathetic" to the Jackson amendment if it is included in the Senate bill and the two Houses go to conference to reach a compromise

All-Out Police Crackdown On N.Y. Mafia Ordered

NEW YORK (UPI)—All policemen in the nation's largest city have been ordered to survey the home, work and social lives of all underworld figures in an effort to put an end a year-long Mafia war.

The order by Police Commissioner Patrick V. Murphy Friday came one day after Mayor John V. Lindsay, angered at the fatal shootings of two businessmen mistaken for gangsters, ordered the Police Department to "make it impossible for the mob to do business in this city."

"The city and the Police Department are declaring allout war against organized crime," Murphy told a news conference. "We want to alert the whole community — the churches, the schools, the citizens groups— about this terrible menace within our midst."

Each of the 31,000 policemen on the force was ordered to follow and report daily on the movements of "those mobsters who wear $500 suits and drive $15,000 cars—and who are savages," Murphy said.

He said he hoped soon to see some results of the constant surveillance.

Lindsay said Thursday that, as part of his attempt to drive the mob from the city, he was accepting a police recommendation to make public a list of businesses in which the Mafia has a financial interest.

Ira Glasser, head of the New York Civil Liberties Union, said this was a scatter-gun approach that could incriminate innocent people.

Since Joseph A. Colombo Sr. was shot in the head last summer, there have been about 25 underworld slayings in New York. The killing grew more frequent five months ago after the fatal shooting of Joseph "Crazy Joe" Gallo. He was a leader of a crime family which was a rival of Colombo.

Two meat company executives were fatally shot Aug. 11 and two others wounded in a restaurant. Police said they had been mistaken by a hired, out-of-town gunman for organized crime figures who had just left the seats the businessmen were in.

McGovern: It Was An Up, Down Week

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Sen. George S. McGovern has completed a four-day campaign swing through the Midwest, which he admits was less successful than expected.

It was "a week of ups and downs but on balance a plus," said McGovern before boarding a plane in Milwaukee for the return trip to Washington.

His advisers were more blunt saying that the only achievement was filming for commercials that will be shown on television this fall.

McGovern acknowledged that a midweek mixup—in which he first denied and then confirmed that Pierre Salinger had been acting as his emissary to North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris —had not helped him. He said he would be "more cautious" in his future communications.

McGovern spent much of the week defending himself against White House and Republican National Committee charges.

"They're shooting at me from all sides," he said. "...The strategy is to keep 15 people taking potshots at me while the President pretends he doesn't even know an election is going on."

McGovern said he had been rough on Nixon, too. "But I'm doing it. I'm not asking other people to do it for me."

McGovern said he planned to spend the weekend at home before setting out on a cross country foray that will take him to Texas Tuesday and Chicago Wednesday.

Violence And A Parade In Belfast

BELFAST (UPI) — Milk churns packed with explosives exploded in the path of a British patrol on the Irish Republic border today, wounding three soldiers.

Pre-dawn fires police said might be the work of arsonists destroyed the town hall of Carnlough in County Antrim and part of the grandstand of Belfast's Celtic Park soccer field. A bomb thrown from a car blasted a Belfast confectionery shop. No injuries were reported.

Also in Belfast, thousands of militant Protestants defied a British ban to parade through downtown Belfast in paramilitary uniforms. Police called the turnout of at least 20,000 members of the Ulster Defense Association (UDA) the biggest show of militant strength since the Ulster strife began three years ago.

It coincided with the appearance of UDA patrols and roadblocks in Protestant districts in what spokesman said was a reaction to the latest burst of bomb blasts and random assassinations. Police said some of the murders were believed to be the work of psychopathic gangs killing people for fun.

The thousands of men wearing the field jackets, fatigue caps and sunglasses of the UDA massed in neighborhoods throughout Belfast to march through the central business district to a rendezvous near the docks. Protestant residents flocked into the streets to cheer.

Soldiers with cameras mingled with the crowds to take photographs of the participants and police noted the names of men they recognized for possible prosecution, an Army spokesman said. It was the first time the UDA has marched without face masks as part of their uniforms, which the government banned.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

229 Are Killed

SEOUL (UPI)—Rescue workers intensified efforts today to reach possible survivors trapped in landslides triggered by an unprecedented heavy downpour, which dumped nearly 1.5 feet of rain in central South Korea in less than 30 hours and caused widespread death and destruction.

As of 7 p.m. today, 229 persons were confirmed killed and 42 others missing. Another 171 persons were injured, many of them seriously, police said. More than 100,000 persons were left homeless.

Weathermen said the rain front was gradually moving south, relieving the flooded region.

Police said U.S. and Korean military helicopters rescued about 2,000 persons marooned in the outlying areas of Seoul and the eastern part of the country.

Young Stowaway

LONDON (UPI)—A three-year-old boy today became perhaps the world's youngest airline stowaway, shocking his father with his bawling presence on a flight from Los Angeles to London.

Trans World Airlines flight 760 landed at London's Heathrow airport today with James Woo-san, 40, still puzzling over how his son Mark wound up in the lavatory of the jetliner.

Woo-san, a psychologist from Inglewood, Calif., told newsmen he thought he had left Mark safely with his mother and two sisters at Los Angeles airport when his son suddenly appeared in the arms of a stewardess coming down the aisle.

McIntire Jeered

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Fundamentalist preacher Carl McIntire, here to hold an "Honor America" rally, visited the enemy camp yesterday and turned the other cheek to jeers and taunts.

McIntire, a conservative radio evangelist from Collingswood, N.J., ventured into Flamingo Park, the campsite of youthful antiwar protesters gathered for the Republican National Convention.

He came away with red paint on one hand, protest slogans daubed on his white shoes, and memories of demonstrators blowing marijuana smoke in his face and showering him with torn scraps of vest-pocket Bibles he had given them.

McIntire, who has encountered similar heckling on the several "Vietnam victory marches" he has led in Washington, never lost his temper during the 45-minute confrontation.

Jews Hear Shriver

HOUSTON (UPI)—Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver said yesterday Jews will support Sen. George S. McGovern for president in the fall elections.

"George McGovern is the heir to this Democratic legacy," Shriver told the Jewish War Veterans Association. "I have no doubt that in November American Jews will once again support the Democratic party, the party of humane change."

Shriver's charged the Nixon administration with "playing politics with the relationship between the United States and the State of Israel.

Last night in Philadelphia, Shriver told the National Association of Radio and Television Announcers that the dreams of the Kennedy era are "still very much alive."

Permission To U.S.

TOKYO (UPI)—Japan's Construction Ministry today granted the U.S. Army conditional permission to use a national highway to transport Vietnam-bound tanks to the port at Yokosuka.

Leftist protestors earlier staged sit-down demonstrations on the route and in front of the U.S. Army Supply Depot at Sagamihara, 35 miles southwest of Tokyo, to stop the tank movement. The demonstrators stormed the main gate of the depot last night, damaging the guard shelter.

No one was reported injured and no arrests were made, a military spokesman said.

Some Stay On Isle

HONOLULU (UPI) —All but a handful of workers were evacuated from the United States mid-Pacific nerve gas arsenal on Johnston Island today in the face of a hurricane.

An Army spokesman in Hawaii said it was "almost inconceivable that any combination of circumstances could result in any hazard to human or other life on Johnston Island due to leakage" of the more than 13,000 tons of nerve and mustard gas transferred there from Okinawa last year.

Military and civilian jets evacuated all but 10 of the 580 military and civilian personnel from 3,000-foot-long Johnston atoll, 800 miles southwest of Hawaii. Hurricane Celeste was expected to clobber the lowlying island with 150 mile an hour winds early today.

Jet Blast Arrests

ROME (UPI)—Italian police today arrested two Arab men in connection with a plot to blow up an El Al airliner carrying 149 persons on a flight from Rome to Tel Aviv. They said the men admitted giving two English girl passengers a tape recorder as a gift but denied planting a bomb in it.

The arrests came about 60 hours after an explosion Wednesday tore through the baggage compartment of the jetliner.

The plane returned safely to Leonardo da Vinci airport, where police found the remains of a bomb hidden inside a tape recorder.

Police said the two men were arrested outside a bar in central Rome and carried passports identifying them as Adnan Mohamed Ali Hasham, 29, of Amman, Jordan, and Ahmed Zaid, 32, of Baghdad, Iraq.

Extensive Pullout

CAIRO (UPI)—Political sources said today the Russian pullout ordered last month by President Anwar Sadat was far more extensive than at first believed and there are only about 300 Soviet military personnel left in Egypt.

If the figure is correct, it might be the least number of Soviets in 17 years, the sources said.

The sources said an estimated 15,000 advisers have left the country, leaving about 60 "instructors" at military schools and some 200 other trainers with armed forces units.

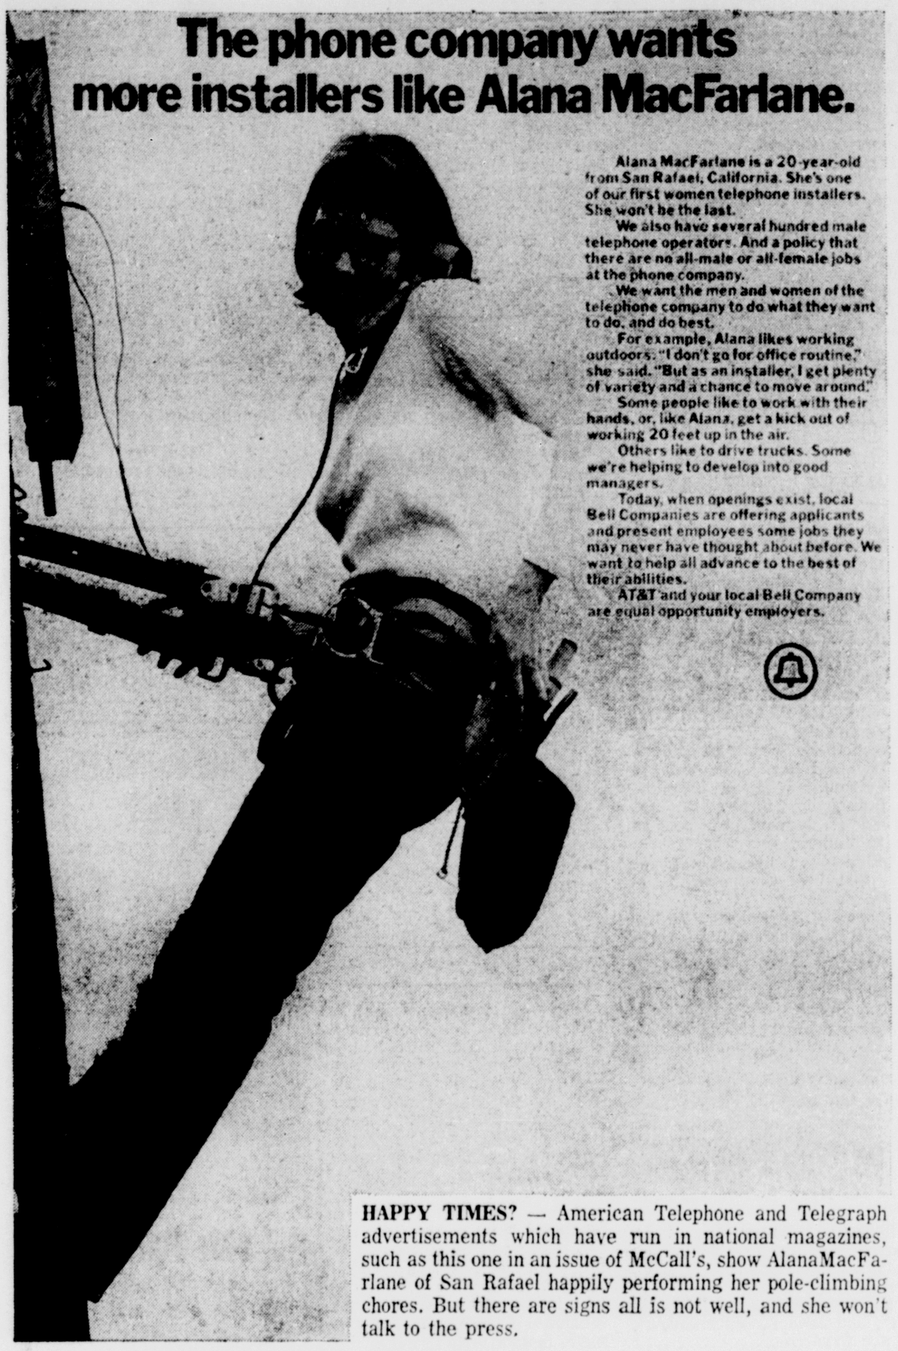
The phone company wants more installers like Alana MacFarlane.



Alana MacFarlane is a 20-year-old from San Rafael, California. She's one of our first women telephone installers. She won't be the last.

We also have several hundred male telephone operators. And a policy that there are no all-male or all-female jobs at the phone company.

We want the men and women of the telephone company to do what they want to do, and do best.

For example, Alana likes working outdoors. "I don't go for office routine," she said. "But as an installer, I get plenty of variety and a chance to move around."

Some people like to work with their hands, or, like Alana, get a kick out of working 20 feet up in the air.

Others like to drive trucks. Some we're helping to develop into good managers.

Today, when openings exist, local Bell Companies are offering applicants and present employees some jobs they may never have thought about before. We want to help all advance to the best of their abilities.

AT&T and your local Bell Company are equal opportunity employers.

HAPPY TIMES? — American Telephone and Telegraph advertisements which have run in national magazines, such as this one in an issue of McCall's, show AlanaMacFarlane of San Rafael happily performing her pole-climbing chores. But there are signs all is not well, and she won't talk to the press.

Job Conflict Reported For Telephone-Pole Girl

Reports that a young San Rafael women — who became the first female to work as an installer-repairman for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. in Northern California, — has asked for a desk job were confirmed and then denied yesterday by a company spokesman.

The reports came on the heels of a nationwide advertising campaign in which 20-year-old Alana MacFarlane is described as one of the first women telephone installers in the nation.

Miss MacFarlane, who signed up for pole duty last fall, told the Independent-Journal at that time that she considered the work a challenge. She could not be reached for comment yesterday.

A telephone company public relations official yesterday confirmed a report that Miss MacFarlane had been on sick leave and had requested a transfer from the field. Later, he said she had been on vacation and was not seeking a job change.

He first said she had requested a "line assignment" or indoor desk job, calling the move a "logical progression."

He said the shift was an "advancement" although noting other employees had been assigned similar posts without first logging experience in the field.

Miss MacFarlane, who worked as a clerk in Pacific Telphone's San Francisco and San Rafael service centers before her pole-climbing assignment, wants to leave the field because she is ambitious, the official added.

"You just don't understand how the phone company works," he declared.

The official could neither confirm nor deny reports that Miss MacFarlane has been subjected to verbal abuse, harassed and ridiculed by male coworkers in the field.

He refused to allow the Independent-Journal to speak with her. "She won't even know you called," he said.

The official reversed his position an hour later.

"She has not asked or applied for a desk job," he said, adding she had returned to work last Monday after a two-week vacation. Miss MacFarlane put in a normal shift repairing and installing lines in San Rafael's Canal Area this week, he said.

He did not explain his changed report and again refused to allow an interview with the young woman because "she has declined to speak to any member of the press."

"She prefers to lead a private life," he said.

Pacific Telephone's parent company, American Telephone and Telegraph, has made Miss MacFarlane the subject of a nationwide advertising campaign which promotes the corporation as an equal opportunity employer.

A picture of Miss MacFarlane perched on a telephone pole has appeared in magazines throughout the country. The ad says Miss MacFarlane prefers outdoor work. "I don't go for office routine," the ad quotes her as saying.

Suit Over Homes For The Elderly

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A suit filed in U.S. District Court yesterday demanded that the Department of Health, Education and Welfare release federal inspection records on the state's 900 nursing homes.

The suit, filed by California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger and several senior citizens groups, maintains HEW is unlawfully supressing inspection records.

HEW has claimed it is bound by law to keep the records confidential but the suit claims this is an erroneous interpretation of the law.

The 900 nursing homes annually take care of 200,000 patients and last year received more than $60 million in federal Medicare funds, the suit said.

Withholding of such records by both state and federal agencies has brought criticism from the Marin County Human Rights Department, which has been rebuffed several times while attempting to review inspection records of local nursing homes.

Gunman Sent To Vacaville

Charles E. Bonner, 25, of San Francisco, was ordered yesterday to the California Medical Facility at Vacaville for 90 days' observation following conviction in a shooting and beating case.

Bonner was convicted April 12 by a superior court jury of shooting a Lagunitas man and beating his wife after Bonner and a companion entered the James E. Nielsen home in search of drugs on Jan. 20.

The companion, Henry Johnson, 32, of San Francisco, has failed to appear in court and a bench warrant has been issued for his arrest.

Deputy probation officers recommended that Bonner's sentence be limited to time already served in Marin County Jail awaiting trial and sentence. Judge Henry J. Broderick postponed sentencing until he receives psychiatric reports from Vacaville.

$450,000 Ex-Inmate Suit Against State

A former San Quentin convict involved in the bloody adjustment center uprising last Aug. 21 has filed a claim against the state for $450,000, charging that San Quentin guards beat and tortured him to make a statement implicating other convicts in the violent events.

Former inmate Allan Curt Mancino was paroled in May and is now living in Seattle, according to attorney Salle S. Soladay of San Rafael, who filed the claim in Mancino's behalf in Sacramento.

Prison authorities refused to comment on the charges made in the claim.

Named as defendants in Mancino's claim were Warden Louis S. Nelson; James W.L. Park and A.R. Jacobs, associate wardens at San Quentin; Dr. Philip McNamara, chief medical officer at the prison, and 100 John Does.

The claim contends that on the afternoon in which Soledad Brother George Jackson, two guards and two other convicts were killed, prison guards shot Mancino in both legs while he was lying face down, shackled and nude, in the courtyard outside the adjustment center where the killings took place.

Mancino declared he was then put through surgery without anesthesia or medicine, still in chains, and then guards put a bag over his head, beat him again, and coached him into making statements against his fellow convicts in the adjustment center.

Mancino's also claims he was secretly transferred to prisons in Nevada and held incommunicado without proper medical attention. He charged he was repeatedly told if he "made any waves" the names and addresses of his relatives would be given to the convicts he incriminated in his "coached" statement, endangering his family's lives.

Mrs. Soladay said a suit would be filed in Superior Court if the claim is rejected.

Wallace Resumes Physical Therapy

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI)— Gov. George C. Wallace, who underwent surgery Wednesday, resumed light physical therapy Friday.

The operation was the third such procedure for Wallace to drain cavities caused by bullets fired in an assassination attempt May 15 at a Laurel, Md., shopping center.

objections by stressing that the day care program would be strictly voluntary (as the Democratic program also provided) and would be "locally controlled and federally assisted."

The women also were reported to have won changes in some other platform language they felt suggested that motherhood and housekeeping were more desirable goals for women than careers.

With the party's draft platform nearly completed for virtually certain approval by the GOP convention Tuesday afternoon, House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford looked ahead to the prospects of a Republican takeover of the House in November —and speculated tantalizingly on the possibility of a surprise Nixon announcement on Vietnam.

Meeting with reporters, Ford was asked whether he expected any dramatic Vietnam announcements during the three-day convention starting Monday, in view of Henry A. Kissinger's secret talks this week in Paris and Saigon.

"I am impressed by the amount of traveling Henry is doing," Ford said of the President's chief foreign policy adviser. "I don't think he is doing it for his health. There is a possibility that there will be something."

Added Ford: "I hope it comes tomorrow, regardless of whether it would have an effect on the convention. I want this war over."

Ford predicted that the coattail effect of a strong Nixon win in November might be enough —combined with legislative redistricting in some states —to give the GOP the 38 to 40 seats it would need to gain control of the House.

from the other inductees. "I guess they didn't want me to encourage the other ones," he said.

Laughlin said he believed court action could take years to complete. He has retained Cotati attorney Jay Cantor to represent him.

Laughlin's two young colleagues on the five-member council, Mayor Annette Lombardi and Geoffrey Dunham, have supported Luaghlin's anti-war resultions and are expected to support his present stand. The three unseated middle-aged incumbents in the April election.

Holdover councilmen Frank P. Dolinsek and Herbert I. Winter strongly disapproved of Laughlin's draft resistance. And both said their younger colleague should resign from the council.

"It's a dirty shame to sit with him (on the council)," Dolinsek said. "I don't like it at all. A man like that shouldn't be representing the government."

Dolinsek said he never served in the military, although "I was all ready to go (in World War II), but they never called."

"My kids put their time in the service and I did too, so I don't see why he doesn't too," Winter said. "When he was elected he took an oath to uphold the consitution of the United States. If he's not going to uphold it he should get off (the council)."

Laughlin said he does not plan to resign his council position. "I don't want the council to become a forum for this," he said. "Its a personal problem."

He said he didn't believe the publicity he's received as a councilman will have any influence on how his case is handled. "I'm not paranoid about it," Laughlin said. "I don't think they want to use me as an example.

"If it comes down to it I'll go to jail, but I don't intend to be a martyr."

between the differing resolutions.

Morgan noted that as the probable chairman of House conferees he would be committed to "defend" the House bill, but he added, "I would be amenable to a compromise settlement on the Jackson amendment."

Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., who pushed for a commitment from Morgan to take the Jackson amendment, said, "If we're wrong on this agreement we may not be around to know about it. I pray that it will not be a nuclear Yalta."

Rep. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., cited the July 1, 1972 freeze the agreement orders for the number of intercontinental ballistic missile (ICBM) launchers each country can have — 1,054 for the United States and 1,618 for Russia.

"This agreement has loopholes," said Stratton. "They have more missiles and over the five years they could MIR (multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicles) them and give Russia a substantial force that could knock out our missile force."

Showers Dampen The County

Unseasonably wet weather again dampened portions of Marin County today, continuing a midsummer series of showers.

Bolinas reported that .31 of an inch of rain had fallen in the past 24 hours as of this morning.

In Southern Marin, meanwhile, the weather was described as heavy mist to light drizzle in Sausalito, Mill Valley and Tamalpais Valley.

Sausalito had .07 of an inch at 8 a.m., while Tamalpais Valley reported .11 and Mill Valley .05. Traces were reported elsewhere in the county.

Traffic across the Golden Gate bridge was held up by two auto accidents at 8 a.m. which the California Highway said occurred during heavy drizzle.

The weather forecast for the Bay Area called for mostly fair weather today and tomorrow with night and morning cloudiness. (See page 24).

ond day 60 miles southwest of Saigon, a mile beyond Cai Be district town in the Mekong Delta. Two companies of South Vietnames militiamen battled all day with artillery and air support to drive an estimated two battalions of North Vietnamese from a bunker complex within 100 yards of the road.

Vicoy said he counted 18 North Vietnamese bodies and saw two militiamen wounded. He said more than 15 bunkers were cleared but many more remained. the North Vietnamese shelled the road with mortars. Three civilians aboard a stalled bus were wounded by a mortar shell.

About 10 miles from the scene of the Cai Be fighting a high ranking U.S. adviser was wounded Friday when his helicopter was hit by rifle fire.

The U. S. Command said Col. Roy W. McClain, chief of the Air Force advisory team at Binh Thuy air base, was struck by bullet while piloting a helicopter guunship. McClain, of Senaca, N.Y. was listed in good condition at the army's Third Field Hospital.

Trespass Charge For Two Men

A misdemeanor complaint of trespassing was filed in Marin Municipal Court yesterday against two men arrested Wednesday by San Rafael police on suspicion of burglary.

Andre Wolfgang Taylor, 18, no known address, pleaded innocent and was ordered to appear Wednesday for pretrial hearing by Judge David R. Baty Jr. His bail, originally set at $10,000, was reduced to $500 but he remained in Marin County Jail and requested appointment of the public defender.

His companion, Ioannis Sakellarien, 23, of Corte Madera, was released Thursday on his own recognizance, also to appear Wednesday for plea entry.

The two were accused of breaking into the Kent Wolfgang Guter residence at 338 Bayview Street. The occupant called police when he heard the intruders.

Spaying, Neutering To Be Explained

Dr. Raymond R. Rediske, Novato veterinarian, will explain the newly established low-cost program for spaying and neutering dogs and cats at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Marin County Humane Society, 171 Bel Marin Keys, Ignacio.

Rediske's talk at a public meeting of the Blue Ribbon Dog Breeders will cover the program of the Marin County Animal Welfare Foundation, which will start Sept. 1, according to Helyne Michael, chairman of Blue Ribbon Dog Breeders.

Jewelry Stolen From Parked Car

A Fairfax jeweler reported to San Rafael police Thursday night that jewelry valued at $3,770 was stolen from his car parked on Vivian Way between 9 and 10:25 p.m.

Robert Walter DeMartini of 118 Marinda Drive reported a woman's ring and matching wedding band, valued at $1,800, a man's gold ring, valued at $1,500, and two rings, valued at $470, were taken from the glove compartment of his car.

Officers said a pistol, valued at $85, also was reported taken.

Burglars Hit Building Office

The Cambridge Square subdivision construction office in Petaluma was burglarized and ransacked between 5 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. Thursday.

Petaluma police reported that approximately $250 worth of construction tools and a table radio were taken by thieves who also emptied the contents of drawers onto the office floor.

The building was entered by breaking a rear window, officers said.

TOGETHER AGAIN

It was a tearful reunion yesterday at the Sarasota, Fla., airport when Clifford Irving and his wife, Edith, flew in to meet their children. Barney is held by Mrs. Irving, while Nedsky is in his father's arms. The couple had flown in from New York, where she was released from prison after serving a two-month term in the Howard Hughes autobiography hoax. (UPI Telephoto)

Peevey: EOC Move Power Play

An attempt by the executive director of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council to oust two board members was branded a "blatant power play" today by supervisorial candidate Michael R. Peevey.

Peevey, who faces a runoff election in November for the Second District seat on the board of supervisors, said the removal of EOC board members William J. Bielser and J. Kevin Donovan "must not be permitted to succeed."

EOC Executive Director Alfred R. Conklin III has called for their removal for what he considers improper action in urging state officials to block a $90,000 federal grant earmarked for the agency.

Peevey, in a letter to the county board of supervisors, said he supported Donovan and Bielser and urged supervisors to do the same.

"Their publicly stated concerns regarding the gross fiscal mismanagement within their agency have been all too often confirmed," Peevey siad, referring to the EOC's misuse of about $100,000 last year.

Peevey, who in the past has called for the board of supervisors to step in and eliminate the EOC, said the "minimum administrative duties" of the EOC in overseeing other independent agencies should be turned over to someone else.

Thieu Still In The Storm Center

By COURTNEY R. SHELDON
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — President Thieu stands today, as he has for the four years of the Nixon administration, at the storm center of the Vietnam peace debate.

In the fury of the presidential campaign, the dispute rages deceptively around whether President Nixon ignored "peace signals" from Hanoi in 1969.

But, in substance, the argument is over the wisdom of negotiating seriously with the North Vietnamese if it means the early demise of the Theiu government or one similarly oriented.

Nixon's sudden dispatching of presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger to South Vietnam confirms this. Kissinger flew to Tokyo yesterday after secret talks with Thieu then returned to the U.S. today.

Though the administration is tight-lipped, the No. 1 item discussed in South Vietnam may have been the future of Thieu.

Kissinger is fresh from secret conferences with Hanoi negotiators in Paris. He carried with him to Saigon either a softening of the Communist poisition or a recommendation that the U.S. and South Vietnam modify theirs, or (and this seems most liekly) both.

The fluidity of present negotiations with Hanoi still are so great, however, that administration spokesmen caution against speculation that there has been a significant breakthrough in the Paris bargaining.

Nixon upholds the Thieu government. Senator George McGovern and Sargent Shriver do not.

When Nixon took over the White House from Lyndon B. Johnson in 1969, Kissinger thoroughly interrogated the State Department, Pentagon and Central Intelligence Agency for their best judgment of Hanoi's intentions.

In a National Security memorandum in early 1969, which surfaced in April of this year, it was stated:

"There is general U.S. Government agreement that Hanoi is in Paris for a variety of motives but not primarily out of weakness; that Hanoi is charting a course independent of Moscow, which favors negotiations, and of Peking, which opposes them; and that our knowledge of possible political factions among North Vietnamese leaders is extremely imprecise."

It also said that among the "major points of consensus" was that:

"A combination of military pressures and political tactics explains recent enemy withdrawals and lower levels of activity."

It is this judgment which is at issue in the current crossfire between Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Sargent Shriver, backed up by W. Averell Harriman and Cyrus P. Vance, who represented the U.S. at the Paris talks during the Johnson administration.

Shriver, then the U.S. ambassador to France, says that the enemy's pullbacks in 1968 were Hanoi's way of signaling the U.S. that they would buy a compromise settlement.

Rogers denies anything at all was done or said by Hanoi which constituted a peace signal.

What he is really saying is that the proffered peace that the Democratic doves might be willing to have accepted, was, from his standpoint, a fraud.

If accepted, he and Nixon have many times contended, South Vietnam would have been taken over completely and U.S. pledges of commitments henceforth would be considered worthless by the world.

Against this, the Democrat doves argue that Nixon always responds to Hanoi's signals with military toughness and more bombing. Further, it is said that the U.S. has done more than its share to save South Vietnam, and Thieu is a dictator who does not represent the dominant thinking of a South Vietnam weary of having its own people killed.

As might be expected in a politicalcampaign, there are peripheral issues rippling out from the central debate over peace signals.

Rogers is saying that if there were peace feelers of the consequence Shriver now describes, why didn't the Johnson administration do something about them?

The record of that period shows that the Paris negotiations were bogged down on such elementary questions as the shape of the table. It was a period when a lame-duck administration had no power in Washington to commit the incoming Nixon administration.

The hassle over whether Shriver himself warned the State Department that it should pursue the "peace signals" is only a side issue.

Rogers says he has no such communications from Shriver who retorts that his views were incorporated in memorandums from the Paris negotiators.

The spotlight focuses more and more on Thieu and the appearance grows that the U.S. will find ways to ease him out of the picture quicker.

Theiu moves, meanwhile, to restrict the opposition press in Saigon under emergency powers.

The New York Times reports that there is torture and mutilation of suspected Communist sympathizers in the South. And Thieu calls for relentless bombing of the North, for years if necessary.

Speedy 101 Drive By Pair Ends In Arrest

Two men roared up Highway 101 at speeds over 100 miles per hour, crashed their car through a chain link fence in Corte Madera and eventually were arrested in a Greenbrae restaurant, the California Highway Patrol has reported.

The driver of the car, William John Delany, 23, of San Francisco, was arrested on suspicion of drunken and hit-and-run driving. His passenger, Eugene Joseph Rhodes, 28, of 376 Sunset Way, Mill Valley, was arrested on suspicion of being in and about a car while drunk.

Both men were released without bail on their promise to appear Wednesday in Marin Municipal Court.

According to the patrol, their car was first spotted at about 5:30 p.m. Thursday northbound on Highway 101 near Richardson Bay Bridge.

The car was reportedly reaching speeds over 100 miles per hour and dodging rush hour traffic when it ran off the road and crashed through a chain link fence near Denny's restaurant in Corte Madera.

The car swerved onto Paradise Drive and back onto Highway 101, with several motorists in hot pursuit. The highway patrol reported that about 14 witnesses from seven cars stopped at the nearby highway patrol substation to report the wild driver.

Three highway patrol cars were dispatched to the chase and moments later, officers arrested the pair in the Refectory restaurant in the Bon Air Shopping Center at about 5:55 p.m.

Both men were released without bail because the crimes they are suspected of committing are misdemeanors.

Tax Loophole Charges Lodged

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A college student group sponsored by a Democratic state Senator has charged the legislature with creating an estimated $80 million in tax loopholes during this session.

In a report released Friday, Project Loophole said most of the estimated total went to trucking firms, bus lines and taxi companies through a bill eliminating the state gross receipts on truck cargoes and passengers.

Project Loophole is sponsored by Sen. Mervyn M. Dymally of Los Angeles.

Cost Council Bars Liquor Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The State of California has been refused an exempton of its controlled alcoholic beverage prices from federal controls, the Cost of Living Council said Thurday.

Under existing California law, the liquor manufacturer sets the retail price and this becomes the minimum legal price at which the brand can be sold, said Charles E. Kingman, district Internal Revenue Service director.

Kingman said the council determined that California liquor price laws to not require increases and an exemption might lead to larger increases than allowed under federal regulations.

Burglary Suspect In Innocent Plea

Dennis Leslie Yates, 25, of Novato, pleaded innocent yesterday to a charge of burglary before Marin Municipal Court Judge David R. Baty Jr., and was ordered to appear Sept. 7 for preliminary hearing.

Novato police arrested Yates Aug. 3 after he and a companion allegedly forced their way into the apartment of Deborah Ann Duncan, 19, of Novato, threatened her and then fled with $125 in cash.

'Little Noise Change' If Joint Use Allowed

A regional airport study of the Bay Area has concluded that there would be "no noticeable" increase in noise if civilian jetliners were permitted to use Hamilton Air Force Base.

The report, prepared by the Association of Bay Area Governments, said "evaluations indicate, at least theoretically, that a civilian jet traffic load would have no noticeable effect beyond that now existing.

"The reason for this," the report said, "is that the individual military jet operations are so much louder (many using afterburners) that despite an equal number of civilian operations the military events would dominate the NEF (noise level) contours."

The report is the final draft of a study which began last year.

Joint civilian-military use of Hamilton has been the subject of controversy in recent months between Novato residents and joint-use supporters.

County supervisors, on Tuesday, are expected to consider a request from the City of Novato to place the question of joint use before voters in November.

The San Rafael Chamber of Commerce yesterday said it supports efforts to secure federal approval for joint use of the air base.

The chamber also recommended that county supervisors become the controlling agency for joint use and not relinquish any decision-making to Novato. The city has requested a joint powers agreement for sharing in policy making.

S. Viet Newspapers Agree To Strike

SAIGON (UPI)—The Vietnamese Publishers' Association has voted to call a two-day strike of South Vietnam's more than 40 daily newspapers to protest President Nguyen Van Thieu's stiff new press regulations, a spokesman said today.

The spokesman said publishers decided against putting out papers Tuesday and Wednesday but it was not known how many papers would go along with the strike.

Reinecke: New Law 'Liberates' Wives

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A bill signed into law Friday by Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke could "liberate" some wives by allowing married women to maintain their own legal residence.

The measure by Assemblyman Henry A. Waxman, D-Los Angeles, removes a provision from current law requiring the wife "to conform to the husband's choice of reasonable place or mode of living" if the couple is not legally separated.

'No Phone Survey' By Brewers

Officials of the Theodore Hamm Co. brewers of Hamms beer, caution Marin residents that they are not conducting telephone surveys and that anyone purporting to do so is not acting in behalf of the company.

At least three Marin women have received such calls, according to Don Saccani, president of Anchor Distributing Co. in San Rafael, wholesale distributor of Hamms beer, one of whom reported her home was burglarized two days later.

They were questioned about their beverage preference, favorite brand of beer, their views on recyclable containers and, invariably, their names and addresses.

The caller — described variously as male and as an older woman — identified himself as an employee of Guidelines Inc., an alleged marketing research firm. Officials of Hamms brewery said no survey is being conducted, and no trace of such a research firm has been found.

The Campus Job-Bias Fight

She Nibbles Away At The Issues

By KATHLEEN O'GORMAN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Virginia Davis Nordin has been known to bury her head in her hands in frustration over the problems of the women employees she represents as head of the University of Michigan Commission for Women.

She has faced what she terms intransigence on the part of the university administration toward eliminating sex discrimination in employment.

Her public statements about the largely male hierarchy of this 38,000-plus campus have been combative. But so far, the men haven't risen to the bait.

Ignored, she says often deliberatey, by the administrators who hired her last fall to tackle the problems of female employees after the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) in 1970 ordered an end to discrimination at Michigan, the Women's Commission leader nevertheless nibbles away at the issues.

VIRGINIA NORDIN, head of the University of Michigan Commission for Women, poses with her husband and their daughter, Kendra, 10 months, and son, Dayton, 2. Both parents share in keeping their home running.

HER FEEL for women's rights developed, she believes, out of her education as a lawyer. But it's more basic than that, she said.

She is a woman who has said she could tave been a suffragist if born 50 years earlier. She is a wife whose fortune, in part, is tied to that of her husband. And she is a mother who works and endures the frowns of those who think her children suffer harm because of it.

Mrs. Nordin was the prime mover behind a conference, "Women's Work Has Just Begun: Legal Problems of Employing Women in Universities," sponsored by the Institute of Continuing Legal Education, a joint unit of the University of Michigan and Wayne State University law schools, and the State Bar of Michigan.

Mrs. Nordin is associate director of ICLE, and the conference, though aimed at educating participants about sexism in academe, contained the added barb of taking place on this beleaguered campus. Some of the same UM administrators, often seated on the opposite side of the table from Mrs. Nordin, were enlisted by her to speak.

And they were spoken to by representatives of HEW and the Equal Employment Opportunities Commission and by business leaders who have been through it all before.

Mrs. Nordin is a 1959 graduate of Harvard Law School. Her husband, Kenneth, is studying for a doctorate in American Culture and is teaching in the UM department of journalism.

This summer Mrs. Nordin is on a leave of absence from her ICLE and women's commission appointments to serve as adjunct professor in the UM law school's clinical law program. Her duties include working withlaw students who are allowed in Michigan, under a law professor's guidance, to represent clients in court.

BECAUSE THE Nordins are working parents, they make it a point to spend evenings at home with their children — Dayton, 2, and Kendra, 10 months — and, in Mrs. Nordin's words, "don't go out much."

The family rises at 6 a.m. and everyone has a "big, family breakfast," usually cooked by Mr. Nordin.

"It's very much a cooperative effort around here," Mrs. Nordin said. "We both do everything."

After dressing, the children are taken to a former neighbor of the Nordins who cares for them. They are picked up in the late afternoon, and the family returns to its New England saltbox-style home for dinner.

"I tend to be in very pressured situations in both my jobs, so having a different set of responsibilities at home is relaxing," Mrs. Nordin said.

"I think the best preparation for bringing up children is your natural instinct," she said. "You just have to play it by ear. . .People try to make sweeping generalizations, but it simply has to be worked out on a very individual basis."

MRS. NORDIN feels that feminism has helped her overcome "the guilt feelings that we all struggle with."

She added: "The main thing that the feminist movement has created is freedom to have individual life-styles." Continuing her career is her translation of that belief.

Although she is a scrapper for women's rights in her official capacity at the university, she has never belonged to a women's liberation group. She professes not to know if she always will remain "in the movement" physically, as she is philosophically. Her women's commission post, which she assumed last fall, came as a surprise after her name was submitted to a search committee without her knowledge.

But Mrs. Nordin recently has decided to apply for the newly created position of affirmative action officer at the university. It would be a step up from her current job, and one that would put her into the administrative mainstream. As it stands, the Women's Commission is essentially without funds, personnel or power.

"As chairwoman of the women's commission, I dont think I've ever been consulted by the executive officers of their own accord. It's the difference between being on the team and not being on the team" she said.

"It seems that I've got to be constantly pounding on the door and yelling, 'Let the women in.'"

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Helen's And Sue's Best Advice For Female Hitchhikers Is Don't

RAP:

People get so uptight about girls hitchhiking. Maybe one out of five thousand gets killed or something, but after all, that is about the same chance you take just driving a car.

I am a teenage girl who has hitched many times with no mishaps. I meet many wonderful people. Although only men and boys have picked me up, they have never given me any trouble. One guy was even nice enough to give me his raincoat when it started to rain.

Next year I'm going to thumb my way across country. My folks are having fits about it, but I'll be almost 19 then and — DOING MY OWN HITCH

DMOH:

Lots of luck. You may need it badly.

Here's what a male hitchhiker has to say:

RAP:

I thumbmy way around and I know my way around. So let me tell you, hitchhiking is not for girls. Even boys get propositioned, but if the guy insists, we're usually strong enough to discourage him. Girls aren't.

So what if the girl goes along with the pitch? Some operate that way, but they get more than they bargained for, like gang rapes. They can even get killed. Those "unidentified bodies" that turn up in rivers and vacant lots — you hear about who they were, on the road, but you don't make waves, because you might get "detained for questioning."

Take it from an 18-year-old guy. I can take care of myself but there have been times I was so scared I jumped out of the car when it was still moving. A sadist with a gun is not my idea of fun and games. — CAUTIOUS THUMBER

DMOH AND THUMBER:

I think one of you is too trusting and the other too suspicious. Hitchhiking is a chancy thing, but every man who stops to give a girl a ride isn't a slobbering sex maniac.

My advice to thumbers is: If you must hitch, then be prepared for any situation: know how to get out of certain predicaments (judo helps); know exactly where you're going, and don't get talked into "side trips." — SUE

DEAR BOTH OF YOU:

. . . And my advice to thumbers (especially girls) is: Don't. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

My family has a cat and a dog. They are both about 6 months old. The puppy isn't housebroken yet and thinks our shag carpet is the next best thing to grass.

Our cat is well trained and very neat and clean. But my Mom complains because he spills a little bit of kitty litter on the floor. She is wild about the puppy so says nothing about the rug.

Now she says the cat is a big nuisance and she's going to take him out and leave him on a country road. Would anyone be that cruel? — ANIMAL LOVER

DEAR A.L.:

Mothers often say things they don't mean, and mean what they don't say. I don't think yours would be "that cruel." In fact she may even like the cat — when she isn't sweeping up litter. — SUE

DEAR A.L.:

You mother probably had a rough day, and because she couldn't scream at the people who caused it (Her boss? Your father? A neighbor?) she took it out on the cat. She probably gave him an extra dish of mackerel after you went to bed.

(Right, Mom?) — HELEN

SEW SIMPLE

She Wants Early Start On A New Winter Coat

By EUNICE FARMER
Register and Tribune Syndicate

Making a new winter coat is quite a project for me and I want to get started early. Will you please give us a few hints about choosing an appropriate pattern for this year's styles?
MARY T.

DEAR MARY,

Most women who sew will be wanting to make a new coat this fall. You are wise to begin planning early.

There is a decided difference in the coats this year, namely, they're roomier. Again, there is good reason for this styling. This is the year of the layered look, adding sweaters, vests, tunics and jumpers to our basic clothes.

Every layer creates more bulk. Be sure the coat you decide upon is not cut skimpy, with high armholes. These coats were designed to be worn with the skinny dresses.

Sleeves are different this year also. Many dresses will feature the dolman or raglan sleeve as well as the wide, drop shouldered line. These sleeves in our garments also have a great effect on the sleeves needed in our coats.

The length of coats will vary this year, however, the topper

is perhaps the newest and most versatile. It can be worn over pants, skirts, and long evening skirts. Choose a length becoming to you, about 10 inches of the skirt showing seems to be an accepted length for most women.

Street length coats should just barely cover the length of your skirts. If you are choosing one of the new, exciting plaids, decide upon a pattern with few seams and details. Solid colored fabrics look new and beautiful with top stitching or hand-picked details outlining collars, cuffs and pockets.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Michael R. Russo, Waterbury, Conn., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"When purchasing a pattern you like and after using it a few times, you find it does not fit properly into the envelope. Purchase a manila envelope nine by 12 inches, paste the original picture on the front. Also, cut the back off and paste it to the back. Your pattern will fit nicely into this larger envelope and the result will be a nice flat package, easy for storing and using."

DEAR EUNICE,

Can you give us some guidelines on what patterns are suitable for diagonal weave fabrics and designs? They are so attractive but scare me to death.
MRS. A.K.R.

DEAR MRS. A.K.R.,

You're right, they are so attractive and most women avoid them for no reason. Here are a few tips to watch when selecting a pattern.

If the diagonal is a bold print instead of just a weave in solid colored fabric, remember to choose a pattern with as few seams as possible to avoid conflict of interest. The fabric can carry itself and doesn't need extras.

By all means, avoid patterns that are cut with any selection on the bias. You cannot use a pattern with raglan or dolman sleeves and a shawl collar will not work.

Instead, look for a basic pattern, with or without a collar, set-in sleeves, and a one-piece style without a waistline seam (although, this could work out). Have fun with them — they are beautiful. Once you have selected the right pattern, forget you are working with an unusualdesign and forge ahead.

Moth Protection

To protect clothes from moths, it's wise to line closets with aromatic red cedar. The aroma of this southern wood is pleasant to humans but repelling to ever-pesky moths. Clothes stored in cedar-lined closets remain fresh and free of mildew.

MEET TERI-POKI

The woman with the bright smile is Teri Strait, also known as Poki Doti the clown, which accounts for the costume and the makeup on one side of her face. Actually, this is the way Mrs. Strait appears when she performs at Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey Circus shows. The circus will be in the Oakland Coliseum Arena Aug. 24 to 29 and the San Francisco Cow Palace, from Aug. 30 to Labor Day. Why the half-and-half look? People get a glimpse of what she really looks like, says Mrs. Strait, who visited Marin this week, "and the results have been amazing."

Summit Groundwork

TOKYO (UPI)—Hideji Kawasaki, Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's personal envoy to China, met with Premier Chou En-lai Friday to lay the groundwork for a summit meeting expected in late September, the Kyodo news agency reported today.

Rehearing Sought On Phone Hike

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Most of the parties to the action that resulted in cancellation of a 1971 Pacific Telephone Co. rate increase have asked the California State Public Utilities Commission PUC for a rehearing on the latest rate boost.

The state supreme court, on June 9, invalidated the 1971 increase and ordered money collected since that time refunded to customers. Last week the PUC granted Pacific an interim increase of $55.4 million and continued in effect an increase of $68.9 million granted in April to offset wage increases.

The city of Los Angeles has asked for a rehearing on the $68.9 million increase on grounds the decision "orders and authorizes a telephone rate increase without findings required by law."

The city of San Diego is preparing a similar request.

The city of San Francisco, one of the original protesters of the 1971 increase, will not file for rehearing, according to deputy city attorney Milton Mares, who said the $68.9 million was still before the state supreme court.

William Bennett, of Kent Woodlands, Sylvia Siegel of Sausalito and Garett Shean, on behalf of an organization called Consumers Arise Now, have filed for rehearing of the entire $124.3 million granted last week on grounds the award was inconsistent with the directions of the state supreme court.

In addition, both General Telephone Co. and Continental Telephone Co. have asked the PUC for a rehearing to modify the commission's demand that they, as well as Pacific, make refunds to customers. The two independent companies maintain that the supreme court order does not apply to them.

Airbase Use Hearing Slated

The Novato City Council will hold a public hearing on joint civilian-military air use at Hamilton Air Force Base at 8 p.m. Monday at Novato Community House.

The city is seeking an agreement with Marin County that will give it equal say in decisions on civilian flights at the base.

The Novato Planning Commission has recommended against approval of plans for joint use until the extent of city control is established and the environmental impact of flights assessed and "found acceptable."

Election Law Is Challenged

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A California law that requires the names of incumbent political candidates to be listed first on election ballots is being challenged in the State Supreme Court.

The court said Friday it will hear arguments in December on petitions opposing the law on the grounds that the first named candidate on the ballot has a substantial advantage over the other candidates. The petitions contend the measure violates both state and federal constitutional guarantees.

Petitions have been filed by Black Panther Party chairman Bobby Seale, a candidate for mayor of Oakland; Eric A. Garris, a candidate for the state 61st Assembly District, and Roger Jon Diamond, a candidate for the 60th Assembly District.

Group Endorses Club Plans

The Novato Plan Review Committee has endorsed Novato Rotary Club plans for recreational facilities at Miwok Park, formerly known as Novato Creek Park, next to the Novato Prehistory Museum.

The club's plans for barbecues, picnic tables, wash sinks, drinking fountains and lighting were approved by the committee Wednesday night.

The committee also approved an interior illuminated sign for the Radio Shack at the Novato Fair Shopping Center and an interior illuminated sign at the Pizza Hut, 913 Machin Avenue.

Bentley 1960

A cousin to one of the machines that King Farouk drives.

Automatic transmission, AM-FM radio, and options too numerous to mention here. Two tone green exterior contrasting with its soft green leather interior. This is not only transportation but an experience.

The condition of this automobile carefully hides it years. Priced at a fraction of its original cost. Even if you can't buy it, come down and look.

We think it's the prettiest car on the entire auto row, perhaps in California. 795 FHK.

Russia Considers Turn To Private Enterprise

By CHARLOTTE SAIKOWSKI
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

MOSCOW — Want your floor sanded? A curtain rod hung? A pantsuit made? A peephole put in your front door? A cupboard installed?

If you are a Soviet citizen, more likely than not you will seek help from the thousands of privateers who operate "on the left," as it is called. The state-run economy simply cannot cope with the growing demand for consumer services, and — in most cases — is not prepared even to provide them.

Now comes a bold proposal to legalize this vast reservoir of "underground" activity by permitting the formation of service cooperatives, from small family-type operations to large ateliers. It is even suggested that such a cooperative could run a string of coffee houses, a hotel with a restaurant, or a small shop.

Although this is not a plea for private businesses in so many words, it is tantamount to that. The author goes so far as to suggest that the Soviet Union could profit from the experience of East Germany, Hungary, and Poland, where "individual" enterprises are permitted to function under state control.

These ideas, which must sound almost like heresy to a Soviet Marxist's ear, are raised in the Literary Gazette this week and do not carry the stamp of official approval. But the very fact they are under discussion suggests that the regime may at long last be mulling over the implementation of party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev's enigmatic proposal at the 24th Congress last year.

On that occasion Brezhnev advocate that thought be given to a system whereby retired persons, housewives, and invalids could perform services out of their own home or through cooperatives. He legal regulation should be improved and help extended toward this end.

The proposal seemed noteworthy at the time, but then nothing more was heard about it.

If the Literary Gazette discussion actually leads to a more liberal policy in the services sphere, it could represent a revolutionary step in this dogmatically socialist society where with few exceptions, everything is owned and run by the state.

Some cooperative ateliers as well as private services, such as dressmaking, are permitted to operate officially, but these are limited in scope or are heavily taxed.

The author of the article, Alexandar Levikov, acknowledges that the state has ambitious plans for expanding the number of service enterprises throughout the country. But, he writes with astonishing frankness and irony:

"I doubt that all these factories, combines, and millions of sales, if they continue to operate the way they do now, will be able to compete — not with the kopecks earned by the 'privateer,' but with his offer of service at any time of day or week. With his stupendous understanding of competition. With his knowledge of the psychology of clients. With his resourcefulness. With his high quality of work. With his most simple, firm principle: first the work, then the pay."

Bold and new reforms are needed in the service industry, writes Mr. Levikov, adding that Russians are fully willing to pay more for personalized service — to have the laundry delivered to the door, or to have a tailor come to the home.

Finally, he argues that some private services already function in the country.

"It is strange and illogical," he states, "to permit one person to hang out his sign ("pleated skirts on the third floor") and to forbid another — a hairdresser, say, the same."

It all sounds like a nudge for private enterprise.

School Space Fee Due Study

The Rohnert Park City Council will consider a request at 7 p.m. Monday to levy a fee on developers to provide school space.

The Cotati School District board has asked the council to levy a $75 per home fee so that temporary classrooms can be provided. The school district has complained that subdivisions approved by the city will crowd schools next year and that some arrangements must be made for temporary classrooms until a new school can be built.

The council has previously recommended that the school district lease homes to be used as temporary classrooms.

The Shepherd Bay Area School of San Rafael has changed its name to Carden Marin School, Laurene C. Jensen, the school's director, said today.

Accidental Blast Fatal To Two

CRANE, Ind. (UPI)—Two women were killed and two others were slightly injured Friday when a demonstration on how to handle dangerous explosives went awry at the Crane Naval Ammunition Depot.

Spokesmen at the south central Indiana munitions depot said the accident occurred during an indoctrination program for about 60 new employes at the depot's demolition range.

The depot, in a prepared statement, said a projectile was placed in a two-foot deep hole in the ground and detonated by electrical impulse. The explosion, it said, "sent a fragment of steel or possible stones into one of the glass viewports, shattering it and causing the mishap."

Capital ABM System Killed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An anti-ballistic missile (ABM) defense system for the nation's capital was killed Friday by congressional conferees.

"We did not know how much it would cost or whether it would work," said Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., in a briefing for reporters.

Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, was a member of the conference committee that was set up to reconcile differences in House and Senate bills authorizing military weapons for the fiscal year that began July 1.

Export Controls Bill To Nixon

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Congress has sent President Nixon a compromise bill to liberalize government export controls on U.S. products which are available to Communist countries from other Western sources.

The measure would make possible increased trade with the Soviet Union, China and their allies and help reduce the U.S. deficit in world trade.

The U.S. share of the Communist market is about 3 per cent compared to the Communists' 16 per cent share of the world market.

Man's Foot Crushed In Track Accident

A 32-year-old Petaluma mechanic was reported in satisfactory condition today at Hillcrest Hospital with a crushed foot suffered in an accident last night at the Petaluma Fairgrounds race track.

Lloyd Speer, 3261 Bodege Avenue, was injured about 7 p.m. Petaluma police had no details of the accident.

Bomb Threat In Marin Library

The Tiburon-Belvedere branch of the Marin County Library was evacuated briefly yesterday in the wake of a telephoned bomb threat.

Tiburon police said librarian Betty McKegney received the call at 5:03 p.m. A "young sounding" male caller advised the librarian to "listen carefully, this is a friend."

He said a bomb had been planted in the library and asked that Mrs. McKegney get everyone out immediately. "I don't want anybody hurt," the caller added.

Officers searched the building on Beach Road in Belvedere for approximately a half hour but found no bomb.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Dear Mr. Quiz:
I've read about some fabulous parties given by celebrities. Truman Capote often gives lavish and spectacular fun feasts and David Frost entertains friends in high style aboard jet aircraft. Who do you think has given the best birthday party so far this year?
Signed: Wish-I-Could-Go

Dear Wish:
Yours is not an easy question, because wealthy, successful people often do not publicize their expensive private affairs. I imagine J. Paul Getty, the multi-millionaire, could give a lively bash on his forthcoming 80th birthday (Dec. 15), if he wanted to. So far this year I think Elizabeth Taylor has probably held the smartest birthday ball when she reached the age of 40 (Feb. 27). She and her true love, Richard Burton, rented the entire top floor of an elegant Budapest hotel. Ambassadors from eight nations were among the 168 invited guests, which included Princess Grace of Monaco, wealthy Ringo Starr, romantic Michael Crane, and curvaceous Raquel Welch, to name a few. If you like contemplating the stars, being invited to wish happy birthday to Liz Taylor certainly is heavenly.

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS TODAY

Harry Mills (1913-), star of a popular Negro singing group ("Mills Brothers").

Jill St. John (1940-), Hollywood movie actress.

Orville Wright (1871-1948), aviation pioneer and inventor.

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The Mills Brothers began singing on radio in 1926, the first blacks to have their own show.
2. Jill St. John's real name is Eva Marie Saint.
3. Orville Wright was the pilot on the first flight of a powered airplane at Kitty Hawk in 1903.

ANSWERS

1. True; 2. False; 3. True.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Postpone Finesse If Possible, It Might Be Avoided Later

When you have an ace to knock out and a finesse to take, your contract may depend on which of these plays you try first. In most cases your best course is to postpone the finesse since if the hand develops well you may not have to take it.

DECLARER RUFFS

West opended the jack of spades, and declarer ruffed in dummy. He thought for a moment of trying the club finesse, but decided against it. That maneuver could wait.

Instead, South led a trump to the king and returned a low diamond toward dummy. West had to play low since it would have been fatal to put up the ace. Dummy would then have three good diamonds, and South could draw the last trump and then get rid of the queen and jack of clubs.

Dummy won with the king of diamonds, and South led a trump to his queen. This put him in position to lead another low diamond toward dummy.

WEST PERPLEXED

Once again West was on the horns of a dilemma. If he put up the ace of diamonds, South would later get rid of his two losing clubs on good diamonds.

West again played a low diamond, hoping that South could not produce 12 tricks. Now, however, South didn't have a losing diamond. He won with dummy's queen of diamonds and cheerfully took the club finesse. He could afford to lose a club trick, and could claim the rest of the tricks.

ANOTHER WAY

If South had taken the club finesse early, there would have been a different result. West would have taken the king of clubs and the ace of diamonds in quick succession.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner bids one spade, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - J 10 9 7
◇ - A 10 9 7
♣ - K 8 7 4.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid four spades. This shutout bid shows four or more trumps, a singleton or void and very meager high-card strength.

The idea is to keep the opponents out and to warn partner against a slam try at the same time.

CARMELITE DORMITORY

Bringing Russia To Marinwood

By NELS JOHNSON

San Rafael contractor Michael McLean is bringing a bit of old Russia to Marinwood.

McLean heads a crew of three — one of whom is a 15-year-old boy — that has been constructing a 26-room addition using old style Russian architecture to the Marinwood Carmelite Foundation office building at the end of Blackstone Drive.

The trio began work on the addition last May, and expect to finish the task within four weeks. It's a job McLean hasn't taken lightly.

When it's finished, the building — to be used as a dormitory by the 10 nuns of the Marinwood Carmelite community — will stand as one of the few examples of Russian architecture in Marin, according to McLean.

He stepped down as constable of West Marin last April to devote full time to the project and has since spent hundreds of hours researching old Russian architecture and wood carving techniques. He's visited church libraries throughout Marin and San Francisco and has poked into dozens of books on the subject including a tattered copy of an 1832 Russian manuscript that deals with the finer points of church building.

The 48-year-old McLean told the Independent-Journal about his project the other day amid a clutter of drawings, maps, books and church manuscripts.

"We're keeping all the trim of the dormitory to the dimensions of original Russian drawings," McLean beamed, adding that even the building's window frames required hours of study and research. He has cut the curving frames with a bandsaw and said the facility would eventually be adorned with old-style woodcarvings and intricate engravings.

He said the project has cost the Carmelite community about $45,000.

The contractor has plans for a more extensive project on the two-acre site in the near future. He plans to build a 300-seat Russian chapel adjacent to the dormitory — and in this case, booklearning won't be enough.

McLean has scheduled a trip to Russia next month to get a first-hand look at old Russian architecture and building techniques. He'll visit state historical museums, libraries and churches during the two-month tour, which will be financed out of his own pocket.

"You can read many books about it, but there's nothing like seeing the real thing, McLean said as he puffed on his pipe.

Some Russian chapels are built without nails: instead they are constructed with interlocking wood joints, McLean said. It's a feat he hopes to reproduce in the proposed Marinwood chapel. The church will be topped with one of the traditional Russian "onion" domes, he added.

But Sister Delores — the prioress, or mother superior of the Marinwood Carmelite Foundation — said chapel construction will depend on contributions. About $1,000 has been donated to the chapel building fund so far.

More than $50,000 is needed to build the chapel, she said, adding confidently that the "money will come in" and chapel construction would begin by next summer.

Why is Russian architecture so important to the Carmelite community in Marinwood?

Sister Delores said she and nine other nuns in Marinwood are praying for the Russian people "as our special mission."

"We want that country to return to Christianity," she said.

The Marinwood Carmelite Foundation is one of about a dozen Carmelite communities throughout the state. The order is a "contemplative" branch of the Catholic Church, she said.

McLean said he expects to learn much from his Russian tour even if he never gets a chance to build the chapel. "You're never too old to learn," he chuckled.

McLean, a native of Denmark, came to Marin in 1951 after stints with the Danish and British armies and the U.S. Marine Corps. He studied general contracting at Healds College in San Francisco, joined a building firm in San Rafael and then opened his own contracting business in 1955.

He's done remodeling work for nearby St. Vincent's School for Boys as well as the Carmelite Foundation in the past.

He proudly pointed to a Russian onion dome perched atop the Carmelite office at 530 Blackstone Drive. "I did that at nights in my spare time," he said. The dome consists of 1,800 leaf-shaped shingles which he fashioned and donated to the Carmelite community.

"I used nails in that one because it was the first I had ever made. But no nails will be used on the onion dome that will be on top of the chapel . . . I hope."

GOD AND MAN

Catholic Church 'Growing Stale'

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. International

After a long period of vigorous growth, the Roman Catholic Church in the U.S. has lapsed into stagnation.

The symptoms are clearly evident in the Official Catholic Directory for 1972, recently published by P.J. Kennedy and Sons.

A Madison Avenue ad man trying to put a good face on the statistics might stress that the total number of Catholics in America reached an all-time high of 48,390,990 at the end of 1971.

However, the increase in U.S. Catholic population in 1971 was less than four-tenths of 1 per cent. That was about half as good a growth rate as the church registered the previous year. And it was less than half as much as would be needed to keep apace of the growth rate of the overall U.S. population.

Thus in realistic terms the church lost ground. At the start of 1971, Catholics comprised 23.5 per cent of the U.S. population. By the end of the year, they accounted for 23.3 per cent. The change was not dramatic, but from the Catholic viewpoint, it was certainly in the wrong direction.

Other figures in the new directory show that the church continued to suffer losses among its front-line troops — priests and nuns. There was a decrease of 740 in the number of clergy, and a decrease of 6,731 in the number of sisters.

The dwindling supply of nuns is forcing Catholic schools to rely more and more on salaried lay teachers. In 1944, when their presence in Catholic schools was first recorded in the directory, lay teachers constituted only 8 per cent of the total teaching force. This year, it is 55 per cent.

This wholesale substitution of hired for free labor is one of the principal reasons Catholic schools are in servere financial trouble and are making a desperate bid for public funds.

Some dioceses have felt compelled to close some of their schools. Others have raised tuition fees. Both moves are reflected in figures showing a continuing decline in Catholic school enrollment. The number of children receiving their education in Catholic schools declined 361,910, or 8.2 per cent, in the past year.

The directory contains other signs of stagnation in America's largest religious body. The number of baptisms dropped by 33,530 last year — continuing a downtrend that began in 1962. The number of adult converts was down by 5,522 to a total of 79,012 — the lowest recorded figure since 1940, when the U.S. population was less than two-thirds its present size.

But periods of slow growth or stagnation are nothing new for the Catholic Church. It has survived many during its 2,000-year history.

The group is directed by Mrs. Clinton Bell of Sleepy Hollow. Services will begin at 10:30 a.m. in the church building at 100 Tarry Road, San Anselmo. The public is invited.

Simple Joy has distinguished itself in the past year through its contributions as a choral group.

The group has been invited to participate in the Lutheran Youth Congress, to be held in San Francisco in early September.

Dr. Mark A. Mathews, 45, has been acting president of the institution since last February, and now will assume the post once held by Dr. Raymond M. Olson, who resigned in August 1971.

The bylaws of the college corporation will be amended at the October convocation to state that the president of the college shall "normally" be a member of the Lutheran church.

Tale Of The Apple— And The Wily Snake

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — "Hello, Eve," said the snake.

"Hello, Snake," responded blonde Eve, coyly covering her paper-bag body with a large leaf.

The scene, as described by Baptist Press Service, marked the opening of a puppet show at the Ridgecrest Baptist assembly grounds in North Carolina staged by third and fourth-grade day campers.

The children themselves, in their own version of the Book of Genesis account, had written the script and provided the performance.

"Wouldn't you like to have an apple?" Snake said enticingly.

"What's an apple?" Eve replied innocently.

"It's that fruit over there on that tree," Snake replied.

"Oh, no, no, no!" she said. "God told me not to eat anything on that tree."

"God wouldn't care," Snake responded.

"Oh yes he would," Eve countered. "He told me if I ate from that tree something awful would happen to me."

"Well, I ate an apple and nothing happened to me," the Snake boasted.

"Well, I guess I could eat it then," Eve said. She gave a shrill whistle through her teeth and yelled, "Adam, don't you want to eat an apple?"

Each took a bite of the "apple" that perfectly resembled an acorn. Then they vanished into the garden foliage.

The female-sounding voice of God came from behind the Indian-blanket backdrop: "Why are you hiding?"

"Because we ate the apple," Adam and Eve chorused.

"Then you will have to leave the garden," God declared.

Adam and Eve broke into heavy sobs as the scene closed.

The audience, also grade-schoolers, offered loud applause for the production, aimed at helping youngsters familiarize themselves with the Bible in their own way.

BAY AREA RETURN — Rev. Fintan Keegan is returning to the Columban Fathers mission center in San Francisco after three years in Massachusetts. Keegan, 63, had served in San Francisco from 1967 to 1969. He was assistant director of Columban Fathers in the U.S. from 1953 to 1967.

Supt. Millie Campbell said her lead teachers are Carolyn Nystrom, Barbara Andrew, Betty Doerksen, Dorothea Bunten and Pastor Dale Nystrom.

The school is designed for children from kindergarten level to sixth grade.

The non-denominational school is open to all community children. Further information may be secured by calling the church.

Language Training For Missioners

COCHAMBA, Bolivia (UPI) — Roman Catholic Maryknoll missioners spend six months in language training in Bolivia followed by nine months of living with a family, during which they are encouraged to take university courses, as a means of overcoming communication difficulties.

Rev. Arthur C. Kiernan, director of the order's language school, said about 50 per cent of North American missionaries leave their mission assignments in a two-year period because of inability to speak a foreign language properly.

London Church Fund Drive At $400,000

NEW YORK (UPI) — Banker Hoyt Ammidon has announced that the U.S. campaign for restoration funds for London's St. Paul's Cathedral has raised more than $400,000.

The funds collected in 30 major cities throughout the country will be used to repair the west front of the cathedral, in danger of collapse.

RUNAWAY — North running back Scott Duncan swept right end for a gain in the first quarter of last night's North-South All-Star football game at San Rafael High School, leaving a trail of destruction behind him. South defensive back Scott Cozza (middle, on ground) had Thursday's Independent-Journal headline, "North Tabbed Over South In Kiwanis Grid Clash," taped to his helmet. Duncan's ability to sweep right end consistently was a factor as the North won, 28-15.

Granite-Like South Subdued By North In Kiwanis Grid, 28-15

By LEW CODDINGTON

The water wore through the rock, as expected, but not before it was clearly established that the rock was solid granite rather than flimsy shale.

Using superior depth to score three second-half touchdowns, the heavily favored North finally prevailed over the surprisingly stubborn South, 28-15, in the seventh annual Ross Valley Kiwanis All-Star high school football game last night at San Rafael High School. A less-than-capacity crowd of about 3,000 attended.

STRAW CATCH

The North did not lead all night until Greg Straw (of Novato High) made a diving catch in the left corner of the end zone on an 11-yard Marty Moroski (Novato) pass with 8:02 remaining for a 22-15 advantage.

The South still had a theoretical shot until 1:40 showed on the clock, when cornerback Kevin Donohoe (Terra Linda) returned an intercepted pass 18 yards for the final touchdown.

'OUT OF GAS'

"We just ran out of gas," said South coach Bruno Banducci. "The guys played great. We could have won it if we didn't have so many players (nine) going both ways.

"Their strength was our weakness," he continued. "Pat Parnow and Jack Stahl (both Marin Catholic) never played defensive back in their lives before the game."

NORTH PASSING

The North passing game was not statistically eye-popping — seven of 16 passes for 125 yards — but Moroski unloaded bombs at critical moments. He passed 39 yards to Duke Bessee (San Rafael) for the first touchdown, threw 34 yards to Scott Duncan (San Rafael) to set up the second, and hit Straw for the third.

South passing led by quarterback Steve Schaumleffel (Marin Catholic) looked as good on paper — nine of 16 for 124 — but the figure is misleading. Schaumleffel as sacked five times for 46 yards in the second half, which contributed to the South's minus 35 yards rushing after intermission.

NORTH RUNNERS

"There were a lot of blue jerseys in there," said North coach Dave Wylie, who felt the pass rush turned the game around. It was the first head coaching victory of his life for Wylie, normally an assistant at San Rafael.

The North ground game hummed for 129 yards. Terry Johnson (Novato), a last-minute substitute for fullback Mark Farrar (San Rafael), who had an injured ankle, gained 45 yards in seven tries. Duncan was even better — 67 in eight — gained mostly on sweeps to the right side behind the blocks of halfback John Buckley (Terra Linda).

Duncan starred on the drive for the second touchdown, catching a 34-yard pass from Moroski, then running 11 and 17 yards, the latter for the score. He got the conversion on the same kind of right-side sweep on which the touchdown came, tying the game at 15-15 in the third quarter.

PERSONAL FOUL

Shortly thereafter, Schaumleffel hit John Schalich (Marin Catholic) for 19 yards to apparently start a retaliatory drive, but a personal foul brought the

Gondak Belts Aid Win By Italian Club

Matt Gondak crashed a pair of home runs and Gene Frey tossed a two-hitter last night as the Italian Club of Marin County routed Fortuna of Eureka, 9-1 in the opening round of the North Bay Regional Joe DiMaggio baseball tournament at Albert Park.

The Italian Club racked up three Fortuna pitchers for 13 hits to propel themselves into a second round game tonight at 6 against the Ukiah Elks, winners by 9-3 over Loleta of Eureka in last night's second game. Loleta will meet Fortuna at 3:45.

Gondak set the tone of the evening in the bottom of the second when he picked up a Randy Niemann fastball and lodged it behind the leftfield fence for the game's first run. But that was nothing compared to the leftfield shot he hit the next inning with a man on to cap a five run rally. The second homer came off another fastball from Niemann, which was his last pitch of the game.

FREY TOUGH

Frey had Fourtuna looking bad all night as he struck out eight and was never in serious difficulty. Rod Thompson got to him for an off field double to left in the second, and Dennis Price drove in the only Fourtuna run with a single to left in the fifth. Dave Steele, who reached first on an error by shortstop Steve Sherry, scored the run.

Sherry, who played for Toby's Truckers and was added to the roster fgr the tourney, more than made up for the error with three hits, two of them doubles. He scored in the third and again in the sixth, and his first double in the third knocked in Doug Hartman with the first run of that outburst.

MISSED BASE

He would have knocked in Hartman again with his second double the next inning, but the latter failed to touch third on his way home and was out on the appeal. At that point, however, it didn't make any difference.

Gondak, Ika Sherry, picked

BY U.S. BLACKS

Walkout Set For Olympics

MUNICH (UPI)—How much support the call for a "sympathy" walkout by black members of the U.S. Olympic track and field team actually had remained in doubt today one week before the scheduled opening of the Games on Aug. 26.

Lee Evans, the 1968 Olympic 400-meter champion, released Friday the text of a statement expressing "a united stand with our African brothers" on the question of allowing Rhodesia to compete in the Games—a question over which 12 African nations have threatened to withdraw.

Evans said the statement was from "the black members of the U.S. track team" He said it had been drawn up at a Friday morning meeting of the black team members here at that time.

Later, three blacks in Munich at the time—Robert Taylor of Texas Southern, Larry Burton of Purdue and Gerald Tinker of the Kent Track Club—said they had not been at the meeting.

Evans, an alternate entry in the 400 meters this time and a member of the U.S. sprint relays, issued the text of the statement as follows:

"In light of the recent Rhodesian acceptance to the 20th Olympic Games, the United States black athletes now in the Olympic Village believe it imperative to take a stand on this volatile issue. We denounce Rhodesian participation in the Games. If they are allowed to compete, we will take a united stand with our African brothers."

Asked if "a united stand" meant that the U.S. blacks would walk out if the African nations walk out, Evans said, "That's what the statement said."

Withdrawal of the African nations would deprive the Olympics of several of the most noted track and field stars from the last Games. Ethiopia is the only nation so far which has formally announced it is withdrawing, and that means the loss of Mamo Wolde, the 1968 Olympic marathon champion.

The Kenyan team includes Kipchoge Keino, whose victory over America's Jim Ryun in the 1,500-meter final was one of the dramatic highlights in 1968, and Naftali Temu, the 10,000-meter champion.

Bright Future For The Revamped Giants

Charlie Fox has completely rebuilt the Giant baseball club and he's done it in two months. The pitching staff no longer leans on Juan Marichal for its primary support and Sam McDowell isn't even in the starting rotation. Youthful arms now carry the ball club with the aid of youthful bat support that once depended on Willie Mays and Willie McCovey.

When the Giants dropped 23 under .500 at 22-45 on June 23, Fox began his youth movement. Between June 23-Aug. 16, the Giants played eight over .500 at 29-21 which still left them 12 under .500 with an overall season record of 51-63.

WALTER MAILS, now retired but still a Candlestick Park press box visitor, says: "I never saw a ball club get turned around as fast as this one. And you got to credit Fox for the turnaround. The Giants are going to be awfully tough in 1973. They may win it all next year buf if they don't, they're going to take it all in 1974. Remember when they do that I first said it on Aug. 16, 1972."

Mails then analyzed the Giants position-by-position.

"Ken Henderson in left, Garry Maddox in center and Bobby Bonds in right give the Giants the best outfield I've seen this year in the National League. And they're going to get better. They can hit and, oh, how they can field.

"As for Chris Speier, I've never seen a shortstop do the things he can do and I've been around baseball for 60 years. Tito Fuentes at second has the fastest hands I've ever seen. Speier and Fuentes make a superb double play combination, the kind a pitcher likes to have backing him up.

"NOW, YOU TAKE that young Dave Rader behind the plate. He's got quick hands too. And a pitcher isn't afraid to throw one in the dirt to him because they know he'll block it. Rader has to be a strong candidate for Rookie of the Year honors.

"Then there's that fellow Ed Goodson. They tell me that he can play third base if a spur below the cap of his right knee can be fixed — and they tell me it can by winter rest with the aid of a cast or, if necessary, an operation. Goodson's bat in the daily lineup would give the Giants a tremendous added punch. His swing is classic.

"DAVE KINGMAN is still learning the strike zone. Once he stops swinging at bad pitches, he'll terrorize pitchers. He does a pretty good job of that now and understandably so because of the way he can crash the ball incredible distances. I think Kingman's best position is first base, a natural heir to Willie McCovey."

Finally, Mails got around to the young members of the Giant pitching staff — Jim Barr, Ron Bryant, Don Carrithers, Randy Moffitt, Steve Stone and Frank Reberger.

"They all have fine young arms," said Mails, "and this season they got a lot of experience. But put these names, too, in your future book — Frank Riccelli and John D'Acquisto. They're down on the farm now. Riccelli, a southpaw, is running up quite a strikeout string at Amarillo."

FOLLOW THAT MAN — South running back Jay Lehman (24) followed the interference of Pat Parnow (21) for a short gain last night while North lineman Russ Weklych (middle) trailed Lehman and eventually made the tackle.

Finley Names Young Coach Of NHL Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — Owner Charlie Finley announced Friday the naming of Garry Young as coach and general manager of the California Golden Seals of the National Hockey League.

Two weeks ago Finley named Fred Glover, a former Seals coach, as club executive vice president.

The naming of Young as coach thus completes the front office lineup. During the period in which the club did not have a coach and while Young was in the hospital for minor surgery, six members of the Seals defected to the new World Hockey Association.

Five Marinites Win In Mill Valley Net

Reasoning that the tournament is, after all, the Marin County Junior Hardcourt, local tennis players implemented home rule yesterday by winning five important matches at the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

Top-seeded Carrie Zarranondia of San Rafael won the girls 14 championship by defeating second-seeded Lisa Kearney of Alameda, 6-2, 7-5.

Sue Beatty of Tiburon, seeded No. 6, scored an earthshaking upset in girls 16 by defeating top-seeded Sue Brown of Oakland, 7-6, 6-1. "She ran down everything," said Miss Brown afterward.

Unseeded Leslie Airola of Tiburon came up with another stunner, striking down second-seeded Joan Pennello of Carmichael in girls 18, 6-3, 7-6.

On the boys side, fourth-seeded Henry Jacobson of Belvedere dumped second-seeded Mark Jeung of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-0, in 16s. Second-seeded Charles Bolcom of Belvedere

ROOKIE DURHAM WINS

Giants Fall To Cardinals

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—You could forgive Don Durham for not getting excited about hitting a home run.

Usually, when a pitcher hits a homer it's time for rejoicing, kidding and extra high-jinks in the clubhouse, but it didn't turn out that way Friday night after Durham, a rookie right-hander out of Yosemite, Ky., pitched and batted the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

The reason why Durham didn't get too worked up over his homer was that with help from the veteran Diego Segui, he nailed down his first big league victory.

After losing his first five starts you could understand why winning the first one meant more than hitting a homer.

Jim Willoughby started for the Giants and retired the first nine batters before Durham, who also played first base at Western Kentucky, singled for the first hit after two out in the third. Singles by Lou Brock and Ted Sizemore followed to give the Cards a 1-0 lead.

The Giants finally broke through Durham, who struck out three and walked two in the 6 1-3 innings he worked, for their only run in the sixth on a single by Bobby Bonds, his 31st stolen base and another single by Ken Henderson. Those were the last hits the Giants got. A first inning double and a third inning single by Chris Speier accounted for the only other San Francisco hits.

Marin's Family Of Bowlers

Bowling 600s in league play is not terribly exciting, particularly in Marin County where kegler excellence is in evidence. But when a brother and sister perform this feat, certainly bowling observers take notice.

This was the case as the McPhersons, Rich and Nancy, accomplished this at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael this week.

Along with brother Mike, they are considered Marin's top bowling family. Rich, 20, notched a fine 638, while Nancy, 16, collected a 603. Rich's efforts included games of 220, 223, and 195, while Nancy carded a 201, 197, and 205 and left no open frames. Thus, she made either a spare or a strike on each frame.

PLAUDITS ARE again in order for Nancy, who was named to the Youth Bowling Association All-State team for the third consecutive year, according to Rich.

Nancy and Rich have definite pro bowling aspirations. "I want to go on the pro tour in a few years," Rich intimated, "and so does Nancy."

Seventeen-year-old Mike has a sizzling 200 average, Rich a 199, and Nancy a 180 — marks that would make many a Marinite bowler envious.

SAN RAFAEL bowlers Marilyn Epidendio and Bea Hoffmann maintained their 10th and 14th place spots, respectively, in the L and L Castle Lanes' 1972 Ladies West Coast Match Game Eliminations following 12 games in the semi-finals competition.

Mrs. Epidendio has a 183 average for 2,447 pins, winning five of 12 encounters; and Mrs. Hoffmann has a 176 average for 2,312 pins, winning four of 12.

A SHUTOUT

A's Odom Tops Perry, Indians

CLEVELAND (UPI) — John Odom isn't worrying about his arm this year.

Odom has a 10-4 mark this year with a 2.13 earned run average. Last year he finished 10-12 with a .428 era.

The Oakland right-hander picked up his 10th victory Friday night throwing a four hitter, beating Cleveland 8-0 and thwarting Gaylord Perry in his bid for his 19th victory.

Sal Bando and Bert Campaneris backed Odom with two-run homers and Mike Hegan clobbered a solo home run.

Odom was pleased with this shuout.

He said this year he wasn't worrying about his arm like he did last year. Odom had surgery to remove bone chips from his right elbow after the 1970 season.

Bando's home run came right after the routine check of Perry's ball to see whether he had been throwing the spitball.

Just before Bando hit his home run, Mike Epstein complained that Perry threw an illegal pitch, then waved his bat at Perry.

That action prompted Oakland Manager Dick Williams to have plate umpire Hank Morgenweck examine Perry. He gave him the o.k.

Epstein struck out, then Bando stepped up and belted Perry's first offering over the left-field fence.

Hegan's home run greeted reliever Ray Lamb, who relieved Perry in the sixth.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

13th Triumph For Montreal Reliever

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The way Montreal Manager Gene Mauch sees it, there is no comparison when it comes to rating baseball's top relief pitchers.

You can keep your Sparky Lyles or Tug McGraws; Mauch would rather have Mike Marshall.

Marshall notched his 13th victory—all in relief—Friday night when he turned in 3 1-3 innings of scoreless relief in the Expos' 11-inning 4-3 victory over the Atlanta Braves. That stretched his scoreless inning streak to 28 and he has given up just one earned run in his last 45 1-3 innings.

In other National League contests, Pittsburgh beat San Diego 4-2, St. Louis defeated San Francisco 3-1, Chicago blanked Los Angeles 5-0, Cincinnati whipped New York 8-2 and Houston edged Philadelphia 4-3.

Dave Cash and Al Oliver each singled in a run in the eighth inning to give Pittsburgh its margin of victory over San Diego.

Ferguson Jenkins scattered nine hits and posted his 17th victory in the Cubs' triumph over the Dodgers.

Run-scoring singles by Denis Menke, Dave Concepcion and Pete Rose highlighted a fiv-run fourth inning that paced the Reds' triumph over the Mets.

Dave Roberts won his 10th game and delivered a runscoring single in a three-run fifth inning to spark the Astros' triumph over Philadelphia.

up three hits for the game, adding a single to his circuit blasts.

Rod Dockins threw five innings of one-hit relief and drove home the winning run to lead Ukiah past Loleta. Dockins entered the contest in the third inning after Loleta's Dennis Wood tied the score at 2-2 with a leadoff homerun. During his stint Dockings struck out eight, and gave up only a last inning single.

UKIAH SCORES

Ukiah scored five times in the fifth inning to decide the issue, the first tally coming when Dockins laced a single to score Tom Walker.

Dale Biondini gave Loleta its first run with a leadoff homer in the second.

No Blue Ribbons For Marin Skiers

I-J Special Report

SEATTLE, Wash. — Water skiers from Marin and Sonoma counties were left to play bridesmaid roles yesterday in the National Water Ski Championships on Green Lake here.

Mike Suyderhoud of Petaluma scored 51 points to finish second to defending champion Kris La Point of Castro Valley in a hotly-contested men's slalom battle that lasted three hours. Kris scored 51½.

Bob La Point of Novato, Kris' brother, had the boys jump wrapped up until Wayne Grimditch of Hillsboro Beach, Fla., uncorked a national record jump of 134-feet on his third and final leap. La Point jumped 123.

Mrs. Thelma Salmas of Novato missed winning senior women's jump by a mere foot, leaping 85-feet to 86 for Mrs. Barbara Cleveland of Hawthorne, Fla.

Mike McGinley of San Rafael came up with a stronger performance than expected in the boys jump, finishing fourth at 119 feet. Larry Boivie of Bel Marin Keys was 10th with 106-feet.

Charles Sugarman of Mill Valley tied for 19th with 34 points in the men's slalom, and Joe Mitch of Bel Marin Keys was 10th in senior men's tricks with 2,160.

Bobby Litwins of Coacoa Beach, Fla. won the junior boys over-all title with 2,593 of a possible 3,000 points, and Bill Schouten of Flat Rock, Mich., won senior men's tricks with 3,597.

Two plays later, substitute punter Stahl shanked an 11-yarder, giving the Northerners the ball on the South 37, from which they scored the go-ahead TD. "Regular punter Pat Parnow (Marin Catholic) had a cramp in his leg," Banducci explained.

The South jumped out to an 8-0 lead, driving 60 yards on the game's first series to score as Parnow ran five yards.

Moroski cut the gap to 8-7 when he hit Bessee for 39 yards in the second quarter, but Schaumleffel connected with Schalich for 24 to give the South a 15-7 halftime lead.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Stout Lolich For Lean Tiger Times

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The Detroit Tigers have encountered some rather lean times lately but leave it to portly Mickey Lolich to see them through.

Lolich, the left-hander with the sagging waistline, pitched Detroit back into first place in the American League East as he blanked the California Angels on three hits 2-0.

The victory, only the sixth for Detroit in 19 games during August, moved the Tigers into first place by a half game over Baltimore, which suffered its fourth straight loss Friday night.

In other American league games, Minnesota tripped Baltimore 3-1, Oakland blanked Cleveland 8-0, Texas walloped New York 11-2, Chicago defeated Boston 8-1 and Milwaukee downed Kansas City 7-2.

Rod Carew's fifth-inning single drove across pitcher Dick Woodson with the go-ahead run as the Twins handed slumping Baltimore its fourth straight defeat.

Dick Allen and Jay Johnstone hit three-run homers to lead a 16-hit attack that powered the White Sox past Boston.

Rich Billings hit a three-run homer to cap a seven-run fourth inning and pace Texas over the Yankees, New York's fourth straight loss.

Mrs. Gondak A Pick In Champs' Tourney

(Fifth of a series)

Mrs. Charles Gondak, a big name in Marin County women's golf for the past half-dozen years, will be one of the favorites in next Wednesday's fifth annual Marin County Women's Tournament of Champions at the Mill Valley golf course.

As women's club champion of Marin Country Club four of the last six years, Tillie Gondak has twice represented the Novato course in the tourney of champs. In 1970 she finished third at San Geronimo, and last year took second at Peacock Gap in San Rafael, two strokes behind Mrs. Larry Gapinski of San Geronimo.

A nine handicapper, Mrs. Gondak is no stranger to the Mill Valley course — she began her golf career there nine years ago. "It takes a lot of luck at that course," she says. "You can hit a good shot that just goes absolutely foul. One little mistake can get you into an awful lot of trouble."

This year she will again have to face Nancy Gapinski, as well as Laura Cann of the Meadow Club in Fairfax, Cookie Baer of San Rafael's Peacock Gap, Peg Williams of Novato's Indian Valley and Joan Wheeler of the home course. They will play 18 holes of scratch medal play, beginning at 8:30 a.m.

Mrs. Gondak's husband works for Pacific Telephone in San Francisco. They have three children: Cris, 22, Ralph, 19, and Matt, 17.

Rival Hockey Loops Slate Court Battle

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

PHILADELPHIA — The fledgling World Hockey Association and the established National Hockey League have squared away in another court battle over the signing of players to contracts.

A suit filed Friday by the Philadelphia Blazers of the WHA charged the NHL with violations of the anti-trust laws. The Blazers claimed that the NHL had a "lifetime grip on any player who wishes to play professional hockey." The suit was filed in the U.S. District Court here.

Like baseball, the NHL signs players under a form of reserve clause. Baseball's reserve clause has been upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Golf

SUTTON, Mass. — Veteran Tommy Aaron and young Hale Irwin are tied for the lead after 36 holes in the $200,000 USI Championship at the Pleasant Valley Country Club.

Irwin fired seven birdies for a 67, while Aaron carded a 69 for identical 136 totals, eight under par. Lee Elder and Bruce Devlin were next at 137. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the 146 cutoff, notching a 145.

LEAWOOD, Kan. — Jocelyne Bourassa of Quebec, Canada, sported a two-stroke lead at today's start of the second round in the Ladies Professional Golf Association's (LPGA) $20,000 Westgate Open at the Leawood South Country Club.

Miss Bourassa fired the best score of her pro career in Friday's opening round, a five-under-par 67.

Tennis

FORT WORTH, Tex. — John Newcombe, Arthur Ashe, Ken Rosewall and Tom Okker have advanced to the semi-finals in the $50,000 Colonial National Invitation Tennis Tournament.

Newcombe, top seed in the tournament, downed John Alexander Friday 4-6, 6-3 6-4. Ashe polished off Marty Riessen in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3, and Rosewall eliminated Graham Stillwell, 6-4, 6-2.

TORONTO — England's third-seeded Virginia Wade Friday beat second-seeded Margaret Court of Australia 6-3, 1-6, 6-3 in a semi-final clash at the Rothmans Canadian Open Tennis Championships.

Australia's Evonne Goolagong will go against Miss Wade in today's finals after walloping Louisiana's Linda Tuero in Friday's other semi-final, 6-3, 6-2.

Tom Glover, 33-year old author and former baseball coach at El Molino High School in Forestville, has been appointed the baseball coach at California State College, Sonoma.

Glover, who has authored several scorebooks in baseball and basketball, will take over the job vacated by William Trumbo, Sonoma State College director of athletics.

"A record like 5-41 (Sonoma's overall record in 1972) is totally unacceptable," Glover said.

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The battle for the starting quarterback job on the Washington Redskins is still up for grabs.

Buffalo downed Minnesota 21-10 in the only other National Football League pre-season game Friday night.

Dennis Shaw, unruffled by Minnesota's famed "Purple Gang" defense, threw three touchdown passes to spark the Bills over the Vikings.

There are seven games scheduled today. San Francisco is at San Diego, Cincinnati takes on Miami, Denver is at St. Louis, Houston entertains Green Bay, Oakland is at Los Angeles, Pittsburgh visits Atlanta and Dallas is at New Orleans. Fairfax Again Eyes Zoning Laws

The Fairfax City Council has scheduled its sixth public hearing Monday on a zoning ordinance that would require larger minimum lot sizes for development.

At issue at 8 p.m. in the Women's Club will be the city's commercial zones, according to City Administrator Robert E. Crowe.

Under the ordinance, property now zoned limited commercial, commercial or industrial would be rezoned to limited commercial, highway commercial, central commercial or commercial recreational zone, Crowe said.

Minimum area for limited commercial, or services-griented zone, would be set at 20,000 square feet with a minimum width of 75 feet.

Minimum area for highway commercial, or retail-wholesale business zone, would be set at 7,500 square feet with a minimum width of 50 feet.

The ordinance would establish a central commercial zone catering to pedestrian traffic and a commercial recreational zone providing for private recreational facilities.

Included in the commercial recreational zone would be the 26.78 acre Marin Town and Country Club property, owned by Max Friedman. Though citizens voted more than 2-1 to rezone the Friedman parcel to commercial recreational last April, the action may be invalid, according to City Atty. Wallace S. Myers.

The April 11 vote was forced by an initiative petition and "it is doubtful if rezoning by initiative is valid," Myers said.

He said that although a superior court in Orange County has upheld the legality of rezoning by initiative, appellate courts have ruled such action illegal.

"It'll take another appellate court decision to straighten this thing out," Myers said.

The rezoning initiative was sparked by a citizen's group last year after Friedman announced plans to sell his property to an Oakland firm planning a residential development. Friedman later canceled the plans in the face of heated public opposition and reopened the swimming resort April 15.

Friedman has opposed the section of the zoning ordinance which would rezone his property from commercial to commercial recreational district. "The only valid economical use for this property . . . is multiple dwelling units, with some commercial uses," Bryan R. McCarthy, Friedman's attorney, said in a letter to the Fairfax council.

The proposed new zoning would allow recreational uses only on the Friedman parcel — though he could establish a resort hotel with recreationa facilities, according to Crowe.

McCarthy has charged tha the proposed rezoning would represent a "taking of his lanc for public park purposes with out paying him compensatior under the law," and has re quested either reasonable pay ment or retention of existing zoning.

The ordinance has been under consideration since first pro posed by the county planning staff and the city planning com mission two years ago.

'73 Novato Budget On Sewers Up

The Novato Sanitary District board has adopted a preliminary 1972-73 budget of $378,653, up $60,123 from last year, but expected to make little change in the tax rate.

The tax rate in the Novato plant zone is expected to be 37.5 centers per $100 assessed valuation, down from 37.9, and in the remainder of the district, 34 cents, up from 33.9.

Board members adopted the tentative budget Thursday night, with adoption of a final budget scheduled for Aug. 28, according to Bill L. Bayles, assistant engineer.

Although the operating budget is higher, the tax rate in the Novato plant area is lower because the 1970 bond repayment rate, 2.4 cents last year, won't be levied. The repayment will be made through connection charge revenues.

The rate in the Novato plant zone is higher than other sectors of the district because it includes a 1955 bond repayment rate, not levied in areas served by other plants.

DRAMA REVIEW

'Hatful Of Rain' An Outstanding Effort

By KAY KSANDA

Last night at the Mill Valley Center for the Performing Arts in Mill Valley, Marin's new summer theater group switched roles and subject matter to produce "A Hatful of Rain."

Written by Michael Gazzo some years ago when drugs were supposedly misused only by the poor, this drama probably has been produced by every little theater group from here to New York. But, by this company, which remains unnamed, the play grew from a story into an updated saga.

It does run too long, and there is not enough change of pace throughout the play, and not too many of the characters grow. However, this is only a small complaint, for this group combines fine acting, clear characterizations, and professional technique to do an outstanding job, and produce a fascinating play.

The show is played in the round, and the audience is practically on top of the dining room table. Technical bits — lighting, makeup, props, sound and costuming — are all good. Even the soup served by the hero is steaming and smells good.

"A Hatful of Rain," a three-act play by Michael Gazzo, directed by Robin Jackson and John H. Cochran; technical staff: Duane Solem, Bob Saba, Dan O'Brien, Harry Peloquin, and photos by Pat Sherman. Cast: Johnny, Richard Poe; Celia, Robin B. Jackson; Polo, John Garber; Mr. Pope, Martin Ponch; Mother, Michael Collins; Apples, Stuart Rudin; Chucho, Duane Salem; Putski, Sue Ann Salem; The Man, Dan O'Brien.

The hero is Johnny, who lives with his wife and brother in a New York apartment. She is pregnant and works like a drone at an office while brother Polo is a bouncer in a saloon. It's Polo who pays for his brother's $40-a-day habit. A vicious pusher by the name of "Mother" hangs about the place with his freaky gang, and into this sweet scene comes dear old dad for a visit.

Richard Poe, as Johnny, is very strong in the part and believable in his restraint. He grows, developes and finally becomes rounded and real. Robin Jackson, as the wife, is sweet and stays about the same throughout. Martin Ponch, as the father, also never changes as the story develops. (He was terrific the night before as the senator in another group offering, "The Respectful Prostitute.")

John Garbor is fascinating as Polo, while Michael Collino, as "Mother", had a malevolence that was flat but fierce.

The rest of "Mother's" retinue: Stuart Rudin, Duane Salem, Sue Ann Salem, and Dan O'Brien are all excellent, and also cast in the other shows currently running at the same theater.

The ensemble acts every night except Tuesday alternating "Hatful" with "Prostitute" and "All At Sea," through Sept. 2 at 8 p.m.

Two Who Fail To Report May Face Court Action

Five men were inducted into the armed services in August by the Marin Selective Service Board, executive secretary Joy M. Kinzer reported today.

Twenty-seven men had been ordered to report for induction Aug. 9.

Mrs. Kinzer said two of these failed to report, eight were canceled, six were postponed, five were rejected after physical examinations and one enlisted prior to induction.

Names of those who failed to report were withheld pending possible court action.

The five men inducted were David Sibberensen of Mill Valley, Richard Payne, Michael Dalton and Barton Council of San Rafael, and Karl Wandt of Novato.

Lessons Of History At Olympics Scene

OLYMPIC VISITORS to Germany will find the place bustling. Those whose memories go back to V-E Day will find it hard to relate what they see today to the wholesale devastation of 1945.

Munich was pretty thoroughly destroyed in World War II, but today it is exceedingly difficult to find any visible signs of that destruction.

But the painful human wounds are still visible if you look carefully.

AN HOUR'S DRIVE from downtown Munich will carry you into beautiful rolling hills where farmers are busy in the fields. Watch closely as you drive from one village to the next. In some areas you will see only old women tilling the fields — driving tractors, pitching hay, and performing the stoop labor which is the farmers' lot.

No men and no children are to be seen working in the fields in some districts.

Why don't the men and the children help in these areas as they do everywhere else?

The explanation of the puzzle is that there are no men, and no children. The men of the district went off to war and didn't return. They didn't father any children. Some of those old women in the fields are the daughters and sisters of men lost in the war. Some were never married; their intended were lost too.

IF YOU VISIT a swinging Rhine wine village, you may see an old women's party in one of the wine restaurants. They sit around backslapping and tippling almost like a stag party. When the German band cranks up for dancing, you are likely to see several pairs of the old girls dancing together.

Once more you are seeing a wound of war. Those old women have lived their lives singly; the men of their generation were war victims.

THE PARADES and pageantry of the Olympics will draw huge crowds. Look carefully at those crowds and you will be amazed at how many of the older men are legless or armless, or obviously wearing an artificial limb.

If you are fortunate to be the guest in a home, notice the pictures on the wall. There in a place of honor will be the likeness of a young man in German army uniform. Ask and you will be told it is the son who was lost in the war.

If you motor through the countryside, you will notice that every village has its memorial statue. Look closely at the number of names inscribed. The length of the list is sometimes shocking when measured against the size of the village. Obviously, the village lost just about every able-bodied male.

JOIN A ROUSING party in a Wurtzburg weinstube, the Franconian equivalent of a Munich beer hall. You may note that one merry-maker in his 50s punctuates his hilarity with occasional pensive pauses.

This is where his college class has its annual reunion. Only half the class are still alive. No, there has not been a single natural death among the classmates. The missing half "fell" in the German army's debacle in Russia.

Yes, some participated in the German invasion of the lowlands and France. Some faced the Western Allies on the "second front." They survived to attend reunions. Every one of the missing half "fell" in Russia.

YOU CAN ONLY conclude that today's youth is eminently correct in demanding that all governments everywhere stop their senseless wars.

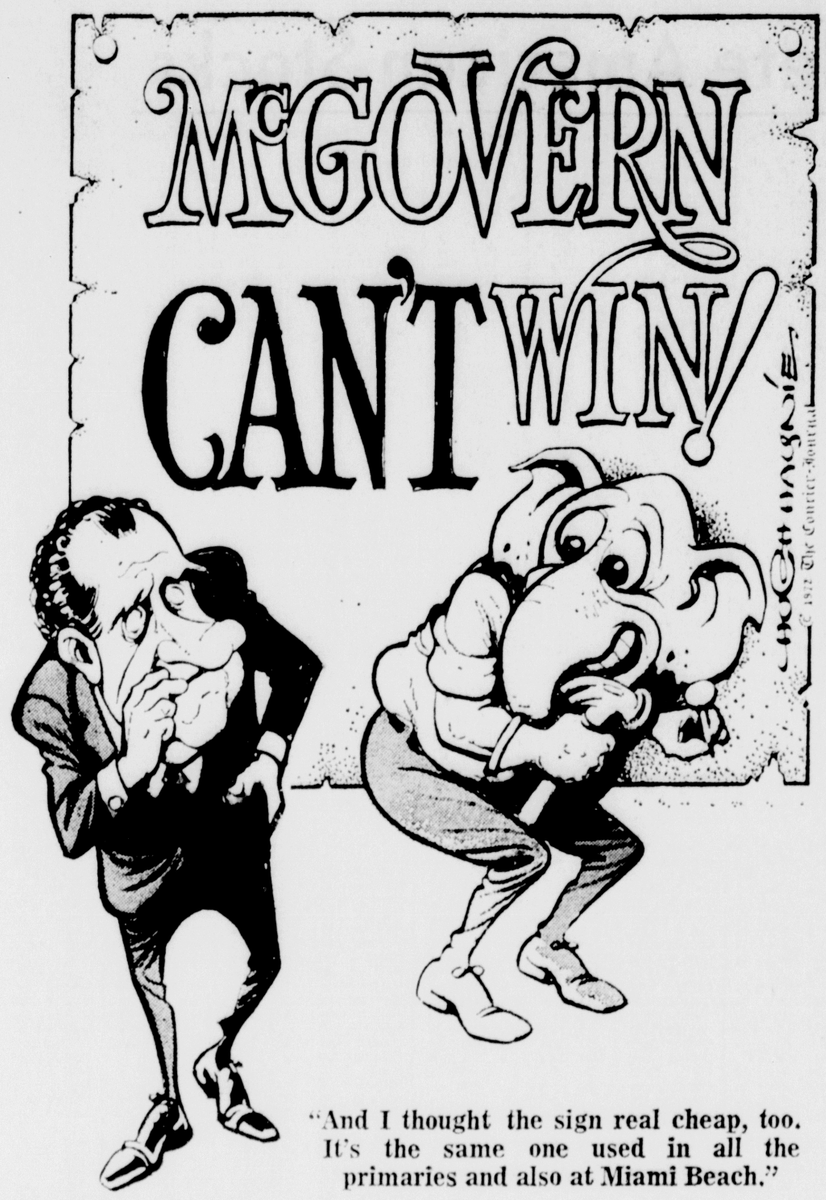
But an hour's drive from downtown Munich will also take you to the still-standing ovens of the Dachau concentration camp where tens of thousands were exterminated.

Humanity had to be saved from Hitler's terrible tyranny.

It took a war to crush that tyranny. Our generation could not prevent the tyranny nor find any way to crush it except by war.

We are hopeful, but lamentably not very confident, that the next generation will be able to save humanity from itself without resorting to war.

—Jack Craemer



"And I thought the sign real cheap, too. It's the same one used in all the primaries and also at Miami Beach."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

'If We Have A Fire, I Hope It's In Novato'

I wish to thank the Novato firemen who came to our house today for their prompt arrival, under five minutes, and the efficient and clean handling of our kitchen fire. They are a great team and if we ever have another fire, I hope it's in Novato.

Sausalito Firemen, Police Respond Quickly

On behalf of my two daughters and myself, may I publicly express our appreciation to the Sausalito Fire Department.

While driving north on Waldo Grade Tuesday evening, Aug. 8th, I had an emergency with my car. Thinking the engine was on fire, and being close to Spencer Avenue, I parked next to the fire house. The station was closed, but I was able to reach the department through the emergency phone. Fire Captain Robertson and Jerry (I did not learn his last name), and a unit of the Sausalito Police Department responded. The car's problem turned out to be relatively minor, but the gentlemen who came to our assistance were genuinely concerned for our safety. They, together with Fireman Jones, went out of their way to help us and see to it that we were able to continue safely home.

Due to their kind attention, my daughters, ages two and five, saw first-hand that if they are ever in an emergency situation, they can always call upon a fireman or policeman and receive fast, efficient and friendly help.

Park Service Road Destroys Natural Beauty

I had occasion recently to drive on the newly completed Mount Vision Road in the Point Reyes National Seashore and was amazed at the destruction caused by the road construction and the total disregard for preservation of the sensitive environment of the park.

This new road is intended as access to Limantour Beach in the park, but since the beach already had a road access, its construction was superfluous. As it climbs over the Inverness Ridge, the road has been constructed utilizing deep swaths of terraced cuts and fills which completely desecrate the hillsides. The steep hillside land through which the road traverses is apparently naturally unstable and numerous slides have occurred along its length. Attempts have been made to repair these slides using stone riprap which makes the road look second rate and poorly designed.

It is completely unbelievable to me that the National Park Service would take it upon itself to construct such a damaging facility that was not even needed. The public has put its trust in the federal government and specifically the park service to save Point Reyes from developers with their land-scarring roads and houses. It is disappointing to see the government go ahead and build unneeded, land-scarring and desecrating roads that we were trying to prevent.

I believe that the park planning policies of the National Park Service should receive careful scrutiny so that future desecrations of our parks can be prevented. The government should seriously consider abandoning the Mount Vision Road and restoring the ground to its natural state.

Mrs. MARCIA NUTE

Moist-Skinned Bug-Catcher

The other day we lifted a redwood fuchsia tub in our garden, trying to see if alien roots were coming in the bottom of the tub and causing the ill health of the plant. We found no roots, but we did find a salamander.

Although it did not solve the the mystery of the ailing fuchsia, it pleased us. We quickly replaced the tub, being careful not to crush the little amphibian. While we do not find these moist, little inhabitants of dark places very attractive, they are better than any insecticide when it comes to slugs, sowbugs, snails and millipedes.

Salamanders may look like slimy, obese lizards, but they are the scourge of garden pests.

Already, The Cycle Renews

The last brown seed pod from this year's crop has not fallen from the acacia trees. Yet, already the cycle of renewal has begun. Slender, pale green, straw-like buds about three-inches long are taking shape. For six or seven months, these buds will swell. Then in February or March they will burst forth in golden cascades of blossoms. Acacias, it seems, never rest.

Regular Democrats Return Slowly To Party Split By 'New Politics'

SAN FRANCISCO — Loyal Democrats are slowly coming back to life after the long nightmare of the vice-presidential fiasco. There is no disguising the cost of the interval that began with the seesaw of indecision following Sen. Thomas Eagleton's disclosure of his hospitalization for mental illness.

The episode further disillusioned prominent Democrats who were already lukewarm toward Sen. George McGovern's candidacy. Normally the source of sizable campaign contributions, they are today waiting it out. Whether they will eventually come around to support a McGovern-Shriver ticket is still in question.

Here is a lifelong Democrat who stops just short of declaring he will vote for President Nixon: "I have 3,00 employes. Each one is carefully vetted before he goes on the payroll. Why Senator Eagleton's record was not thoroughly examined before he was chosen for the second highest office in the land is more than I can understand."

He had backed Sen. Hubert Humphrey in the California primary. Party regulars who had stayed with Sen. Edmund Muskie were put off by the stop-and-start indecision over the possible choice of the Maine senator for the No. 2 spot. This seemed further evidence of ineptitude in the top ranks of the party.

Similar reports of doubt and indifference among the big wheels come from those sampling opinion around the country. At best the attitude is, "wait and see."

THE PRESENCE of Sargent Shriver on the ticket is a plus but, as the Louis Harris polls the McGovern camp had taken just before the Miami Beach convention showed, any No. 2 other than Sen. Edward Kennedy would make only a point or a point and a half difference. As a long-time friend and ally of Chicago's Mayor Richard J. Daley, Shriver should help substantially in Illinois. And Illinois is one of the states the Democrats must carry if they are to have a chance to win in November.

While as a Kennedy in-law some of the magic of the name may rub off on Shriver, the Senator from Massachusetts would have made, according to the Harris survey. A 13-point difference. Shriver will for the first time be testing his vote-getting ability.

All this is the old politics, and is as dead, if you believe the young militants who put McGovern over in the primaries, as Tammany Hall. Yet even6their crusading spirits have been dampened by the backing and filling over the vice presidency. The task they face looms ahead with the vastness of a Grand Canyon to fill up by Nov. 7.

It is here that the loss of a precious month can mean the difference between a possible narrow win and disastrous defeat. The young, the apostles of the new politics, had 18 months to work their miracle in the primaries. Now in little more than two months they must work a second miracle. For the cynical, the doubters, this is simply not in the cards.

CALIFORNIA, the most populous state in the union, is showcase of what was achieved in the primary and what must now be done before election day. A million new voters must be signed up before the deadline of Oct. 8 if the McGovern-Shriver ticket is to have a chance in this state. John Kaufman, head of the McGovern voter registration drive in Northern California, has hundreds of deputy registrars at work. But while nearly 50,000 new voters, presumably McGovern voters, have been signed up since McGovern won the nomination, Kaufman is frank to say that it is an uphill battle.

The bulge in favor of the Democrats, with a million and a half new voters registered in the past year, is greater than ever before. But how much this means in the present volatile political climate is beyond prediction and perhaps beyond even the pollster. Will they vote in November? Will their allegiance to McGovern hold after the dismaying Eagleton affair?

These are questions the miracle workers do not try to answer. They are at it again 14 to 16 hours a day and if only they could stretch the weeks and months out a bit they might make it.

China's Moves Face Russians With New Two-Front Alliance

We were wondering the other day whether the Russians might still be thinking seriously of a quick military thrust at China designed to take out China's nuclear establishment before it gets any bigger. So we asked some questions in places where the answers are supposed to be. We were told:

Don't worry about that one anymore. The Chinese have mounted a battery of short-range nuclear missiles aimed at Vladivostok. True, the Russians could take out all the Chinese nuclear weapons factories if they chose. But the price includes an end to Vladivostok, and anything else worth mentioning out on that far end of the Trans-Siberian Railway.

IN OTHER WORDS the Russians have missed that boat. Had they wanted to prevent China from becoming a full-scale nuclear power they should have acted before China came into possession of its own deterrent. Even one nuclear missile targeted on Vladivostok is quite a deterrent. The Chinese, it seems, have more than one and can hit more than one Russian target.

In turn this means that the nuclear weapon has been largely canceled out of the Chinese-Russian equation. And that can put Russia someday at a large disadvantage. China wants back a lot of territory gathered up by the czars which in earlier times had been vaguely under Chinese suzerainty. The Chinese need land. The Russians have more than they can yet use. The Chinese keep printing maps showing big slices of Siberia as Chinese. It makes the Russians uncomfortable. They should be.

To add to their discomfort the Chinese have been inviting a string of western European officials to Peking. The invitation includes the Germans who haven't come yet. It seems more tactful to them to wait until they have completed their new treaties with the Poles, East Germans, and Russians. But eventually the Germans, too, will make the pilgrimage to Peking which Richard Nixon popularized.

The Chinese areparticularly interested in the new Common Market which will emerge, presumably, after the British join in January. The Chinese can do business with Western Europe without getting tangled up in the Russian-American relationship. Western Europe is safe. And, of course, the closer the ties between China and Western Europe, the less the inclination in Western Europe to do a deal with Russia.

SO RUSSIA, which was well along with its detente with the west Europeans before the China factor was unloosed into the European arena by Mr. Nixon, has to beware of strengthening the bonds between its east and west neighbors. There is a natural affinity between peoples living on opposite sides of a great power. Russia is a great and assertive power not famous for tenderness toward neighbors. If that brings the neighbors together the Russians have only themselves to blame. Perhaps they begin to see that right now.

As a matter of fact the men of the Kremlin have a great deal to be distressed about these days and only one onsolation. The consolation is that their unintended, and hasty, departure from Egypt (reminiscent of the time they were bundled out of China in 1960) happens to reduce the tensions between themselves and the world Jewish community.

Israel seemed for a time after the 1967 war to be the real target of the Russian supply of weapons, advisers and armed technicians to Egypt. Russia behaved as though it might actually be intending to help Egypt exterminate Israel. And at the same time mistreatment of Jews in Russia seemed to reach almost czarist-era proportions. It was getting close to an open war between Russia and the Jews.

A generous (for Russians) emigration policy has reduced the friction inside Russia. The departure of most Russians from Egypt removes the Russian threat to Israel. Israel simply is in no danger at all anymore — from anyone. There could be peace any day now between Russians and Jews.

Otherwise the men of the Kremlin preside over an empire which is shrinking by the day. The real question is how much more will be lost before they can check the trend.

Sarge's Promise Leaves George With Problem Of Logistics

WASHINGTON — The political campaign is now under way, and we can expect to hear some wild promises made by the presidential and vice-presidential candidates.

Just the other da R. Sargent Shriver told the people of West Virginia that if George McGovern is elected, the poor people would be eating in the White House. He said there would be dinners there for people who need the food, rather than rich fat cats who have been invited to 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue in the past.

I don't know if Shriver checked this out with McGovern, but it could raise some very serious logistical problems if the Democratic nominee is sworn in next January.

LET US ASSUME that McGovern has been elected President.

After he's been in the White House a few days, he says to his wife Eleanor, "We have to give a dinner for the poor people tomorrow night."

"How many will there be?"

"Sarge said 1,300,054 people."

"You've got to be kidding," Eleanor says. "I don't have that many place settings."

"Can't you borrow some from Eunice?"

"Even if I did, we wouldn't have enough room to serve them all."

"Yes, I thought of that. But Sarge promised that the first dinner we had in the White House would be for the poor people, and our credibility is at stake."

"WELL, WHY DOESN'T he give the dinner then? He has more money than we do," Eleanor says angrily.

"Because he's not the Prsident. It doesn't have to be a sit-down dinner, you know. It could be buffet."

"I don't care," Eleanor says, "I'm not going in the kitchen and tell the chef to prepare a buffet for 1,300,054 people."

"Couldn't we have it catered?" McGovern asks.

"This is ridiculous. We'll use up our entire entertainment allowance in our first dinner. What are we going to do for the rest of the four years?"

"Maybe we could freeze the leftovers," McGovern suggests.

"I still say Sarge got us into this — let him get out of it," Eleanor says.

"HOW ABOUT the strolling Air Force Strings for entertainment?" McGovern asks.

"You said you were going to cut them out of the defense budget," Eleanor reminds him.

"Oh yes, I forgot that. Did I promise to cut the Marine band, too?"

"Down to one Franch horn and two tuba players."

"Hmm. Maybe Warren Beatty can rustle up the Grateful Dead."

"George, I don't think this is going to work. More than 25 million people in this country go to bed hungry every night. You can't just invite 1,300,054 and not expect the others to be very angry."

"Well, you cant' have every poor person in the country to the White House," McGovern says. "It would be impractical."

"Why didn't you tell that to Shriver before he opened his mouth in West Virginia?"

"Maybe we could have the 1,300,054 for dinner and invite the rest in for coffee and dessert."

"All right," says Eleanor, "I'll do it. But Sarge has to address the invitations."

Just An Un-Average Guy

Behind The News

By MELVIN MADDOCKS

"Persons who oppose the war in Vietnam tend to buy imported Roquefort cheese and wild rice."

—Emanuel H. Denby in Psychology Today

Alfred P. used to be an absolutely Average Consumer. He cut his hair not too short, not too long. He wore not-too-wide, not-too-narrow neckties — patterns of modesty against his white shirt. He drove a car not too prestigious, not too cheap, not too new, not too old. He lived in a sort of colonial-ranch-split-level with just the approved mortgage for his income, which was, of course, median.

Alfred P. kept up with the Joneses but never, never got ahead of them. He constituted the human statistic in the middle —a living masterpiece of inconspicuous conformity. He was the anonymous man who made name brands . . . well, name brands. And he was proud of it.

Then he read the article in Psychology Today, and his life changed.

There are, he learned from Emanuel Denby, two kinds of consumer: the "Passive Consumer" and the "Creative Consumer." The Passive Consumer is a rather timid, colorless character who puts his money in the bank and for his big times, watches sports on TV. He thinks of himself as "cooperative, steady, good-natured, reliable, self-controlled, patient, stable, and reserved."

The Passive Consumer — this paragon of dullness — Alfred clearly saw was himself.

The Creative Consumer, on the other hand, dreams of being "innovative, progressive, imaginative, foresighted, sociable and responsible." He throws one-and-a-half times as many parties as Passive Consumer — and, oh yes, they are "better parties." Furthermore, his wife wears her skirts higher than Passive Consumer's wife, and he is more "curious about life." While Passive Consumer is slumped before his idiot box, Creative Consumer is out golfing or skiing, "often with professional instruction."

The Creative Consumer, concluded Denby and Psychology Today, belongs to the "vanguard" that "lives on the edge of change; in effect, they create the economy of the country."

Alfred flung down his latest not-too-wide, not-too-narrow tie and resolved to join this new elite. He purchased a mod wardrobe because 47 per cent of those "venturesome" Creative Consumers spend more than $300 a year on their clothes (as compared with 20 per cent of the Passive Consumers). He bought an electric blender because three-and-a-half times as many Creative Consumers own blenders. (Poor Passive Consumers "don't know what to put in a blender, how the blender works, or when it is best to use one.")

Alfred P. — the new Alfred P. — quite literally has gone for broke. Like all the other Creative Consumers, he dutifully drinks four times as much bitter lemon as the Passive Consumer and dines out three-and-a-half times as often. Twice as many Creative Consumers buy new cars; so Alfred buys a new car.

Instead of painting his house, refinishing furniture, and doing his own plumbing —all Passive Consumer avocations — he travesl to Europe and joins a book club. He gives his daughter ballet lessons, his son violin lessons, and sends them both to private school.

And, of course, he changes his politics. For if the Creative Consumer "scores higher on all of the questions that relate to the ways man has fun," he also "expresses much greater concern for civil and human rights."

Nibbling on his imported Roquefort cheese and wolfing his wild rice, Alfred is now liberal, bankrupt and happy. And why not? For he isn't really in the "vanguard" at all. He belongs to the new majority. Endlessly self-conscious about what's in, what's out — opinions as well as neckties — he has fallen right into the middle again.

Meet the new Alfred, meet the new American. Is he better? Is he worse? Mostly he is less innocent. Buying diluted counterculture like a supermarket commodity, afraid of nothing so much as being a square, here is Babbitt come to a "life-style" — and like the original Babbitt, he is worthy of our laughter and our tears.

A Visit With Alexandra

By PEGGY POLK

VALLEY COTTAGE, N.Y. (UPI)—Alexandra Tolstoy was born 88 years ago into a world that no longer exists.

The 12th of the great Russian novelist Leo Tolstoy's 13 children, she grew up in czarist Russia nourished by the writing of her father, the baroque ritual of the Russian Orthodox Church and the beauty of the Russian countryside.

At the age of 17 she became her father's confidential secretary. At 2 she was at his side when he fled the family estate to seek a more "spiritual" life and instead found death on the journey. He died of pneumonia at 82.

Alexandra remained in Russia through the revolution and after to edit the first 92-volume edition of her father's work and to establish the Tolstoy Museum.

Then, in 1929, she left her homeland on what the Soviet government believed was to be a brief visit to Japan. Once there she bought a steerage class passage and set sail for America with $50 in her pocket.

A staunch anti-Communist, she has never returned to Russia but has dedicated the rest of her life to helping fellow White Russian refugees and to preserving their culture through the Tolstoy Foundation.

(In November 1964, Miss Tolstoy spoke in San Rafael, saying the West and Communist societies could not and should not co-exist peacefully.)

A small woman, she was dressed in a blue and white seersucker dress the day of our interview. Her white hair drawn back in a bun, she sat in her small study in her cottage on Tolstoy Farm with her two fox terriers, Mickey and Betsy, at her feet. At her side was her cane on which someone—she forgets who—had painted flowers.

She walks with a cane because of arthritis but she is exceptionally vigorous for her age. Until last year, when she was weakened by the flu, she drove a car and enjoyed fishing.

ALEXANDRA TOLSTOY
She misses Russia

The walls of the cottage are covered with photographs of family and friends, President Nixon, sketches and watercolors of Russian scenes. Books are stacked on tables, shelves and windowsills. A pile of manila folders holds notes and four completed chapters for the book she is writing on the Tolstoy Foundation.

She still gardens and outside her roses were in bloom.

"I don't know which country I like best," she says after 43 years in America. But she misses Russia. The people most of all, then nature.

"Where I was born it's a very beautiful place, an estate called Yasnaia Poliana," she said. "There are forests and there are meadows, forests and then meadows. My father used to go riding on horseback and I would follow him."

Miss Tolstoy, the only surviving Tolstoy child, was born after her father had completed his monumental "War and Peace" and "Anna Karenina." She remembers him after he had put his materpieces from his mind and wanted only to write evangelical tales for Russia's peasants.

"When people asked him what is the greatest work he wrote, he said, 'The stories for the simple folk, for the peasants,' " Miss Tolstoy said.

As her father's secretary she would copy his work on a Remington typewriter sent as a gift to Tolstoy by its American makers.

"He would write a first draft. I would copy it with big margins all around and bring it to him at nine in the morning. At one or half past one he would come to lunch and I would pick up the manuscript and there was nothing left — he had written in the margins, in between each line, everywhere there was space. And I would copy it again.

"I remember I copied one article 50 times."

Miss Tolstoy (she is a countess but her father, a count, preferred not to use the title and she feels the same) has lived and worked for more than three decades with Mrs. Tatiana Schaufuss, another exile.

Together 33 years ago they founded the Tolstoy Foundation which has helped to resettle 23,000 Russian refugees and was instrumental in blocking Soviet attempts to force tens of thousands more to return to the Soviet Union after World War II.

Recently they built a 96-bed nursing home for aged refugees on their 50-acre farm in this Hudson River community near New York City. Next they want to raise money to add a museum and an institute of Russian studies on the land given to them by the Harkness family.

She is highly critical of Svetlana Alliluyeva, even though Stalin's daughter gave the Tolstoy Foundation $50,000 from the royalties from her first book.

"She could do so much for Russia, knowing what Stalin has done in Russia. She should tell this instead of living as she does — marrying and now divorcing," Miss Tolstoy said. "She is a fool."

The 'Glades Need Love To Survive

By MARY KIRKLAND
The Christian Science Monitor

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — In the winter of 1971 flames spread throughout the Everglades. Coastal towns that had been gulping water from the drained lands finally were forced to ration their intake. Inland, thousands of fresh-water fish perished.

In this atmosphere, Everglades National Park personnel began a program to bring fourth-grade students from almost all the schools in Dade County to a special, unburned section of the park.

They figured that if the Everglades area was to survive, it needed love.

Adults, they decided, either already loved the Everglades or were ready to pave it. Children were the ones to reach.

"A Day in the 'Glades" was devegped to instill love. It was given a budget of $51,321, or $1.28 per child.

This year 9,000 children have visited the Everglades and both school district and park personnel praise the program as one of the best in existence.

The area chosen (the Shark Valley Loop Road) had been closed to the public for three years. It features the most concentrated wildlife in the park.

Sixty students ride down the road every school day of the year and even with that schedule only a third of the 25,000 fourth graders in Dade County have the opportunity to visit Shark Valley.

Some of the children have been to the park before but many others have not. One ranger tells of a "misty, choked-up feeling" he gets when inner-city kids who thought "wildlife" meant cockroaches and rats see their first white heron.

Once 60 inner-city children piled to the front of the bus to watch a little Everglades deer, once almost hunted to extinction, bounce along in front of them. The white tail led all the way to the fire tower at the end of the trail.

The bus comes to a halt at this 50-foot-high fire tower. Another ranger and three Miccosukee Indians meet them there and the kids split into two groups.

One group climbs the fire tower, from which they can look down on the River of Grass to see deer grazing and alligators sleeping.

The other group goes on a treasure hunt. They find fossil sand dollars in the parking lot and identify plant life before ending the hunt by discovering a long, but harmless. Indigo snake in a cage.

"We encourage the children to pick up the snake," says Dale Smith, assistant chief naturalist. "If they touch it, they will find that it isn't an evil, slimy thing, but just a natural part of the environment.

"Too many of these children think of the Everglades as a place filled with poisonous snakes and darkness," he adds. "We want to show them the beauty."

One of the rangers who lives at the fire station shows the children his pet raccoon. "I think you are the luckiest man in the whole world to have your own raccoon," says one of the girls.

The ranger hasn't made up his mind about that, "especially wnen it tipped over the garbage in his small living quarters and scattered orange peels through the rooms."

After a lunch eaten on the moat-surrounded fire-tower location, it's time to fish.

The rangers bait the hooks and untangle lines as the students concentrate on hooking four- and five-pound bass from the 10-foot-deep barrow holes.

The more silent ones are rewarded by the quiet intrusion of blue heron, white heron, white ibis, anhingas, little green herons and wood storks to the edge of their fishing holes.

Throughout the fishing time one ranger takes Polaroid pictures of students with their fish and gives them the pictures later.

"We want to give them something tangible to help them remember what a good time they had here," Smith comments. "Then maybe when they will have basic environmental decisions to make, they'll remember what they learned and use the experience to help them make their judgments."

The Chains' Big Fight To Survive

By MARTIN SKALA
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

NEW YORK — Food chains are struggling as hard as housewives to make ends meet these days.

Despite some charges of "middleman profiteering," the trend toward higher food and meat prices has done little to fatten the coffers of supermarket operators.

During the first six months of 1972, the industry's after-tax profits skidded to 0.7 cents on each sales dollar — their worst drubbing in more than a decade. In 1971 food chains earned 0.9 cents on the dollar.

The industry's profit woes are well recognized on Wall Street, if not in Washington. Since the temporary price freeze of August 1971, the market value of food chain shares has plummeted by almost $1 billion.

Food chain executives blame declining profit margins on a resurgence in price competition and discounting among major chains, and —to a lesser extent — on Phase 2 controls. Both have made it difficult for stores to recoup rising labor and other operating costs at the checkout counters.

"Competition bas been a more effective price regulator than Washington's controls" said Thomas McMaster, chairman of Detroit's Allied Supermarkets, the nation's 11th-largest chain.

Phase 2 rules allow supermarkets to pass on any increases in wholesale grocery costs, provided they don't exceed normal markups that prevailed before last year's freeze. But as a practical matter, McMaster pointed out, keen competition has forced most large chains either to shave their markups in most product lines or suffer a loss of business.

Although rising food prices have been a sore point with Washington inflation-watchers, supermarkets executives doubt the Nixon administration will make any major moves to roll back retail prices.

"With 90 per cent of the industry operating below the profit margin ceilings allowed by the Price Commission, additional controls might seriously damage the industry's viability," one top executive commented.

Signs like this have gone up on many A&P stores across the country

What's more worrisome than close scrutiny by Washington right now, industry leaders agree, are the spreading "price wars" that rage in Detroit, New York, Cleveland, Chicago and Washington.

Largely in response to a hard-hitting new discounting policy by Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., the industry giant, many chains are trimming grocery prices, dropping trading stamps and extending store hours.

In a crash effort to regain a fading leadership position, A&P last year began converting its 4,200 stores to "WEO" (where economy originates) discount units. Dropping prices a few cents on hundreds of grocery items, selling merchandise directly from bulk cartons and concentrating on fast-moving items, the $5.5 billion-a-year retailer is seeking to reverse a steady decline in sales volume and profits.

To date, more than two-thirds of all A&P units have hoistedthe distinctive green WEO posters, luring a bevy of new shoppers and producing some pained outcries from smaller competitors.

"A&P is squeezing everybody," acknowledged an official of Giant food stores, a medium-sized Washington, D.C., chain that until recently was unchallenged as the area's leading discounter.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Who was doing what and where about the Vietnam war was clear. But what the reasons were behind the flurry of activity ranging from Washington to Paris, from Hanoi to Saigon, was much in dispute. Was they anything more than speculation to the idea that a breakthrough had come in the Paris peace talks? Was the meeting between presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Thieu in Saigon a sign of such a breakthrough? Or was it, as Democratic presidential candidate Sen. George McGovern charged, a public relations gesture in an election year?

Did Pierre Salinger's meeting, at McGovern's request, with North Vietnamese negotiators in Paris pose a threat to peace negotiations, as the Nixon administration said? Or was it, as McGovern maintained, a sincere gesture on his part to step closer to peace by telling the North Vietnamese that they should not wait for a change in administrations but negotiate peace whenever they could?

The cloudy distinctions between reality and campaign oratory were further blurred by Democratic candidate Sargent Shriver's charge that the Nixon administration flubbed an opportunity for peace in its first months, and by the Republican reply that, if such an opportunity was flubbed, it was the Johnson administration which flubbed it.

Nor did the return of former Attorney General Ramsey Clark from a visit to Hanoi clarify matters. Clark said the United States was bombing schools, hospitals and dikes in the North. John Mitchell, Clark's successor, said Clark was giving aid and comfort to the North Vietnamese.

And the meeting between Kissinger and Thieu had its own complications. Kissinger flew to Saigon after talking with North Vietnamese negotiator Le Duc Tho, who promptly returned to Hanoi. That sparked the speculation of a breakthrough. But Thieu said he was too busy to meet with Kissinger right away.

When they did meet almost a day after Kissinger's arrival in Saigon, they smiled and chatted but said nothing about their conversation. Thieu, however, had said at the beginning of the week that the United States must keep up "relentless bombing" of the North for another six or seven months.

Toward the end of the week, American planes were conducting the heaviest bombing raids of the war against the North.

Londoners Still The Safest From Crime

By WILLIAM F. WRIGHT

LONDON (UPI)—In an era of rising crime rates, London remains the safest of all great metropolises.

Most Londoners can't define it—perhaps it's the friendly, unarmed "bobbies," the placid British public, the reassuring red doubledecker buses, the staid black beetle cabs—but for them there is a certain something that breeds a sense of security in a violent world.

The feeling is supported by statistics and, excluding strifetorn Northern Ireland, embraces the whole of these snug, sceptered British Isles.

In many cases, especially crimes involving violence, the crime count actually is going down.

New York-type muggings with guns or knives were so rare in London last year they failed to rate a mention in the crime statistics. And in a metropolitan area with a combined resident and transient population last year of about 16 million, there were only 6,000 purse-snatchings, pocket pickings and other petty personal crimes.

That meant the odds against such a thing happening were about 2,500 to 1.

Police recorded only 77 cases of murder in London last year compared with at least 58 murders in a single week in New York in July of this year.

There were 117 murders overall in England and Wales in 1971, or about three murders per million of the population. In West Germany, with about the same population, there were 700.

Despite a British penchant for spectacular crimes—great train robberies, multiple murders, etc.—crime actually has declined statistically in Britain since Jack the Ripper's days of the last century. In 1895, about half a million convictions for all kinds of offenses were reported. In 1971, excluding traffic offenses, there were still about half a million convictions. In the meantime, the population iccreased by about 50 per cent.

Reported rape cases in London last year, 107, were down from the previous year's 141. Manslaughter and infanticide were down from 54 to 41.

Criminologists attribute the low murder rate and the general not-so-violent nature of British society to the country's stringent anti-gun laws, which make it difficult for a private individual to buy firearms.

Although the British underworld has shown a growing disregard recently for the old unwritten understanding with police not to use guns in bank robberies and similar crimes, the government holds that arming the police would "probably lead more to the escalation of violence than to increased protection for police or anyone else."

Waterway To The Ross Valley

Winding in graceful curves to San Francisco Bay, Corte Madera Creek descends from the hills of its origin to the broad flood plain where development is marching upon its banks. Townhouses, about 186 units, have been constructed along the creek (left center), while apartments are planned along the north bank (right center), and Piper Park (center) with its baseball diamond is slated to be the new location for the Larkspur Police Department's headquarters. The vacant land along the north shore (lower right), adjacent to Bon Air Shopping Center has been considered as a potential site for a regional shopping center. Much of the scene is dominated by Redwood High School (center) and its playing fields near a residential lagoon. A cluster of apartments on Bon Air Hill and the towers of the Tamalpais retirement residence loom above the north bank (center), and beyond the buildings and athletic field at Marin Catholic High School. In the upper center, the creek passes yet another educational center and athletic field on the College of Marin campus in Kentfield. Hidden by the hills are the Ross Valley cities of Ross, San Anselmo and Fairfax.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

"The Carol Burnett Show," the best all-round variety program on television, will start its sixth season in the fall for CBS. Among the guests so far scheduled for the new season are James Garner, Pearl Bailey, Melba Moore, Sammy Davis Jr., Carl Reiner, Tim Conway, Carol Channing, Steve Lawrence, Edie Gorme, Bernadette Peters and Jim Nabors. The latter, who has been the guest on the opening show for five seasons, again will do the honors on Sept. 13.

Patrick Macnee, the Scottish actor who became so well known to American video viewers through his role as the debonair leading man of "The Avengers" series, is the new star of Broadway's long-run suspense play, "Sleuth."

ABC has scheduled for Sept. 10 a 90-minute entertainment special saluting television's 25th anniversary. Many of the early stars, some of whom are still around, such as Bob Hope, Lucille Ball and Dinah Shore, will appear. Some may think that this is jumping the gun by a year, preferring to date the beginning of big-time, regularly scheduled video from the fall of 1948.

The Making Of The Candidate

By BOB THOMAS

For many years Hollywood held to the maxim, "Political pictures don't sell." If that's true, then how do you explain the current success of "The Candidate?"

No film within memory has been more blatantly political. It is a step-by-step analysis of a California race by a young liberal lawyer, played by Robert Redford, for the U.S. Senate seat held by a confirmed conservative, Don Porter. There is no melodrama and scarcely any plot.

"THE CANDIDATE" originated with Redford, who has a design to make a series of films depicting the American scene, especially on the theme of winning. It was directed by Michael Ritchie, who made Redford's "Downhill Racer," and produced by Walter Coblenz.

The film has a script by Jeremy Larner, a worker for the Eugene McCarthy campaign in 1968. A consultant on the picture was Nelson Rising, who helped manage John Tunney's successful race for the U.S. Senate in 1970.

Producer Coblenz and consultant Rising were discussing the success of "The Candidate."

"At a production cost of one and a half million dollars, the picture is bound to get into a profit situation," said Coblenz. He admitted that the film industry's traditional prejudice against political pictures at least partly dictated the modest budget.

"We felt we could make a big-looking picture at that price," said the producer, "and we got something in return: tremendous freedom. Warner Brothers let us go off and shoot it (much of it in Marin) without any interference."

PROFESSIONALS who view "The Candidate" are amazed that it could have been made for a million and a half. Crowd scenes galore. The big look to the film was the result of careful planning — and the campaign know-how of Rising.

"For all the crowd scenes we used real people, not Hollywood extras," said Coblenz. "Sometimes we made contributions to political clubs. We did that to get 2,500 people for the labor temple scene, which was filmed in the old Paramount theater in Oakland."

HARRY REASONER, left, and Howard K. Smith are only one of the teams of television commentators who will be bringing viewers the activities of the 1972 Republican National Convention from Miami Beach's Convention Hall Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. All three networks, and public television (Channel 9) as well, have scheduled extensive coverage of the proceedings, most of it in the early evening hours.

Politics And TV's Big 'Glass Eye'

By JACK WAUGH

Ever since 1948 when television first thrust its big glass eye into politics, politicians haven't been sure whether they have been using it or it has been using them.

Winners swear by it. Losers swear at it. Underdogs are lifted to victory by it. Front-runners are undone by it.

It has transferred campaigns largely from the stump to the tube. It has put cosmetics into politics and taken squeaky voices out. It has shown both the doldrums of politics and its most heroic hours on prime time. It has made candidates more visible to the public and the public less visible to the candidates.

It has caused Nicholas Johnson of the Federal Communications Commission to prophesy that "our presidential campaign is really going to be waged between two television consultants nobody knows."

IT HAS DONE all that and it is likely to do it all again, because no matter what else television is to politics — what it has become or ever has been and what it has ever done or not done — running without it is unthinkable.

In some alcoves of the political process, TV is pervasive. It virtually controls the hours, nature, and character of the two national political conventions.

It dictates the time. The delegates convene at Miami Beach at 7:30 because that is television's prime time. It dictates how the hall will be lighted, specifies the kind of public-address system, and is clearly the way most Americans — including politicians — follow the convention.

On election nights, television preempts not only all the airways, but the entire nation's time. And its anchormen — Walter & John & David & Harry & Howard — are names better known to the nation than most candidates.

IN THE LAST presidential election the three major candidates spent 21 million dollars among them to put their cases to the voters on TV. Richard Nixon spent 12 million; Hubert Humphrey, six million; and George Wallace, three million.

Two years later, in 1970, Republican candidates for all offices in the nation spent $16,531,867 for radio and TV — and mostly TV — and the Democrats spent $14,257,198.

Last year the first campaign-spending reform law in 40 years passed the Congress, limiting each candidate in 1972 to only 13.9 million dollars in advertising — 8.4 million dollars for television and radio. Most political TV media men believe that will be enough.

But buying time on TV isn't the only way a politician gets there. There are talk shows, panel shows, press conferences, documentaries, national conventions, and the 6 o'clock news.

HOWEVER, THE other side of television —and its most controversial aspect — is universally regarded as that part that is bought and paid for. And the spot advertisement, the 10-second "quickie," has won a reputation as a black-caped villain that defiles politics, the voters, television, and the democratic process. It enters the scene to hisses and boos.

Newscaster Frank Reynolds of the American Broadcasting Co. has said that "the slick political spots now polluting the air are no less injurious to public health" than cigarette advertising.

Anchorman Howard K. Smith, also of ABC, has charged that the 10-second to 60-second commercial "is made to order for trickery, innuendo, implications, or reason, smear, or irrelevance."

THERE IS an outcry to banish them from the airwaves altogether and replace them with five-minute spots and even with longer 15-and 30-minute shows in which a candidate can be fleshed out to fuller dimension and seen in all his issue-and-image splendor by the electorate that sits at home.

But despite this, the 10 to 60-second spot is still seen by professionals as the essential single cog of political weaponry on television. And as such it has its defenders.

The voter that the spots are likely to reach is the one the candidate needs most — the undecided, independent, ticket-splitting, show-me-if-you-can variety. He is not very interested in politics, and yet he is the swing voter, the one who decides who wins. He's the kind that sees a 15-minute or 30-minute show about Charlie Candidate listed in his TVguide and snaps the dial over to Archie Bunker.

HE HAS GOT to be sneaked up on and taken by surprise. The only way his attention and a political pitch are likely to mesh is by accident.

And as Allan D. Gardner of David, Oskner & Mitchneck Inc., a New York advertising agency says: "The longer you make your spot, the more likely the viewer will be to switch the dial somewhere else."

TV Poses Problems For Politics

A typical TV viewer's attention span to politics isn't noted for excessive length. Besides, says Gardner, he has a built-in filter system.

When a spot flashes on the set he looks on it as a commercial and "filters out 30 to 50 percent of the content." The candidate is lucky if his name survives the process. But in some cases the name may be enough.

The biggest audience ever recorded for a half-hour paid political program — a Lyndon Johnson show — was seven million. Most of them draw four million or less, a rating that would drum a commercial show off the network the next day.

ALLAN GARDNER says: "The way TV is structured today you either get the 10 to 60-second spot or nothing. And like it or not it often is the one brief link with the candidate that many voters are ever going to have."

This bothers most critics of the spot, who say it is impossible to make a serious and useful statement in 60 seconds or less.

To which Joe Napolitan, the veteran media manager of many political campaigns, retorts: "If elected I will unilaterally withdraw all of our troops from Vietnam within three months of election day." "I will go to Korea." "Will you marry me?" "I love you."

Another reason candidates must fall back on the quickie message crammed between shows on prime time is that the climax of the political campaigns and the TV rating season arrive at the studios the same time of the year — the early fall — and any political message longer than 60 seconds is hard to come by.

"IT IS DIFFICULT enough to buy five, 15, or 30 minutes on TV any time," says Ruth Jones, recognized by many media men as the best buyer of TV time in the country. "But in the rating season when the new shows start, you not only get viewers screaming at you if you preempt a prime time show, but the networks don't like it either. It's a lot easier to buy time in June than in October."

But even after a candidate buys his time, films his spots, edits his 15 minutes and 30-minute documentary specials, do they do any good?

Walter de Vries and V. Lance Tarrance, a political scientist and a census statistician, respectively, have tried to answer that in a book called "The Ticket-Splitter." The answer: not as much good as getting on TV without paying for it does.

THEY SAY there are two kinds of TV exposure — controlled and uncontrolled. The controlled embraces all the paid programs that can be stage-managed by the candidate's media men. The uncontrolled variety is getting on TV and taking your chances — on talk shows, panels and news programs.

De Vries and Tarrant say the kind of voter that counts — the unpredictable ticket-splitter — prefers the uncontrolled type overwhelmingly. Of the nine kinds of media that can be bought and controlled by the candidate, includign TV spots, none crop up in the De Vries-Tarrant "very important" group of election-time persuaders. Indeed, De Vries and Tarrant rank TV ads 24th down the list.

While Allan Gardner is not basically a disciple of the sharp school of television critics, he does believe that the impact of TV on a political campaign is overrated.

HE REMEMBERS that in May, 1968, before Mr. Nixon started spending his 12 million dollars on TV, his standing in the Gallup poll was 43 per cent. On election day, six months and 12 million dollars later, he won 43 per cent of the vote. He hadn't moved a point higher.

And throughout the campaign the highest he ever went was 45 per cent.

In the candidate-crammed Florida Democratic primary this year, where spot messages were so frequent Ruth Jones says "boredom and confusion, utter confusion" set in.

New York Mayor John V. Lindsay bought $170,000 of broadcast time and got 7 per cent of the votes. George Wallace spent $75,000 and got 42 per cent. Hubert Humphrey spent the same as Wallace and got 18 per cent. And Edmund Muskie spent $150,000 and got only 9 per cent.

What nobody cares to say is how a candidate would do if he didn't buy TV time at all. And neither does anybody have the nerve to try. Ruth Jones dismisses the whole idea as out of the question. "Let's face it," she says, "TV is still the greatest mass media we have. It has to be important. How can you possibly say a mass media of sight and sound isn't instrumental in this age?"

THE POLITICAL landscape is full of names that meant nothing or very little to voters before they mounted massive TV campaigns.

When John Lindsay decided to run for mayor of New York City in 1965, he was hardly known beyond the "silk stocking district" he represented in Congress — until Ruth Jones started buying his TV time.

"In the Bronx," for instance, she says, "nobody had heard of him. So the first trick was to get his name known. We started early, with 10 spots interspersed on baseball exhibition game broadcasts. We aimed for high frequency, the programs that had the most listeners and viewers."

After most of New York had at least heard of him, Ruth Jones began buying time to put across the image the candidate wanted: "a man in shirt sleeves walking among the people — the common man."

IN 1969, WHEN Lindsay ran again, the problem was totally different.

"We had to overcome the unpopularity he had roused by dint of being mayor of New York for four years," says Ruth Jones. "We figured we had to go after the Jewish middle-class housewife. So we booked all the time we could around the Gabe Pressman show, which we knew was the show most of them watched." And it worked.

The most common charge against TV in politics today is that it turns a political campaign into a struggle of images — and may the most telegenic image win.

Roger Ailes, a TV consultant to the Richard Nixon campaign in 1968, says this may not be so bad.

"Nine months from now," he says, "the six issues so important today may not be important at all. There may be six new ones instead. But what kind of a man a candidate is, who he is, is still going to be important. Image is crucial and I am not sure that is wrong."

CHARLES GUGGNEHEIM, the Academy Award-winning documentary filmmaker who is running the McGovern media campaign, says: "We will echo what the candidate is doing on the stump."

He says the campaign expects to put 25 per cent of its legally alloted 8.4 million dollars for TV and radio advertising into network advertising and 75 per cent into local TV.

A College Campus At The Air Base In Building 630

JOANNE HOFFERT is the coordinator for Golden Gate College of San Francisco for the courses, open to both civilians and servicemen, it offers at Hamilton Air Force Base in the Education Center in Building 630. Here a prospective student consults Mrs. Hoffert concerning those classes. Other institutions of higher education also offer high school, college and graduate-level courses at the base.

NOT TOO MANY Marin residents other than military personnel and their dependents have taken advantage of the college courses at Hamilton Base. An exception are these Dominican nuns. And Dominican College conducts a Master's Degree program in education-counseling at the base.

INSTRUCTORS WITH diverse and practical experience in the fields in which they are teaching are one of the big attractions of the Hamilton Air Force Base Education Center program. For example, the instructor here is George Cardin, an associate economist with the First California National Bank.

(Air Force photos by S/Sgt. Byron Baird)

Marinites are familiar with their College of Marin Dominican College and the seminaries — and justly proud of those institutions of higher education.

But there's another educational program — virtually a small college — functioning in their county of which they are largely unaware.

It goes almost unnoticed because it operates behind the gates of Hamilton Air Force Base.

Yet the educational opportunities it affords are open to civilians and service personnel alike.

THE SITE IS ununimposing military structure — Building 630, or the base's Education Center. But inside are taught courses that run the span from the high school level to graduate school studies.

Military personnel wishing to work toward a high school diploma get a helping hand from Naomi Ingram, education specialist who coordinates the courses offered on the base under Novato Adult Evening High School auspices.

"Most of our military personnel and many of their dependents earn their high school diplomas in two semesters," reports Mrs. Ingram.

These people usually come to Mrs. Ingram with one or two years of high school work already to their credit. These credits, plus credit awarded for the General Education Development Test and/or work experience on the part of the student usually put that student very close to the diploma.

OFTEN, SHE SAYS, all that remains is the completion of the required courses in U.S. History and U.S. Government.

Mrs. Ingram says the greatest gratification from her work comes when these people, their high school diplomas earned, then go on to college courses while at Hamilton Base.

An Associate of Arts Degree is available from two institutions through programs at the air base.

The first is the Marin Community College District's new Indian Valley College, established to relieve the ever burgeoning student population at College of Marin and scheduled for a permanent Novato campus, but already functioning at Hamilton in Building 630.

COL. VERMONT Garrison, base commander, and Daniel Spelling, education officer, point out that both the college and the base benefit from the arrangement, giving the school a badly needed temporary home and the base the benefits of the enriched educational program.

Dr. Ernest H. Berg, president of Indian Valley College, expresses his school's appreciation of access to a facility where it can offer day as well as evening classes, pending the realization of its own campus.

Beginning in September there will be 23 classes offered during the day at Hamilton in the area of lower division general education credit — such courses as English, Sociology, Psychology,

About CARPETS

By Doug Emerson

WHY CARPET? Sometimes it's worth reminding ourselves of the many answers to that question. There are some very good reasons that go far beyond the basic purpose of esthetic appeal and luxurious appearance.

Easier housekeeping, for instance. Vacuuming is a quick and easy way to have your rooms looking fresh and clean. No mopping, no scrubbing, no waxing or polishing chores to worry about with wall-to-wall carpets.

Quiet is another important plus. Carpets muffle the sounds of children playing or television blaring, even party sounds that would otherwise be nerve-shattering. Footsteps fade softly on carpets, and the sounds you want to hear — good conversation, music, entertainment — are more of a pleasure to enjoy.

Want more? There's extra warmth and insulation, beneficial to the whole family and especially to young children who like to play or read the paper spread out on the carpet. There's safety, without feet slipping or skidding on polished floors. And there's the foot comfort and reduction of fatigue for the woman who puts in long hours at home.

Good carpeting puts it all together — beauty, comfort, warmth, easy care and quiet — for a lot less than you might expect. Look over our carpet displays, a wonderful world of color and texture that belongs in your home. For selection and savings too, visit and Physics. During the evening there will also be classes from 7 to 10 p.m. in American Studies, Psychology (1a), Biology, and Real Estate Principles.

Hamilton Has Busy Program

THE LAST class mentioned is also the beginning of a program in which 18 hours of real estate courses and six elective hours will entitle the student to a Real Estate Certificate. In the spring semester, two courses in this program will be offered and all subsequent real estate classes will be held on base in the evening.

The fee per unit for all courses offered by Indian Valley is $3 per unit if the student is over 21 years of age. If younger, no fee is charged the student.

The other Associate of Arts Degree program on the base is offered by Golden Gate College (to become a university in September) of San Francisco. Sixty units of credit are needed for this A.A. in General Studies. Eighteen of the 60 units are required courses such as English, math, and U.S. History, and 48 units are elective credit.

JOANNE HOFFERT, Golden Gate's on base coordinator, does not like to stress the A.A. Degree as an end goal with that school. She says: "Most of our students are ultimately working for a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Management or Economics and it is generally only when they have a move coming up that they fall back on the A.A. Degree as a sort of unification of all their prior credits and as an interim goal."

Because of the cost factor and the availability of junior colleges in the area, Golden Gate's on-base program does not offer many lower division courses in its yearly curriculum.

The fee for Golden Gate's courses is $35 per unit.

The Baccalaureate Program (B.A.) available on base is also provided by Golden Gate College. In fact, Golden Gate has programs at 23 bases and with many corporations.

This is a fact that Daniel Spelling is quite proud of because it was at Hamilton, in 1965 and largely through the efforts of Spelling, that Golden Gate began its first off-campus program.

THIS B.A. Degree program is made up of five eight-week terms and one five-week summer term a year. This September the courses offered will be:

Principles of Economics, Monday and Thursday; Law of Contract and Agency, Tuesday and Thursday; Government and Business, Monday and Thursday; and Principles of Organization and Management, Tuesday and Thursday.

THE STUDENTS HERE are participants in the education-counseling Master's Degree program conducted at Hamilton Air Force Base by Dominican College in San Rafael. So far the program has produced one degree recipient, but several others will complete their work in the immediate future.

According to Mrs. Hoffert, most of the students are quite happy with the compact term (two three-hour classes weekly) because it allows them more scheduling control from temporary duty assignments. Therefore fewer class withdrawals are experienced through this arrangement.

During each eight-week term, four classes are conducted carrying three resident credits each. For the most part these are upper division classes and are usually rather small with an average of 15 to 20 students.

THE GENERAL make up of the classes traditionally has been four-fifths military and one-fifth civilian students. This is a situation that Mrs. Hoffert has been trying to alter since she began working for Golden Gate College a year ago. "I have been writing publicity articles, arranging photos and news stories each term and sending out schedules to the larger companies in the area, but so far I haven't been able to draw many new people from the civilian community."

It is not only the favorable small-class situation which is a plus, she emphasizes, but also the practical experience each of the instructors has acquired in the field in which he is teaching.

S/Sgt. Johnny Candy relates "In the two full years I have been attending Golden Gate's on-base proram, I have had only two professional instructors. The rest have been people who are actually working in industry during the day, and relating their experiences to us in the evening."

Two examples of this kind of expertise are both Novato residents.

Clair Anderson has been teaching for Golden Gate at Hamilton in the field of economics for three years. His primary job however, is vice-president of the First California National Bank in San Francisco.

DONALD RICHARDS has been teaching for two years. He is the personnel director of the South San Francisco School district and he has been teaching in the field of social and organizational aspects of management.

"Even though we are geared for management" says Mrs. Hoffert, "we are always searching for meaningful electives which will 'turn on' our students."

An example of this kind of course is a class currently in session, Cultural and Intellectual History of the United States. It is a large class of 30 and is made up of students of all races and from all parts of the country. The discussions are described by the instructor as "quite lively."

THIS PAST June, there were 24 students from the Hamilton campus who received degrees from Golden Gate, with the honors of having the highest baccalaureate grade point average going to CM/Sgt. Charles Sheeley.

Because of the Air Force's growing concern that all its personnel become knowledgeable in social problem areas, two other colleges offer classes on the base that emphasize social and political problems of today. They are the College of Notre Dame, and Sonoma State College.

The social area is handled by the College of Notre Dame, offering two classes in Sociology each semester, and , like Golden Gate, on an eight-week basis.

The College of Notre Dame is located in Belmont on the Peninsula and all courses offered at Hamilton carry full resident credit. It is possible to complete the requirements on base for the major area of concentration for the B.A. Degree in Sociology.

DAVID OLSON, the other education specialist at Hamilton,

coordinates this program with Notre Dame. He is pleased with the ever-increasing enrollment each semester and he and Spelling have been conferring with officials at the college about the possibility of having a full-time program on base in the near future.

IN ADDITION, Sonoma State College also offers extension courses at Hamilton. Its areas of concentration are Psychology and Political Science. These courses run on a semester basis and up to now only one course has been offered each semester. The Fall course to be offered in September is The Cultural Revolution, Wednesdays, 7 to 10 p.m.

S/Sgt. Joseph Mrenek, the non-commissioned officer in charge at the Education Center, is involved with this program and he is hopeful that a degree program may be starting soon here with Sonoma State College.

THERE ARE two Masters Degree programs on base as well. One in the field of Education-Counseling with Dominican College, and the other in the area of Systems Management with the University of Southern California.

The degree program with Dominican College of San Rafael has been on base since the Spring of 1971. Two graduate classes are offered each of three semesters a year. Thirty semester hours is the requirement for the M.S. in Education.

Both Master Degree programs are handled by David Olson. As to how many have received their degrees from Dominican, he explains, "Up to now we have had only one degree recipient, but there are several scheduled to complete their degree requirements by the fall semester."

Dominican's proximity lends itself well to providing instructors right from the main campus' faculty.

THE UNIVERSITY of Southern California offers a M.S. Degree in Systems Management.

"This is a very substantial program," relates Olson. "We have 30 or more students currently enrolled in our program, and this past June we had 12 students earn degrees."

The quality of instruction is first-rate, since the instructors are flown up to Hamilton from the Southern California campus every week. This ensures the constant high quality that is required of a prestigious school with the reputation of USC.

Another program with USC is now in the planning stages. Spelling is currently polling the area to see how much interest there is in a Doctorate of Education at Hamilton.

Which completes the roll call of higher educational opportunities available at Hamilton Base and its Building 630. These are, those in charge say, opportunities too often overlooked by Marin's civilian population seeking a school in which to earn a degree. Next time you whiz past Hamilton Base on Highway 101, they suggest you remember that there is a "college" functioning inside. And that its doors are open to you.

A PROUD and smiling Dan Spelling, center, education officer at Hamilton Air Force Base, presents a Master's Degree to Capt. David Cohen, left, and the Golden Gate College award to its highest grade point graduate to Sgt. Charles Sheeley, in ceremonies at the base.

Test drive a Sonett. And see why a sports car with front wheel drive makes sense.

Front wheel drive will make any car handle better and corner surer.

But it's especially good to have in a sports car. Because, after all, a person drives a sports car for the way it handles and responds.

But besides front wheel drive, you'll find a lot of other things about the Sonett that make sense.

Things like rack and pinion steering, a fiberglass body with an anti-corrosion treated bottom, front disc brakes, dual built-in roll bars, radial tires, retractable headlamps... things that make the Sonett one of the most exciting sports cars you'll ever drive.

At Saab, they have some very definite ideas about how a sports car should be built.

And they built the Sonett to be one of the most sensible sports cars on the road.

In every respect.

"It lets the students see the environment where the Indians once lived. Then they can really feel what they have studied in the classroom," says an instructor concerning a College of Marin anthropological field trip."

Marin Students Explore Land Of The Yahi Indians

By DONNA HOROWITZ

They trod the same paths, slept on the same ground and swam in the same streams as the last Indians to inhabit their native habitat in Northern America while living as a tribe in their centuries-old way-of-life.

This group of some 30 College of Marin anthropology students spent four days this summer in Tehama County looking for signs of the now extinct Yahi natives of that area.

They were students enrolled in the anthropology classes of John McBeath and Peter Kassebaum. And the field trip was planned, not as a class requirement, but as a supplement to the classroom studies.

THE STUDENTS went to Tehama County well prepared for what they would discover there.

Part of that preparation was the reading of Theodra Kroeber's classic "Ishi in Two Worlds."

Ishi was the Yahi Indian believed by anthropologists to be the last survivor of his tribe of the white man's conquest.

In 1911, at age 50, emaciated and frightened, he had wandered down from the hills into Oroville in search of food. He took refuge in a slaughter house corral, and there he was discovered by dogs whose barking aroused the butchers. They called the local sheriff and asked him to take away "the wild man."

ISHI COULD speak no English, but the sheriff recognized him as an Indian. He placed him temporarily in his jail to protect him against the many curious people who flocked to Oroville to get a glimpse of the wild Indian.

The fearful Indian had expected brutal treatment from his white captors. But later he was to tell of kindly treatment by "a big chief" who put him in a fine house and fed him well.

Accounts of Ishi spread over the state and brought an anthropology professor from the University of California at Berkeley to see the red man.

THE PROFESSOR, after first determining Ishi's tribe, was able to speak to him a few Yahi words that he had compiled from earlier studies. He then took charge of Ishi, and transferred him to quarters at the university's Museum of Anthropology.

Ishi was to spend his remaining days there, demonstrating for museum audiences such Indian skills as fire-building, the making of arrow, harpoon and spear points, and the construction of pendants and necklaces from clam and abalone shells.

But Ishi was to live for only another five years, succumbing to tuberculosis.

IN TEHAMA County this summer the party of College of Marin students encountered an old "mountain man" who had dwelled in the hills for years, and who told the collegians he had spent 30 days with Ishi. He also claimed to have seen signs of Indian life in the area as late as the early 1920s, contradicting anthropological studies that had designated Ishi as the last tribesman.

Students questioned the "mountain man" sharply, and their opinions ranged from belief to skepticism.

Andrea Wray of Tiburon, who had studied "introductory prehistory," scanned the caves and cliffs of Tehama and said: "This makes it easy to imagine something of what it must have been like to have been an Indian here."

SHE TOLD her fellow students of reading a journal of a sheriff responsible for the killing of Indians. "Those Indian-killers were the same kind of men as those who killed four grizzly bears, just for the fun of killing," she declared.

On a trail, Mrs. Wray found an Indian tool chiseled from a slate rock. The students had learned not to remove artifacts unless they were found in a disturbed area such as a pathway, and to do no digging except in areas specifically designated for such work.

In what was once the land of the Yahis, Mrs. Wray recalled from her studies the extensive use these Indians had made of nature. They had ground up acorns and buckeye nuts, then soaked them in water to rid them of their tannic acid, before eating the nuts. And they tossed unleached nuts into streams, where the tannic acid drugged the fish and brought them to the surface, to be harpooned easily by the Indians.

STUDENT TOM Campbell of Terra Linda, who took directed research in anthropology this summer, described "the life of silence" led by the Yahis while they were being hunted by the white settlers.

The Yahis, said Campbell, took care to walk on rocks instead of soft ground so that they would leave no tell-tale trail of footprints. They scaled or descended cliffs by rope to reach streams or pearks. They killed their prey for food silently with share, harpoon and bow and arrow.

While the Indians were being hunted down, the white men drove away much of the game, continued Campbell. The Indians were left with little to eat and out of desperation shot grazing cattle, which further angered the settlers.

BEFORE THE white men began wiping out the Indians they lived a "pretty groovy life" according to student anthropologist Campbell. There were plenty of fruit-bearing trees and well-stocked streams for their sources of food. But, Campbell admitted, the Indians' way-of-life also required a great deal of hard work.

John Innocenti of Novato, a student who took an independent study class in anthropology this summer, was so excited by his first glimpse of Indian country that he planned a return to explore the area for several weeks.

"When I walk down a road I'm always looking for things," said Innocenti. He added that he has always been interested in the past.

McBEATH HAS made three other trips to Tehama County with his classes in the past several years. He believes the educational value of these trips is that "it lets students see the environment where the India.. once lived. Then they can really feel what they have studied."

He said students are able to see the very caves where the Yahis had smoked their venison and fish. Markings of the cave fires are still visible. Most of the numerous caves in the area however, were not explored by students because ropes would have been necessary to enter these steep cliff dwellings.

THE FOUR-DAY field trip of the College of Marin anthropology students was coming to an end, and camp was being broken when Tom Campbell took this photograph. The collegians had slept where the Yahi Indians once slept, had trod the same trails and had romped in the same streams. The had explored caves and found artifacts. And in so doing had added depth and understanding to their studies of the Indian tribe that ended with Ishi, the Yahi immortalized by Theodora Kroeber in "Ishi in Two Worlds."

THE INVITING ENTRANCE to the western regional headquarters of Commerce Clearing House Inc. atop San Rafael's Quail Hill combines Parallel-O-Bronze glass, Libbey-Owens-Ford Co. product, with exposed limestone aggregate. The bronze tone of the glass complements the warm-colored masonry.

Glass And Limestone On Top Of Quail Hill

"People-oriented" with equal emphasis upon beauty and utility is the way its designers, architects Marquis & Stoller, describe the western regional headquarters of Commerce Clearing House Inc., legal publishing firm.

Part of an 83-acre planned community on San Rafael's Quail Hill, the building combines reinforced concrete and exposed limestone aggregate with generous expanses of Parallel-O-Bronze, a specially-tinted glass that minimizes glare while permitting full enjoyment of the hilltop vista location. Lower air conditioning costs are another benefit.

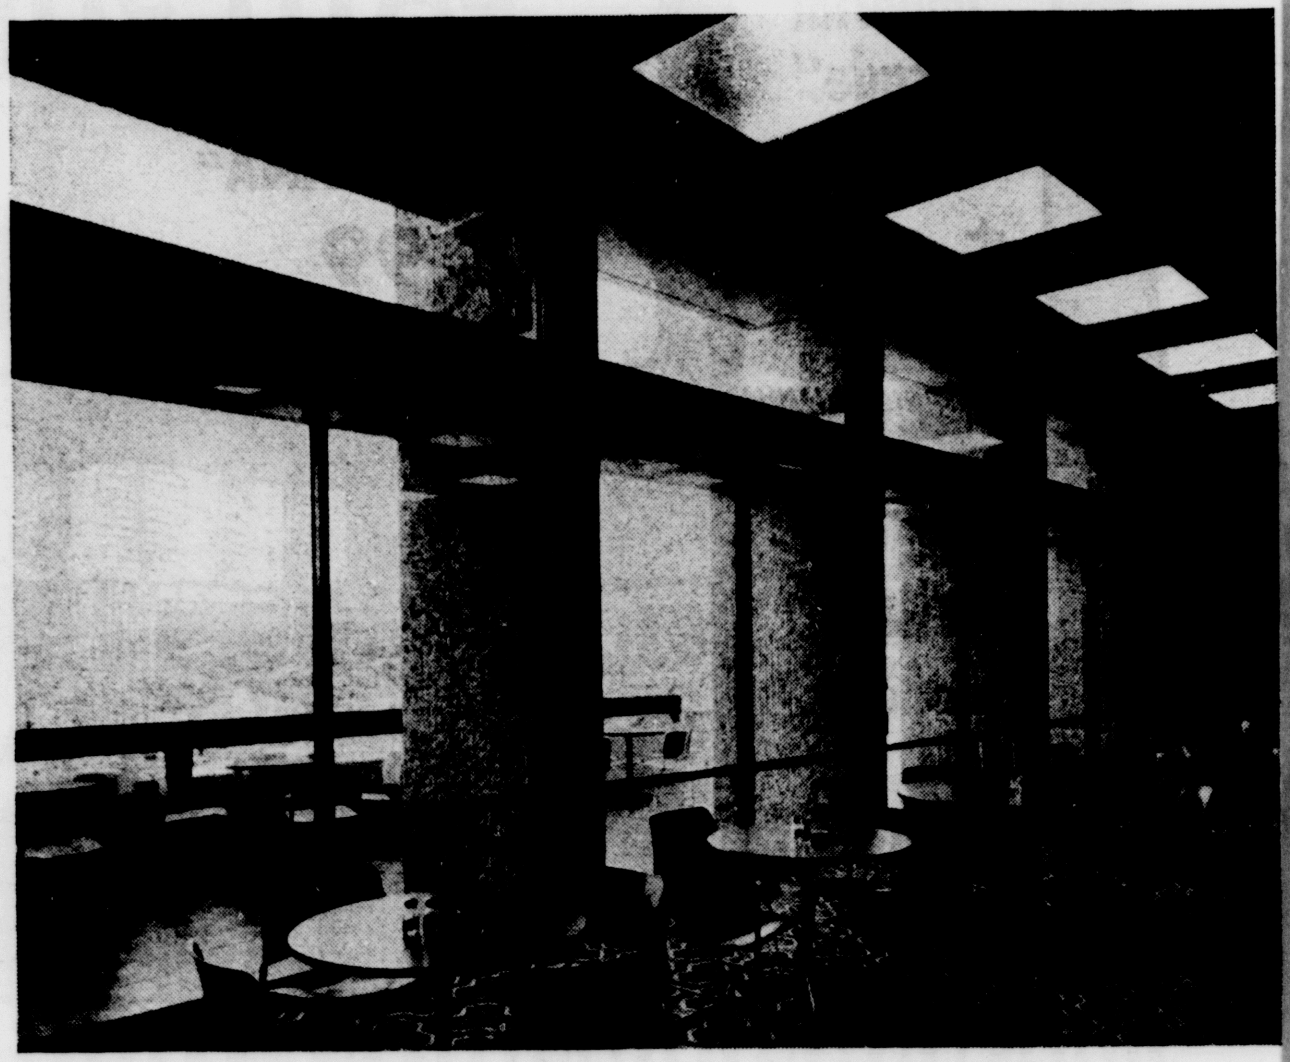
All major office space is on the top floor of tha three-story structure with exterior terraces that permit direct access to the outside. Offices utilize an open design with individual work areas separated by furniture, bookshelves and plantings, instead of walls.

Lower floors contain parking, shipping and specialized use space, plus a comfortable dining facility.

In the center of the structure is a landscaped courtyard with galleries, planters, a sculptured fountain, and a rolling skylight that can be opened.

Interior office and lounge areas are open to the light and view of the courtyard, and the court galleries provide all major internal circulation in the structure.

The Aberthaw Construction Co. was the general contractor for the building, and Webster Glass Co. the glazing contractor.



EMPLOYEES AND GUESTS of Commerce Clearing House can enjoy a spectacular hilltop view while lunching. The glazed, bronze-tone glass of the expansive window area minimize solar glare and brightness for those inside the dining room. Architects Marquis & Stoller designed the building.

A Car That's More Than Status Symbol

They call Volkswagens "Beetles" and American-made cars "Detroit Iron," but to Porsche aficionados a Porsche is a Porsche is a Porsche: no other name will do.

And all wrapped up in that word is affection, respect, even adulation for what their owners consider without equivocation is the best car ever made. Certainly, it is the only car for them.

Some treasure them as priceless jewels more to be admired than used; but for most owners the name of the game is "go" — to work, to play — to participate in the many activities arranged by the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America.

LAST MONTH members toured four wineries in the Sonoma and Napa valleys routed through lovely wooded areas where the undulating hills gradually climb to oak-crested peaks, eventually falling away to verdant pastures and lush vineyards that hug the gentle curves of fresh water creeks.

Five-band radios kept the group together and signaled directions and delays. Like a tinker toy parade, they passed in colorful revue: reds, yellows, oranges, avocado greens, blues, pristine whites, one subtle slate grey — and the bright sun only made them shine and sparkle more.

Besides being pleasurable outings, such tours are plotted to test driving skills. For this is really the sugar in the Porsche owners' cup of tea.

Take the Oakville Grade, for example. At first a beguiling, sylvan two-lane stretch of road, it soon gives way to sinuous, snake-like challenging curves — the kind most people avoid in favor of the high speed gloss of super highways. But for club members, this is where the action is. They call them hill climbs.

The truth is they love to drive; and that, they agree, is something most Americans don't like to do.

JACK BUNCE, for 24 years a safety engineer, an avid Porsche fan and one-time professional racer, says, "Today, people don't drive their cars. Instead, they climb in, roll up the windows, turn on the air conditioning and let the power brakes and power steering take over. It should be the other way around.

"Did you ever hear a person admit that he's a bad driver? Of course not. It's always the other guy's fault. Yet every year 55,000 people are killed in auto accidents and thousands of citations are handed out daily."

Bunce switched to Porsches because, he says, he wanted a car that is better than average, that is fun to drive and that will do the things most other cars won't do.

"You don't need to be an expert to drive a 912 or 194. They are quiet, normal cars with five speeds forward so you always have the right gear for what you want to do. My car has a tiny engine, only 80 horsepower, but with five speeds it'll do anything. And it'll pass anything except Corvettes, Stingrays or the Datsun 240 — and the latter has twice the horsepower.

"I DON'T RACE anymore. It's a hairy, tough business and my reflexes aren't as good as they used to be.

"In 1959, I was chairman of the Sports Car Club of America and was intensely oriented to time and distance rallies. Now I drive for fun and am past the stage of wondering what people think because I happen to drive a Porsche. I do it because it's a great car."

Gene Babow, president and founder of the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, doesn't believe that Porsches are status symbols.

"For one thing they aren't all that beautiful," he says, "and, besides, there are plenty of other cars as expensive or more expensive to buy. It's strictly functional and does what it's meant to do. So really it is a very practical car. That's the main reason people go for them."

"And a very fundamental difference is the fact that they are built first, then priced," Babow continues. "There is never any cost cutting. Generally cars are priced first and corners must be cut to stay within that figure.

"THEY ARE IN every sense of the word hand-crafted automobiles. Annual production averages from six to seven thousand, about half of Ford's weekly production. Half are shipped to the United States and half of these to California."

And if you want to look at the car from an investment and resale stand point, Babow says his 1966 model 912 cost $5,000 and is today worth $3,200 while a 1966 American luxury car bought for $7,000 would bring only about $1,500 today.

With undisguised pride, Babow points out that the total membership of the national Porsche club is over 7,000.

"No other foreign car has that kind of enthusiastic following," he claims.

"People who buy Porsches as a status symbol are soon disenchanted," asserts Jim Lamb, publicist and member of the board of directors. "Equating the two just doesn't exist within the club. We all know the prices. The fellow who pays $10,000 for one may find to his amazement that an older, less expensive model is held in higher esteem than the newest and flashiest model. What club members care about is how much a person is really involved with his car. How much does he know about it? Can he talk car lingo with other owners?

"With the club, the common bond is the car."

JIM AND MARILYN Palmieri frankly admit they bought their 911T (1970) six-cylinder Signal Orange Porsche after having worked their way through a number of other sports cars. In their opinion none come close to rivaling the Porsche for easy handling, power and comfort.

Marin Porsche Owners Enjoy Their Driving

chairman, adds. "We bought ours so that Marilyn could drive it. Most men don't let their wives drive their Porsche, much less give them one of their own."

"Which sort of makes us second class citizens, doesn't it?" Marilyn asks shyly.

Jim claims that Marilyn drives the car better than many men. Both are unanimous in their praise of club functions which give them varied opportunities to learn more about the car, because, Palmieri confesses, "To be honest with you, I really didn't know how to drive a Porsche until I started going to the technical sessions."

IT WAS BABOW, who has been "into cars since the 1950s" and a three time Porsche owner, who founded the club in 1967. He ran an advertisement inviting owners to a meeting. Fourteen came and formed the Tamalpais Porsche Club.

In 1969 the name was changed to the Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America.

Babow is current president and has served as the club's co-director since 1968. Membership is now up to 114.

Further information and applications are available by writing to Post Office Box 4234, San Rafael. Also serving with Babow are: Tamelyn Le Febure of Larkspur, vice-president; Creighton Norris of Kentfield, secretary, and James Haskell of San Rafael, treasurer. A monthly bulletin is edited by Sandy Kane, Novato.

A former bank auditor, Babow "on a hunch" opened a supply house dealing only with Volkswagen and Porsche parts. In two years "Parts & Parts" has doubled both in space and sales volume. He indulges in other hobbies such as photography, swimming and scuba diving, but cars are "his thing," and before discovering Porsches he drove Jaguars and Corvettes.

A MEMBER OF the Antique Car Club of America and Classic Car Club, Babow recently sold his prize-winning 1947 Lincoln Continental. Active in Bay Area concours events, Babow was master of ceremonies at the Concours D'Elegance at Pebble Beach Aug. 6, and will be an honorary judge at the concours at Silverado in September.

Currently, his involvement with the activities of the Porsche Club of America takes top priority. Club members participate in social events, tours, rallies, meets, shows, technical and driving sessions. The latter two are designed to teach owners more about their cars. Some are conducted in a classroom atmosphere with experts speaking on such topics as tires, sparkplugs, electrical systems and brakes.

At the Cotati race track, behind-the-wheel sessions patterned on difficult driving situations teach members the safest way to handle their cars.

TO KEEP IN touch with the national club, a zone representative is appointed by the national president. Former club president Hank Malter, a San Francisco business executive and San Rafael resident, represents the Redwood Region, one of 77 regions in the country. It falls into the Zone 7 slot and is bounded by Fresno to the Oregon border, east to Nevada and west to Hawaii.

The San Francisco-based Golden Gate Region is the largest in the country with 500 members; the Redwood unit is rated average size.

Malter gives some 15 hours a month and travels over 3,000 miles a year to conduct club business. He defines his role as that of a liaison officer between the regions and the national board and he helps to establish and maintain goodwill between Porsche dealers and distributors who contribute prizes and/or monetary support to special events.

Because he believes that all regions within a zone should work together, Malter spearheaded a drive for Zone 7 to sponsor the club's annual Porsche parade. Next year the four-day event will be held at Pebble Beach.

Closer at hand is the club's traditional participation in the 8th Annual Town and Country Village Auto Show, Mill Valley, Sunday, Aug. 27, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission price is $1 with children under 12 free.

CO-SPONSORED with the Antique Car Club of America, the show, Malter says, is an all-club-member activity that is "a lot of fun but also a lot of hard work." He attributes the club's association with the show since 1968 to Gene Babow who will be the 1972 master of ceremonies.

"Not many regions are engaged in fund-raising activities of this kind. We are proud of the show and happy that it benefits a worthy cause," he says.

For the fourth consecutive year proceeds will aid the Marin Chapter, Northern California District, of the National Kidney Foundation. Fund-raising chairman Charles Alvarez reports that proceeds from past shows have helped the 80-member chapter start a school screening program for the early detection of kidney disease.

A just completed pilot program screened children in the

He is competitions director for Redwood Region, Porsche Club of America, and schedules hill climbs, rallies, autocrosses and similar events for the group. MORE THAN 130 entries are expected for the Aug. 27 show at Strawberry Point, according to James Webb, show director and manager of Town and Country Village. The show's nine classes of stock autos (that is, cars not customized or hot-rodded) include Horseless Carriage 1900-22; Antique 1923-34; Vintage 1935-48; Classic 1925-48; Post-war Sedan 1948-60; Super Sport and Sport 1930s-72; and two Porsche classes.

The non-stock classes are Hot Rod and Custom; Classic Hot Rod; Competition Class; Customized Class, and special classes of five or more of any one type.

Of unusual interest for showgoers will be the 1955 Spyder 550 owned by Franklin Rudolph, manager of the Southern Marin business office of Pacific Telephone and Telegraph and a San Rafael resident. Rudolph bought the car in 1967 and was soon launched on a repair project that led to total dismemberment.

It took him two years of conscientious work to put it together again. And he didn't lose a part. Small pieces went into jars with identifying notes; bigger parts were stored in cartons that completely filled a spare bedroom.

BUILT AS A racing car, it weighs 1,300 pounds and was one of the first Porsche racing cars built in any quantity (110). Its colorful past reveals that it was owned and raced by the illustrious Count Carel Godin de Beaufort, scion of an aristocratic Dutch family.

The Spyder has the engine between the rear wheels and the driver, which, according to Rudolph, makes for better weight distribution and consequently easier handling.

Although this idea of engine placement was not a new concept, Porsche was the first to make a series of cars using this design. It proved to be very acceptable and other manufacturers have been doing it since 1960.

Lacking the authentic 137 horsepower engine, the car doesn't qualify as a show entry. Until one turns up, Rudolph installed a 110-hp, four-cylinder, 1,700 cc push-rod engine.

Considered one of the fastest cars in the world when it was built, it is in the small 1,500 cubic centimeter engine class and frequently beats cars in larger classes.

RUDOLPH currently has the car for sale because he wants a different model. He claims it is impossible to calculate how much time and money he's invested in it. "But when you have a hobby and really get into it you don't stop to weigh the cost. When I sell it, I'll probably come out even — not counting time. In the meantime, I learned a lot and enjoyed doing the work."

Jim Lamb, who will judge the Open Sports Car Class, wi show for the first time his 1959 356A 1600N Miessean blue coupe.

It's a car that doesn't rest on a pedestal. Lamb says, "I didn't restore the car just to look at it, but preserved it so we could use it." The last of the basic 356 design series and one of a total of 6,000 produced in 1958 with various body styles, it has a 70 horsepower, four cylinder engine.

Although he does his own repair work and admits that rebuilding four-cylinder engines is an avocation, Lamb notes that a 2,400 mile warranty check on an eight-cylinder car costs him $70 and the same work on his Porsche would have been half that because of the four-cylinder engine.

Lamb sold his two-year-old Camaro for $1,800 to buy the then nine-year-old Porsche for $1,900. It had 52,000 miles on it and he drove it for another 20,000 before a piston went out. Filed away are the untotaled repair bills because, "the sum would scare me to death."

BETTY LAMB shares her husband's enthusiasm. An active participant in club events, she attends "tech" sessions and it is she who most frequently uses the car for commuting. She likes the car's "sculptured look" but Lamb was Porsche-persuaded because of the mechanical design and function of the car.

"Other cars bore me," he says. "I'm leery of them. I never feel in control. But driving the Porsche is like an extension of myself. You are one with the machine. It responds to every input. You can feel the road through it."

He laughs. "Others not so enthused say you can feel a grain of sand. Still, Porsche drivers are among the best and most courteous drivers on the road."

It's like the Porsche manual says: "Judging by the car you've chosen one must certainly conclude that you are a motorist of a special caste. Quite likely, you are no freshman when it comes to automobiles."

Shannon Is Still The Gateway City For Visitors To Ireland

The Travel Pages

By ALBERT HUGHES

Shannon has long been the Atlantic aerial gateway to the Republic of Ireland — and it now appears as though it will stay that way.

This historic pattern was going to be disturbed by the Republic's good and longtime friend, the United States. The United States wanted, in fact, demanded, the right for all of its three carriers, Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines, with passenger and mail flights, and Seaboard and Western Airlines, an air freight line, to serve Dublin with the option of bypassing Shannon.

The United States even laid down an ultimatum to the Irish that if it did not get rights to Dublin it would withdraw the rights of Irish International, Irish overseas carrier, to land in New York, its principal market. The move is part of a "hard look" which the United States is taking at all of its bilateral air agreements.

BILATERALS ARE pacts by which the various governments lay down the routes, destinations, and stops, sometimes even the number of flights, between the airlines of the covenanting nations.

The United States has argued that the Irish airline serves New York, Boston, and Chicago, the principal Irish markets, and, in return, its airlines serve only Shannon. The Irish countered with the argument that its carrier has no onward rights in the United States from its present terminals there, but that the Republic has granted onward rights from Shannon to Great Britain and Europe to all three U.S. airlines.

The American move probably caused resentment in the Republic which could only be compared with the Ulster crisis. But cooler heads have prevailed, and a compromise has been reached. It now is reported in an Irish newspaper that the Republic will grant Dublin rights to one American carrier (possibly Pan American, which applied for the right), but that all three carriers will continue to stop at Shannon.

FOR THE IRISH, bypassing Shannon is virtually unthinkable. Since the mid-1930s the Shannon area has seen the pioneering of transatlantic air service, first by flying boats. When Shannon Airport was completed, piston-powered aircraft, and eventually the jets, began to come into Shannon.

When the jets began to have the non-stop range to overfly Shannon, the Republic improved its transatlantic air service and set about plans to enhance Shannon's viability on overseas air routes. The result has been the construction of a major airport facility with an international duty-free shop, development of tour and vacation facilities, and an industrial estate providing Irish jobs and considerable export airfreight tonnage.

Upsetting the traffic pattern for Shannon would have altered the delicate traffic and economic balance of the airport complex. Shannon is to a large extend dependent on its air commerce.

LIMERICK, THE nearest city to Shannon, is 15 miles away, but the airport authority has felt it necessary to build Shannon Towne within the airport complex. It accommodates more than 4,000 of the 7,000-plus workers in houses and flats, has churches, schools, shops, community halls, playing fields, tennis courts, a golf course, youth club and restaurant.

Shannon Towne is believed to be the first such community nurtured by an airport.

It is estimated that the Republic, through the Shannon agencies, has spent the equivalent of $23 per capita on the Shannon complex, based on the present Irish population of nearly three million. An unofficial source estimated that something in the order of more than 250 million dollars has been spent over the years to develop Shannon.

LIKE MOST major airports, Shannon has been kept level with the latest terminal facilities. The new wing accommodates the latest wide-bodied jets, including Irish International's 747s and those of other carriers landing there, and the coming long-range versions of the Douglas DC-10, the Lockheed TriStar (L-1011) and the European Airbus.

The duty-free store, which was the first ever established and which now is a feature of most major world airports, occupies three times the space in the new wing than it held in the older section. It is an enormously successful enterprise and deals with more than one million transit and terminal passengers annually. The store also does a considerable mail-order business.

Shannon store clerks are not only cheerful and helpful but they also are as familiar with the American dollar as they are their own currency.

SHANNON STORE purchases, which include Irish silver, knit goods, textiles, lace, pottery, glass, jewelry, wood carvings, as well as the standard European offerings, are not weighed with the passenger's baggage, an advantage for tourists traveling light.

The Shannon industrial estate also is a big factor in providing jobs for the Irish and the nation's export trade. The United States and the Republic of Ireland match each other here in the number of companies providing manufacturing or service and warehousing facilities. They provide more than 4,000 jobs, and close to 45 per cent of the exports are destined for the United States, mostly by air freight.

The airport complex is, of course, strategically located with respect to the Republic's major tourist area — Galway and Connemara, the Killarney lakes, Tralee, Waterford, Cork, and nearby Blarney Castle. There are tours to all these areas, many of them organized by American travel agencies. Some of them go to Dublin and back to Shannon, or the reverse, or continue on to Great Britain and Europe.

ONE OF THE most popular tours (because it can be done on a short stopover) is the castle tour.

Transatlantic air passengers here enjoy the novelty of being whisked off a modern jet and within hours being transported back several centuries at nearby Bunratty Castle, eating medieval food and listening to entertainment of the period. (Although potatoes are an Irish meal staple, there are none served at these medieval banquets since the period is well before Sir Walter Raleigh introduced the potato into Ireland from the New World.)

The banquets, it goes without saying, are enormously popular, involved considerable castle restorations, and research and organization for medieval meals and entertainment. Initiated by the Irish, this entertainment now is being imitated in Great Britain and the Continent.

TO INDUCE longer stays in the Shannon region, the airport development authority evolved the rent-a-cottage scheme.

At strategic places in the area, chosen for their scenic value and well away from large communities, groups of thatched cottages were built.

Friendly Irish People, Green Land Charm Guests

Modern inside, they provide an opportunity for their tenants to enjoy Irish living and partaking of Irish food shopping, marketing, and some of their social events. Rentals are popular, and the occupancy is high.

Dublin, on the other hand, is Ireland's face to Europe. Here its air company competes with British and European carriers with whom the Republic has air agreements. Its sea services from Britain come into Dun Laoghaire, a small port south of the city, and passengers reach Dublin by bus or train.

Dublin has a progressive feeling marked by many new buildings, but its facade is 18th Century. The city is regarded as an excellent example of that period.

DUBLIN IS a small city by international standards, and is eminently walkable. It stretches between Parnell Square and Stephen's Green in a north-south direction and between Dublin Bay and Phoenix Park in an east-west direction. Most points of interest lie within these boundaries.

Coach tours operate in the summer season from the major bus terminal of CIE, the national transportation organization. They range from short sightseeing trips of three hours to scenic all-day and evening tours to such popular spots as Powerscourt, Glendalough, Vale of Avoca, Liffey Valley, Boyne Valley and Shannon area, among others.

Dublin's buildings are evocative and marked in many cases with Ireland's struggle for independence. Among these are Dublin Castle, Old Parliament House, Custom House, Four Courts, Kilmainham Jail, Arbour Hill, and the General Post Office.

WORTH A VISIT also are the Joyce Museum, the National Gallery, Municipal Art Gallery, Trinity College, and the Book of Kells, Phoenix Park, the Botanic Gardens and St. Stephen's Green.

The Republic has hotels of the modern continental type in Dublin, Limerick, and Cork. Dublin has very comfortable, first-class hotels such as the Shelbourne, Gresham, Royal Hibernian, Jury's and Russell's. The meals they serve are excellent. Proof of this is that the locals patronize these hotel restaurants.

The climate is equable, even in the winter. If it snows, the precipitation is usually gone by the end of the day. Heavier wear may be needed in the winter season more because of the chill moist winds which sweep in from the Irish Sea. They're colder than any snowfall!

For the independently-minded tourist, the Republic's transportation company offers a ticket, somewhat like the Eurailpass, called the Rambler, which provides train travel at will over a certain period. Another Rambler provides both rail and bus travel.

DUBLIN IS AN ideal city for shopping, and one can do well in the big stores like Arnott's and Switzers. The smaller good shops are located along Grafton and side streets.

If in any doubt as to what to buy, go to the special display room of the Irish Tourist Board which has just about everything in the way of good Irish products that can be imagined. All of the goods here have been juried by a panel of experts, so there is excellent quality merchandise.

Nothing is sold at the tourist-board display, but the attendants can give you the names of the shops where any of the items are sold.

Best buys are Irish glass, tweeds, antiques, silver, lace, jewelry, pottery, linen, knitted wear — especially Aran sweaters. If unable to shop in Dublin or elsewhere, the traveler's last resort, and a very good one, is Shannon's duty-free shop. It also carries all the European standards such as cameras, perfumes, watches, suits, frocks, fabrics, as well as the Irish specials. You can even mail out purchases.

THE CUSTOMARY tip in the Republic of Ireland is 10 per cent of the bill — sometimes the tip is added on hotel and restaurant bills (usually so stated). Hotel, train porters, and taxi drivers also are tipped.

The Irish people are cheerful and helpful, and they will invariably go out of their way to give advice and directions. On the other hand, never patronize them, and never, on any account, discuss politics or religion — even if they provide the opening.

Observe these, and the Irish people and their green land will charm the heart out of you — they never fail.

HOW TO AVOID 'MONTEZUMA'S REVENGE'

"Montezuma's Revenge" is its most famous name.

Misery is its most common symptom. It's traveler's diarrhea, the curse of those who have set sail for exotic places since the time of Alexander's conquests.

Traveler's diarrhea occurs throughout the world, according to the American Automobile Assn., but it is most common in areas where personal hygiene and sanitation are below the standards the traveler finds at home.

In addition to the syndrome which gives it its name, the ailment is often accompanied by vomiting, abdominal cramps, chills and low-grade fever. In most travelers the symptoms disappear in one to three days.

Public health service officials aren't quite sure what causes the ailment. Although unaccustomed or exotic foods often have been blamed, doctors tend to discount their effect.

AAA passes along these tips from the U.S. Public Health Service on how to prevent the onslaught of traveler's diarrhea:

Eat only what can be peeled or has been cooked.

Drink only boiled or bottled water, beverages that have been boiled, bottled carbonated soft drinks, beer and wine.

Tap water uncomfortably hot to the touch can be used for brushing teeth and for drinking after cooling.

Finally, if the condition persists, consult a physician.

GET LOST IN Norway, and chances are a pretty, perky "tourist pilot" will zip over on a motorscooter and lead you back onto the right track. You Can't Miss The Sights If You Travel Norway By Auto

Driving is still one of life's pleasures in Norway, where the motorist's question, "How far is it to the scenic spots?" seems out of place, because, as the Norwegians politely point out, you're there all the time.

Norway's roads are themselves among the country's leading scenic attractions, and their picturesque routes along fjords, across mountains and past glaciers and waterfalls introduce breathtaking sights at every turn. Hairpin bends on mountain routes offer extra thrills, but roads are well-kept and safe, and good hotels are always near-by.

The new "Auto Hotel" vouchers provide an ideal system for motorists, and these vouchers can be bought in USA before departure.

The fabulous terrain and frequent fjord crossings by ferry make travel times deceptive to the motorist planning his trip. Bergen and Oslo, for example, are linked by express trains in 8 hours, and planes make it in one. But the most interesting and direct auto route is 310 miles, a day's drive in America, but you'll need three days for it in Norway, where 100 to 150 miles a day is considered a comfortable maximum.

This is exactly the reason why any motoring trip of Scandinavia should start preferably in Bergen or Stavanger, both being famous gateways in Norway's Fjord Country.

Information about motoring vacations in Norway — including maps, folders and route descriptions — is available from Scandinavian National Tourist Offices, 505 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017 or 3600 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, 90010.

Bistro Hopping On The Riviera

A host of quiet but genuine gastronomic experiences bask on the Riviera.

Bistros without fanfare line the byways between Saint-Troupez and Menton. The little village of Chateauneuf-de-Contes, in the hills behind Nice, is where one finds the Auberge Antoine. Perfectionist chef Antoine is likely to be snipping herbs from his garden for the succulent lamb.

Be prepared for a two or three hour lunch, well worth the time.

AT THE ENTRY to Nice's Grand Corniche stands La Pignata d'Or, a cafe-tabac with a cordon bleu surprise in its tiny dining room. Specialties range from home-made "ravioli aux cepes," to rabbit in port wine.

Once inside, the gourmet understands why advance reservations are required.

Well hidden among the rocks is La Pinede, at the tip of Cap-d'Ail, awash by the Mediterranean. Here, a simple but delicious meal, under the stars and the pines, caps a visit to this uncrowded section of the coast.

FOR TRAVELERS to whom atmosphere is second to cuisine, unpretentious Aristide is a must-stop in Theoule on the Route Nationale. Bouillabaisse, by special order, and flawless "loup" (white fish) demonstrate Aristide's very special talents with fish.

Antibes boasts a celebrated fish market and close by is the Restaurant l'Oursin, equally famed for the freshness and variety of its fish and fruits de mer. In nearby Biot, Les Terraillers offers hearty cuisine in a vaulted 16th century decor.

At these and many other bistros tucked in along the coast, memorable meals can be had at modest prices.

TV And The Big Fight

GARDEN OF INNOCENTS by Art Fisher and Neal Marshall with Charles Einstein; Dutton, 185 pages, $5.95.

By DON KEOWN

A growing complaint among some sports fans is that television is changing their favorite games from athletic competition into show business.

Such critics overlook the fact that there has always been a strong "show biz" element to big-time sports. There is no more impressive piece of pageantry than the opening and closing ceremonies of an Olympic Games. A John L. Sullivan, Pancho Gonzales or a Dizzy Dean has always been part-actor along with being all-athlete. Ice hockey has added to its excitement with fistfights, staged and otherwise. College football's halftime festivities have been copied by the professionals.

But there is no doubt that the television cameras have had a marked — sometimes almost a controlling — influence upon major sports. Time-outs are scheduled to fit the needs of commercials. Rules are changed or bent to speed up the action for the armchair viewer who substitutes rapidity of thrills for the sense of involvement of the fan upon the scene. Uniforms are chosen for their appeal on television. Egotists such as Howard Cosell and Joe Garagiola strive from the sidelines to overshadow the actual participants in the combat.

"Garden of Innocents" is an eye-opening account of just how topheavy some sports promotions have become, with the complicated and highly technical arrangements for television seeming, at times, to make the event itself almost secondary.

It is the story of the televising from New York's Madison Square Garden on March 8, 1971, of the world heavyweight championship fight between Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali.

Telling the story are Art Fisher, director, and Neal Marshall, his co-producer of the television show. They have the help of Marin's Charles Einstein, whose expert and practiced sportswriting hand is very much in evidence.

The Frazier-Ali bout — available to USA and Canadian TV audiences on closed circuit only in theaters and halls at a cost of $16,300,000, but viewed less expensively in 48 other countries for a total audience of 300 millions — drew the biggest single video audience of all-time.

To put on this show, promoter Jerry Perenchio, a talent agency chief by profession, backed by multimillionaire sportsman Jack Kent Cooke, chose in Fisher and Marshall two young Hollywood producers with experience and success in the variety show field but no previous contact with televising sports.

This very lack of a prior background enabled Fisher and Marshall to take some fresh and original approaches to their assignment — and to cause consternation among traditionalists who saw in them a greater than usual TV threat to the "purity" of sports.

"Garden of Innocents" tells how Fisher and Marshall rode over some of that opposition, and improvised and compromised to deal with the rest. But to fully enjoy the book, certain requisites are required of the reader.

He must have a considerable curiosity concerning the behind-the-scenes activities of television sports; otherwise Fisher and Marshall will be telling him a great deal more than he wants or needs to know about their profession. He must adjust, too, to a rather irritating narrative technique in which Fisher and Marshall take turns at the commentary. A straightforward narration by silent partner Einstein, using Fisher, Marshall and others as his sources, would have made more comfortable reading.

The adjustment is not made any easier by the personalities of Fisher and Marshall who seem to be playing self-consciously their roles of the brash, mod young clever nonconformists, tweaking the noses of the establishment.

And finally to appreciate the book one must conclude — and this is not easy for some of us — that boxing, or "the sour science" as a sportswriting colleague back in Wichita, Kans., used to call it, is really worth all this attention and effort, and the recording and reading of it. A contest between two men bent on pounding each other insensible is hardly the kind of thing that reflects man's finest instincts.

But if you have that curiosity, if you adjust to the back-and-forth ping-pong narration, if you swallow the Fisher and Marshall personalities, if you can regard boxing with tolerance or even enthusiasm, then it is all there in "Garden of Innocents."

This "all" includes the battle of wits and wills between the Madison Square Garden hierarchy, determined to retain at least some semblance of control over the promotion, and the TV forces; the special problems of lighting, color, timing, sound and personalities that were involved in setting up the coverage; the characters who played their parts, including celebrities such as Burt Lancaster and Frank Sinatra and nonentities such as the bookie Henry VI, and even occasionally Joe Frazier and Muhammad Ali themselves.

Old-style sports fans will be pleased that the "new" or "show biz" wave didn't always emerge victorious in the many confrontations, such as when the Black Muslim leadership wisely spiked a particularly silly publicity plan for Ali to announce his candidacy for U.S. President — for 1976.

Still, the book does demonstrate that Marshall and Fisher went about their jobs with a considerable amount of originality and flair. Tinged with the show business syndrome though their thinking was — there was even a rehearsal with stand-ins for the fighters — it was certainly different. And their efforts met with a more favorable public reception than most such endeavors, although a considerable amount of credit for this must go to Frazier and Ali and the viciousness of their assaults upon one another.

Of course, there were those who bemoaned the absence of free television access to the fight — not for themselves, of course, but for "the poor black 15-year-old who can't afford to buy a ticket to the theater for the show."

Now isn't that exactly what our poor black teen-agers need most? Not jobs? Not educational opportunities? Not decent homes? But a free seat from which to watch two other black men brutalize one another, for the enjoyment of Burt Lancaster, Frank Sinatra and you and me. Well, hurray for Joe and Ali for making us pay dearly for our jollies!

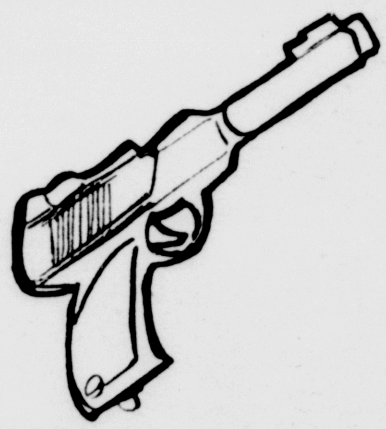
THE RECKONING by Hugh Atkinson; McKay, 191 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.



"The Reckoning" by much-traveled Hugh Atkinson was first published in the early 1960s, but is now receiving its first American exposure. It is a powerful, off-beat crime novel set in Australia's desolate Blue Mountains.

Into this forbidden terrain goes a posse that must travel on foot in pursuit of an immigrant suspected of murdering a farm woman. But Atkinson is not keenly interested in the hunted man, and pays him scant attention. What he is interested in is the effect of the chase upon the hunters — the embittered policeman, the wealthy landowner, the scheming salesman, the newspaper reporter, the bully, the town simpleton, and all the others who find themselves caught up in something quite unlike anything else they have ever experienced.

Atkinson is strong on description as well as characterization, and the sustained tension that he demands of his readers seems at times almost unbearable. A cheerless, not optimistic story, and yet one that in a surprising way accords man, for all his weaknesses, a certain saving dignity.

This is a delightfully nostalgic novel.

Aaron, age 12, tells us what it's like to be a boy in St. Louis in the summer of 1933.

Though he wins the Achievement Award at Admiral George Dewey School and sees himself as "King of the Hill," Aaron has problems: an out-of-work father, a tubercular mother, and a constantly nagging hunger.

But Aaron is lucky. He has Lester, a 15-year-old scrounger and expert con man who miraculously produces food, new shoes and part-time jobs.

Aaron also has Skippy, a bashful canary who not only sings but also fathers saleable baby birds.

Best of all, Aaron has imagination. He's not always "some cheesy kid living in a ratty hotel room with only one pair of pants and a pair of busted Keds."

When life is full of "mud slides" he takes refuge in his dreams. Like D'Artagnan, he says "Mon Dieu" and whips out his sword. Or like Pepper Martin, he "slides into second on his belly." Or he becomes Captain Nemo, Dizzy Dean, or sees himself on the Major Bowes Amateur Hour.

Aaron also has his own great moments. He's not strong enough to be a success as a caddy at the St. Louis Country Club — but he gets to see Babe Didricksen play. And he acquires a lifetime hero when he watches Charles A. Lindberg wing The Spirit of St. Louis under the Eads Bridge.

Aaron is, in short, totally believable as he copes with fate in the terrible summer heat of St. Louis. Author Hotchner grew up in St. Louis — he and Aaron must share the same skin — and the steamy Border city is all here: Forest Park, Delmar, Kingshighway, Bushmeyer's Cafeteria, even the Jefferson Hotel and Barnes Hospital Free Clinic.

The plot is pure melodrama. Will Aaron and his parents be locked out of their hotel room, and cut off from their slim possessions, for non-payment of rent?

Skippy, the lusty canary, with a bit of help from Mr. Roosevelt and the WPA, saves them. But only because Aaron, who is left completely alone by his sick mother and his neglectful, defeated father, is strong, canny, determined and wise beyond his years.

A. E. Hotchner is best known for his controverisal memoir, "Papa Hemingway." Aaron, the "King of the Hill," is better and, like Oliver Twist, he's also history.

To understand why Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected President four times in succession, or why your parents (or grandparents) get that thin line around their mouths when they mention the Depression — or why they don't talk about it at all — read Aaron's story.

The First Full Chronicle Of An Ecological Crime

BLACK TIDE by Robert Easton; Delacorte Press, 336 pages, $10. Reviewed by James Meldrum.

Robert Easton has written, in the manner of the suspense novel, a book that examines in minute detail the events leading to the disastrous oil spill that polluted the Santa Barbara Channel in January 1969 "Black Tide" is a thoroughly documented piece of reporting that gives us, as Ross Macdonald the well-known author and conservationist says in the introduction, "the first full account of an ecological crime . . ."

You may feel anger and dismay when you read this account of how political and business groups failed to heed repeated warnings. They made hypocritical and false statements in order to protect their respective huge financial interests.

The cast of characters in Black Tide reads like a "Who's Who" of American government, and although many prominent officials aligned themselves with conservationist groups, there were also many well-known high echelon politicians who sided with the huge oil companies.

Citizen groups such as GOO (Get Oil Out) fought a long hard battle in their efforts to dispel public and industrial apathy. They appealed with some success to the national media for help. One Life Magazine reporter who was a veteran of many war scenes, described the agonies of dead and dying oil-soaked seals this way: "It was the most sickening sight I have ever witnessed."

Needless to say Life was penalized for its outspoken criticism of the oil interests. Millions of dollars in advertising fees were withheld from the magazine.

The author gives many other examples of political and financial pressures that were brought to bear on those who might be tempted to speak out against the very real dangers in off-shore oil drilling.

Robert Easton has chronicled an awesome series of events and ineptitudes. He will have helped insure, we would hope, that other Black Tides will never again be allowed to occur.

Vermont Report

Stephen and Janet Greene, the imaginative Brattleboro, Vt., publishers, report in their "occasional newsletter" that their small house now has "perhaps 130 books in print, and we are adding around 30 new ones each year," and that "The Stephen Greene Press doubled its sales in the first quarter of 1972 to the same period in 1971."

The Charm Of A Cheetah And Her Brood Of Cubs

PIPPA'S CHALLENGE by Joy Adamson; Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 177 pages, $9.50. Reviewed by Karen Hunter.

Joy Adamson, author of "Born Free" and six other books on the people and animals of Africa, has written yet another heartwarming work. "Pippa's Challenge" is a sequel to her "The Spotted Sphinx" which described her relationship with a cheetah named Pippa.

The new book starts with the birth of Pippa's fourth litter of cubs. The book is concerned mainly with the mating of cheetahs under natural conditions in the wild in an effort to save this endangered species from extinction. The animals live naturally in the wilds — yet are helped with food and vitamins supplied by Joy Adamson.

The love she feels for these magnificent animals is so great it brings a lump to the throat. To Joy Adamson, happiness is lying under a bush with her head resting against the soft fur of a purring cheetah.

It is easy to fall in love with Pippa and her cubs, and to envy the author her relationship of trust with a wild cheetah even as you admire her for her dedication of her life to the cause of conservation of African wildlife.

The book also contains beautiful color and black and white photographs of Pippa and her cubs in their day-to-day activities. This book should be read and enjoyed by all in the family — then left out in plain sight where guests can skim its pages and share your enjoyment.

Reviews Of New Reading

PETER GOWLAND used an Instamatic underwater camera and shot into the sun to obtain this photograph of the subject leaping out of the water as the wave strikes. The star effect is from the water on the lens of the camera. And the photo is from "Gowland's Guide to Glamour Photography," $6.95, published by Crown Publishers. While the book is filled with photo studies of some of America's most beautiful young models, nude and near-nude, the book is not a pin-up collection, but rather a serious text by one of the country's most famous photographers of glamorous women, with each picture accompanied by Gowland's discussion of the equipment and technique used. "The successful glamour photographer must be able to create exciting, provocative pictures and still maintain technical quality," Gowland begins. And then proceeds to show how he does just that.

NEW BOOKS FOR JUNIOR READERS

Adults, at best, are sporadic environmentalists, practicing the "theology" of ecology periodically, when it comes to mind and when it doesn't interfere with their own comfort and convenience.

Is there any hope for making better, more consistent adherents to conservation of our children?

Frances L. Behnke, wife of a science editor and journalist and herself a science teacher and writer, gives it a good try in her "The Changing World of Living Things" (Holt, Rinehart, $5.95), a book that kicks off a series of ecological works for which other volumes are already under way, and for which she will ba the editor.

Dr. Behnke begins by analyzing the natural balance that makes possible Nature's grand scheme, then takes up one by one the various ways in which man has interfered with that balance — by extinction of species, by pollution of air and water, by noise, by over population.

"There is no generation gap when learning how all living things are affected by and depend upon the environment," she writes. One hopes her optimism is justified. The book seems a reasoned presentation of the argument for a more reverent treatment of our environment, and appears to be effectively ptiched at the intended audience — 10-year-olds and older. In fact, it wouldn't hurt at all if a few parents borrow Junior's copy and read the book as well. More strident warnings haven't been notably successful. Perhaps a child-level thesis will be more readily understood and appreciated.

SOME OTHER new books for the juniors:

"Corvus the Crow" (Four Winds, $5.50) is by the distinguished nature writer Franklin Russell who won acclaim for his earlier "Watchers at the Pond," and who now deserves further praise for this newest work. He tells the absorbing story of a year in the life of a crow residing in the woods near a pond, his movements restricted by a crippling injury and forced to adjust to a life without the usual seasonal migrations of his kind. Russell's writing crackles with the excitement of the out-of-doors, reflects fully the author's special understanding and sensitivity to wildlife, and presents the ecology message in a manner certain to attain maximum impact. Richard Cuffari has contributed some quite beautiful black and white nature sketches. For 10 through 13-year-olds.

TALL TALES are an integral part of the lore of the Old West. And, well-told, an unending source of delight for listeneres. Texas-born, Arizona-reared William D. Hayes, author of a number of earlier books for juveniles, proves himself adept at spinning such yarns in a tome intriguing entitled "How the True Facts Started in Simpsonville and Other Tall Tales of the West" (Atheneum, $4.50). Hayes writes with wry, understated humor in the breezy manner of the Western storyteller. Yungsters should enjoy wholeheartedly such episodes as "How Matt Carney Retired and Raised Chickens" and "How the Sneaky Water-Stealer Set the Cattlemen and the Sheepmen Against Each Other," as well as the title tale.

For 12-year-olds and up, suggests the dustjacket for "A Screaming Whisper" (Holt, Rinehart, $4.95). But this collection of poetry by Vanessa Howard, 17 and black, with photos by J. Pinderhughes is certainly not for every 12-year-old. It's potent stuff. Sample: "He lay in the alley dead, cold/ his helmet lay beside him/ his gun in his hand still hot from firing/ his badge not so shiny now . . ." And: "Agnew rushes into the waiting room/ where ghetto dwellers have been waiting all their lives/ while Nixon lies D.O.A./ from an overdose of poverty and taxation . . . " There are less angry poems, as well, and Miss Howard's early-blooming talent is unquestionable. But despite the poet's tender age, this is, with rare exceptions, for an older reader than the impressionable pre and early teens.

Few figures in history are more colorful than the heroic, often violent, always adventuresome Norsemen. Samuel Carter III attempts to bring them to life for young readers in his "Vikings Bold: Their Voyages and Adventures" (Crowell, $4.50). Artist Steele Savage gets the project off to a good start with a vivid depiction on the book's dustjacket of a landing by these marauders from the sea. Carter and illustrator Ted Burwell, however, are not quite so successful in capturing the fire of these awesome Scandinavians, although the latter, when given a full page on which to work, does portray them with considerable power. Carter's text tends to plod in as far as one can plod when dealing with such unplodding subjects. It's what some youngsters regard as school textbook prose. But informative enough.

It is but one of 188 such rich-looking (but not too fattening) dishes described in the 96-page hardcover book designed and illustrated with Better Homes' usual good taste. It's for those with weight problems who have concluded they are going to have to live with, and occasionally indulge, a sweettooth.

The Fragrance Of Good Things In Baking Oven

COOKIES FROM MANY LANDS by Josephine Perry; Dover, 157 pages, $1.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This is an unabridged republication in the familiar quality softcover format of Dover Publications of a book originally published in 1940 as "Around the World Making Cookies." It remains after three decades still one of the most useful and most tempting cookbooks of its kind.

The range is wide, from the simplest oatmeal cookies and scones to sacher torte and Swedish spet caka.

The contents are divided by the origins of the recipes — New England, New Orleans, modern America, German, Ireland, France, Danish, etc. And also by their use — dessert, afternoon tea, cookie jar, lunch basket, Christmas, etc.

There's Scottish bannock and Danish ableskiver, New England ginger snaps and Virginia wafers, French babas and Mexican banuelos, and a special section of cookies made with wine.

Just browsing through the book brings to mind the fragrance of cookies in the oven. The real thing is certain, of course, to be far better. And with the holidays drawing ever nearer, this time-proven collection of tasty tidbits should be especially valuable in the kitchen.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

"FIEDLER'S FAVORITE OVERTURES" — SHOSTAKOVICH: "Festive Overture"; SULLIVAN: "Overture Di Ballo"; COPLAND: "Outdoor Overture"; GOLDMARK: "Springtime Overture" — Polydor 24-5006:

It's hard to get used to having Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops on Polydor and Boston Symphony on Deutsche Grammophon, since both are German record labels.

It's all part of the take-over of U.S. concert recording by European companies, and it certainly benefits the record connoisseur in this case, because the programming and the engineering on this LP make it the most exciting Boston Pops album I have ever heard! The music is tuneful but unhackneyed and the reproduction will pin your ears back; it is demo-disc quality.

Like most DGG recordings, the surfaces are impeccable. Let's have lots more gems like this one.

ARTHUR FIEDLER and BOSTON POPS
On a German record label now

CRUSADERS 1 — Blue Thumb BTS 6001:

Formerly known as the Jazz Crusaders, this is a tight and clean-sounding quartet augmented by electric guitars to a more rock-pop-jazz sound.

Wayne Henderson's trombone is a primary ingredient in the group's distinctive sound, and he is responsible for many of the tunes on this double-disc album which gives a thorough representation of where the group is at today. Carole King's "So Far Away" is the longest track in the album, and keyboard man Joe Sample's "Georgia Cottonfield" really moves.

The several blues-based tracks show a gutsy feeling the Crusaders always have.

MARK-ALMOND — Blue Thumb BTS-27; MARK-ALMOND II — Blue Thumb BTS-32:

These two truly quality albums feature a quartet of talents as much at home with a jazz riff as a rock run.

Jon Mark, who composes just about all the lovely music, plays classical and electric guitar, bass and percussion, and is the lead vocalist. Johnny Almond plays the various reeds, vibes, congas and does vocal harmonies.

The first album, as is usually the case, gets the highest rating of the two. Every tune is a gem, from the sensitive "The Ghetto" to the moving "Love" suite.

"Soft rock" is too demeaning a monicker for this type of music-making. It has the widest appeal, yet maintains integrity.

By the way, the second album features a "Sausalito Bay Suite," and shows the group expanded to a quintet.

GABOR SZABO: "High Contrast" — Blue Thumb BTS 28:

Guitarist Gabor Szabo is evolving his pop-jazz style into a harder-driving rock statement. This album, made last year, shows the beginnings of this change in subtle ways.

While some tunes, like Bobby Womack's "If You Don't Want My Love," are typical single-line melodic Szabo, "Just a Little Communication" boasts a James Brown-like soul beat and even some electric guitar note-stretching that owes much to Jimi Hendrix.

BARCLAY JAMES HARVEST: "Once Again" — Sire SI 4904:

I don't know a thing about this group, and there are no liner notes, but it's a thoroughly captivating musical trip into a vocal genre something like the albums that the individual members of Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young have been bringing out. The arrangements, employing at times a full symphony, are tasty and well carried out.

I enjoyed "Mocking Bird" and the lyric "Lady Loves" especially.

A Babbling Brook At Your Backdoor

THE PLAINEST backyard suddenly becomes a place of beauty with the addition of some water — a waterfall, a fountain or a fishpond. Idea man Steve Ellingson has designed a project that will give you all three at your doorstep. There's a pond four feet by 16 holding 300 gallons of water (but you can make it any size you want) that you can stock with fish, or simply decorate with water lilies. There's a fountain spraying in its center. And it is fed by a waterfall trickling over rocks. Send $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for Pattern 508 for building the waterfall-fishpond-fountain. And you are on your way. The plans include step-by-step pictures and instructions, from the digging to the final plaster coat. There are guidelines for filtering and draining the pond. And a list of tools you'll need for the project. To add to the fun and to save money, you can collect your own rocks, a few at a time. Other backyard improvements: Pattern 371, a wishing well, $1; No. 162, outdoor barbecue, $1, and No. 471, a swimming pool, $3. Ellingson also offers for $1 a booklet showing some 500 do-it-yourself projects for which he has designed patterns.

INSIDE YOUR HOME: Keep The Child's Room Simple

By CAROLYN MURRAY

Sometimes I wonder if little girls really like fussy, frilly bedrooms or if dear Mom simply projects her own daydreams on the unsuspecting little miss.

Given an alternate choice, such as a room that's easy to keep neat and one that accommodates a variety of activities, most junior misses would settle for simplicity with a touch of color.

PERHAPS THE growing unisex approach to life will filter down to the private pad level and wipe out the foolishness of a his-and-hers childhood environment. We do start pushing sexuality and male-female preferences pretty early in life, and probably cause children to choose one side or the other.

Even our dens (as in den of iniquity) are given the masculine look and we stress the "hisness" of high-back leather chairs and recliners, when in fact most of us, male and female, enjoy a really capacious chair.

So when planning a room for a pre-schooler or pre-teener, why not just decide that the main furnishings should be asexual? They should serve all the needs shared by growing children.

THE ROOM itself can easily reflect individuality. But that's done with color, personal artworks, hobby equipment and temporary interests. The things that don't change are the storage spaces.

Bookshelves, a work table or desk, clothing storage and fluctuating toy storage spaces are basics. And the solutions needn't be different for the 4-year-old than they are for the 10-year-old. In fact, furniture that adapts to a growing child's needs is the only wise investment for a young family.

The room shown on this page is geared for a particular little girl. But if you strip the accoutrements and look at the basic units of furniture, you'll see their sexlessness and practicality.

IN THIS CASE the furnishings are lacquered in poster pink, orange and green. But they also are available in white, blue and a bittersweet orange color. The chests and mini-armoire unit are scaled slightly smaller than adult, but with regrouping these components could stay in the family for many years.

The room was designed by a young family-type, Carolyn Bishop, the home furnishings editor of Family Circle magazine. She worked with Gail Morgan, interior designer, to create a 24-hour living room for a youngster.

The trundle bed was a must for the room, since Ms. Bishop says the lower portion can be pulled out for daily lounging as well as for that overnight guest. And when pulled half-out, in an island position, it makes a great junior chaise!

ALL OF THE pieces were chosen from Bassett's Rallie collection and are wisely surfaced in spill-proof white Micarta plastic. Floors are easy-wipe vinyl with just a touch of luxury in the deep shag rug.

Here's a room where a child's mind can take shape — not one that will shape the child to his parents' preconceived notions of the beautiful life.

DON'T LAY ON too much of a "his-and-hers" emphasis in decorating your child's living quarters, advises home fashions writer Carolyn Murray. Instead, go the easy, unisex way, and give the youngster a place to play, learn and mature. Girls don't necessarily need ruffles. A pleasing color scheme is far more satisfying. As an example of such a room, Miss Murray points to this one done with pieces from Bassett's Rallie Group, and a minimum of fuss and feathers. Carolyn Bishop and Gail Morgan were the designers.

Maybe we have a haughty exterior, but test our interior for prices and ideas, on draperies, carpets, etc.

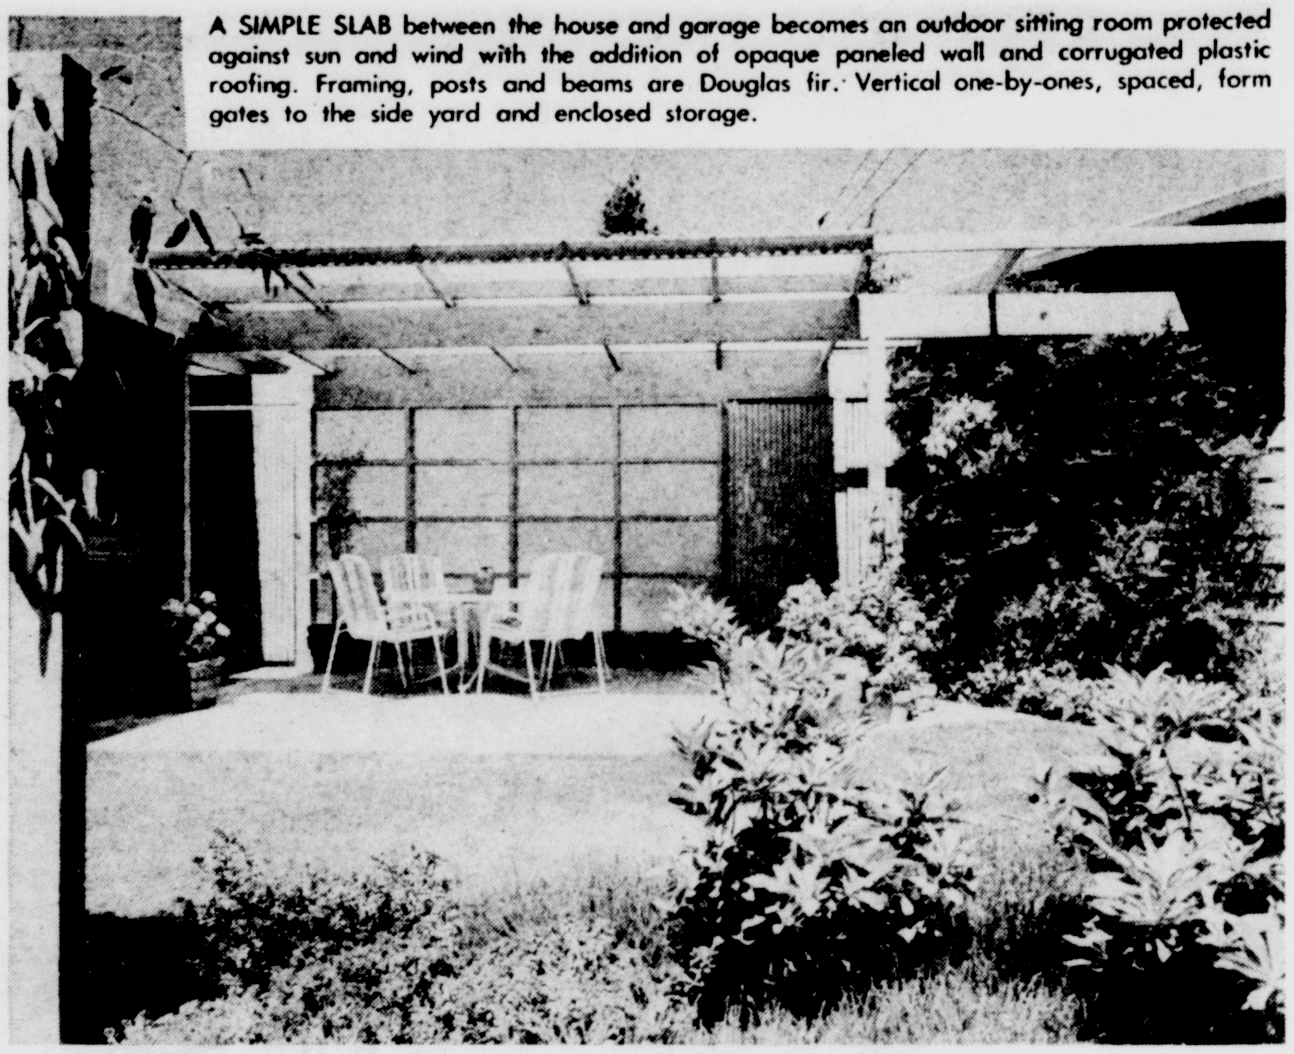
Plan The Patio To Serve As Outdoor Room



A SIMPLE SLAB between the house and garage becomes an outdoor sitting room protected against sun and wind with the addition of opaque paneled wall and corrugated plastic roofing. Framing, posts and beams are Douglas fir. Vertical one-by-ones, spaced, form gates to the side yard and enclosed storage.

Proper location for a backyard patio is a little more complicated than backing a cement mixer up near the back door and pushing the "pour" button.

Planning a new patio is just like planning a new room — The object is to get as much return as possible from the investment. To make an outdoor room pay dividends in hours of pleasant open-air lounging, dining, reading or sunning, walk over the most likely site with compass in hand to determine the exposure.

AN IDEAL angle captures morning sun for systematic tanning and healthy container gardening on deck or patio, then becomes a haven of shade on hot afternoons for cool dining or relaxing.

If the site isn't perfect, and few are, then stack the deck with environment controlling screens and sunshades to offset nature's deficiencies.

One family recently visited built its patio in the area between house and garage. Dimensions were right and location was central, accessible from all critical areas: kitchen, dining room, garden, side yard and garage.

CLOSENESS TO the two main structures lends a sheltered feeling but still the spot was subject to prevailing winds and strong sunshine.

To create needed cover, corrugated plastic roofing panels were fastened to a framework of two-by-six inch Douglas fir stringers over four-by-four inch posts on two-by-eight inch beams spanning the patio from house to garage.

The attractive wood and plastic theme set by the roof continues in a side wall facing northern exposure. Sixteen rectangular opaque panels form a neat four-row pattern in light-stained one-by-two inch fir framing.

TRANSLUCENT panels admit light but block the wind and effectively screen a neighboring yard. Clean framing lines which repeat the spacing of roofing stringers add balance and continuity to the design.

A trim gate of vertical, slightly-spaced one-by-ones on one side of the plastic-paneled center wall gives access to the side yard, and its match on the other side opens to convient storage for garden items and deck chairs.

Sun roof and screen not only make the patio a favored spot in high summer but actually seem to stretch the season to savor a few extra late autum. days of fading sunshine in its shelter. And children will happily use it right on through the winter.

CLEVERLY CONCEIVED and attractively executed fences can be as much an asset in the garden and yard as beautiful plantings. These hillside fences, made of rough-sawn, lower grades of western red cedar, turn a hard-to-handle waste area into a rare garden spot. Wood Products Industry Fund, Box 1696, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010, offers a free booklet of fence building ideas.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plants in containers require more food than those in the ground. Figure on two feedings for every one you'd give to the same plant growing in the open ground.

✓ Feed lawns lightly if it has been a month since you last did it. Water them deeply and regularly through the dry summer season.

✓ It's not too early to start sowing winter vegetables. Carrots, lettuce, radishes, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower are all candidates.

✓ The dry summer and foot traffic may have compacted the soil beneath your lawn. If so, a bit of spiking will make your watering and feeding more effective.

✓ Chrysanthemums are coming on. Select them in bloom at your nursery for October-November color.

Planning For Your Autumn Color Show

It's the mark of a wise gardener that he is always looking ahead.

He knows that the middle of spring is too late to plant spring color — so he had planned and planted accordingly. Midsummer is no time to wonder where warm season bloom is to come from — he has already assured himself of summer color by planting ahead of time.

RIGHT NOW, the conscientious gardener is looking ahead to fall for the possibilities of color which come in that wonderful season.

He is bringing along chrysanthemums and dahlias for a fall show of color. If 'mums weren't started earlier, nurseries always seem to have blooming pots of this popular flower, which can be transplanted directly into the gardem.

Dwarf dahlias and zinnias will provide plenty of color for autumn enjoyment; giant-flowering marigolds should be planted for the brilliant splashes for autumnal orange and yellow.

The wise gardener is also watering, mulching and feeding his roses to insure a good fall display of blooms and considering new varieties with colors to match the season. And, if his garden lacks them, he is shopping nurseries for shrubs and trees that will color-up when the first cold nights set in.

THE HYBRID liquidambar trees (sweet gum) offer surefire fall foliage color, and varying intensities of brilliance are to be enjoyed from the fall foliages of maidenhair (ginkgo), Chinese pistache, Japanese cherry, or tupelo (Nyssa sylvatica).

Many northern California gardeners know fall color success with Dogwoods and Mollis azaleas. Photinia, heavenly bamboo, Oregon grape and hopseed bush (dodonea) thrive throughout the state. Some members of the Viburnum family color-up beautifully.

Let your nurseryman assist you in selecting the plant materials to assure a colorful fall season in your garden. But act now. October will be too late.

One Vote For Sprayer

Spraying, we think, is better than dusting in the garden. Dusting is messy, since chemical particles spread, and it is more expensive.

The main targets are chewing and sucking insects.

Experts report Sevin and Malathion are good in combination. Sevin kills chewing insects, such as bean and striped cucumber beetles. Malathion eradicates such suckers as aphids and leaf hoppers.

Also recommended for home gardens until two weeks before harvest are Manzate and Captan.

These four chemicals are used two tablespoons each per one gallon of water.

For effective coverage, try a mixture of two insecticides plus one fungicide to get rid of most pest insects and hold down disease. Don't wait until your plants are covered with bugs.

Probably only once or twice in a lifetime will you buy a chair for Dad. So naturally you want it to be a good one - One Dad himself would pick for comfort, durability, and Value. Well, here it is. Sure to please him every time he settles into its relaxing comfort through the years.

THIS IS a noble chair! Some recliners are a wee bit skimpy for total relaxing, but not this one. The back and seat adjust perfectly to assure this total comfort. Some chairs feel pretty hard after you've been sitting for awhile, but not this chair. It's foam lavished. Yes, every point of contact is deliciously foam padded, from deeply tufted back to the 5" thick foam seat. Even the arms and footrest are comfortable foam padded. And every ounce of foam is effectively supported and permanently anchored to always stay in place without ever becoming lumpy.

Oh, this is a handsome chair, too. Dad will surely be the envy of his friends, when they see it. You shall be proud you gave it to Dad, proud of the way it looks in your home. The fabric has the appearance of fine leather, but it's really a far more practical plastic. Not ordinary plastic, mind you, but supple, luxurious vinyl that's also tough and resistant to snags. Easy to keep clean, too — just wipe soil away with a damp cloth. The colors are rich and clear.

Like we said, this is THE Recliner Dad wants. We bought enough to get the price way down, so you can buy at a clearance price. But the VALUE here is so sensational our supply won't last forever. So don't disappoint DAD — don't miss this FANTASTIC RECLINER VALUE. Make your selection now (phone your order if you can't come in).

One more thing: you can give Dad this chair without wrecking your budget. Just place it on our Revolving Charge Plan, Bank Americard or Master Charge. But do it NOW.
